Funeral services were held Saturday at 2 p. m. at the Fulton funeral home in Belmond for Henry Kruse, 99, who died last Wednesday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Anna Keller, at Fort Dodge. Burial was in the Belmond cemetery.

Mr. Kruse was born Nov. 17, 1849, and spent most of his life 3½ miles south of Goodell on a farm in Hickory Grove. His wife died many years ago and the past 10 years he had spent with his daughter in Fort Dodge.

Death occured while sitting in his rocking chair in his daughter's home. A son, William, farms the old place in Hickory Grove.

Pigs Stolen From The Wm. Janssen Farm South Of Klemme

Wm. Janssen reports that 18 pigs have disappeared from his feed lot since October 1st. On about that date Mr. Janssen counted his herd of hogs to put on feed. The other day he checked his livestock and found 18 porkers missing. They were evidently stolen from the feed lot as there was no way for them to get out. That represents quite a big loss.

Sheriff "Dutch" Brower is working on the case. A reward has been offered for information leading to the recovery of the pigs.

SNOW BOOMS FOX AND WOLF HUNTING

High fox populations, along with a comparatively large number of coyotes, plus good tracking snows, are making one of the best hunting seasons for these animals for several years. Still hunting for foxes is one of the most exciting of winter sports and will reach its peak in January and early February. Many group fox hunts are being held in various parts of the state with as many as 400 hunters participating. Trail dog enthusiansts are also giving foxes and wolves a run for their money.

INCOME TAX FOR FARMERS

TWO WAYS FOR FARMER TO FILE HIS TAX REPORT

Young Iowa farmers whose first income tax returns will be due Jan. 15 will be wise to study the two methods open for filing farm reports, says H. B. Howell, extension economist at Iowa State College.

Those who have never filed a return may choose either the "Cash Receipts and Disbursements Basis" or the "Accrual Basis." However, once a basis has been picked, the consent of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue is required to make a change, Howell explains.

Over a period of years, the accrual basis of accounting usually results in a more uniform taxable income, especially for livestock breeders, and feeders, grain farmers and fruit and vegetable growers. On dairy and poultry farms where the income is constant from year to year, the cash basis may be as satisfactory as the accrual method, according to the economist.

When the cash basis is used, farm income includes all cash or value of property received during the, year, but does not include value of products sold for which payment was not received during the taxable year.

On the accrual basis, farm income includes all income earned during the taxable year from sales made during that year regardless of when payment is received. It also includes increases of inventory values of livestock, crops, feeds, and produce at the end of the year as compared with the first of the year. Complete inventories for all farm products and supplies are required for the accrual basis, but not for the cash basis of accounting, Howell points out.

He says that another item farmers would do well to look into this year is gain from the sale of dairy, breeding and work stock. Under some conditions only 50 percent of the gain from such sales need be reported. Collectors of internal revenue should be consulted for specific cases, and each case rests on its own merit. In general three points are required. The animals must have been used as dairy, breeding or work purposes at the time of sale, must have been owned for 6 months, and the sale must have reduced the size or changed the quality of the herd, Howell says.

KLEMME YOUNG FOLKS EXCHANGE VOWS OVER THE HOLIDAYS

SURVEY INDICATES MORE PIGS IN '49

Increase Will Be 10 Percent If Farmers Follow Out December Plans

Farmers are planning to increase pork production in 1949 but their present plans fall short of the 17-percent boost asked by the government, according to the December government pig survey.

Farmers are planning now to boost the national spring pig crop by 10 percent. If they follow through on these plans, it will mean a 1949 spring pig crop of 56.5 milion head. The government had asked for a 17-percent increase that would have given a spring crop of 60 million head.

Iowa 20 Percent

Iowa farmers are planning a 20-percent boost in spring farrowings. The goal for Iowa calls for a 23-percent increase.

Fracis Kutish, Iowa State College farm economist, says this means a relatively good outlook for making corn into pork in 1949. Beef output will be down. There will be more people to eat meat.

More Fall Pigs

The December pig survey also estimated an 8 percent larger 1948 fall pig crop for the nation. Most of the hike in fall farrowing came in June and again in October and November, Kutish points out. He says the main effects in the market will probably be felt in March and April and again during the summer.

The economist advises farmers who have fall pigs to push them for an early market because the spring drop in hog prices is likely to come earlier than usual.

Kutish believes the summer high also will come earlier—probably in July and August. Indications are that the summer peak won't be as high as last year's—unless further inflation occurs, he says.

TRAPPING SEASON CLOSES JANUARY 10TH

The 1948-49 trapping season closes January 10 after what is described as one of the poorest seasons in recent years. Low populations on muskrat and mink necessitated a short season of 20 days, December 1 to Dec. 20, with 30 counties in south and southwest Iowa closed. Although prices paid for these two fur-bearers were lower than the previous year, their value was well above the ten-year average.

The 60-day state-wide trapping season from November 10 to January 10 was beow average, with the long-haired fur, including badger, skunk, opossum, spotted skunk, raccoon, weasel, red and gray fox, wolf, bringing prices below those of the 1947-48 season. The prices on beaver were also far below the $45 top of the year before.

Trappers are reminded that all fur must be sold to furbuyers on or before January 10, unless a cost-free permit to hold them longer is secured from the State Conservation Commission. Trappers are also reminded that it is necessary to secure a permit from the Commission to ship furs for sale outside of the state.

To the American Auto Industry,
Gents:

I didn't get too hot and bothered by that Washington inquiry into auto agency practices in the auto shortage. I suspect that many a man who can be loudest in his squawks against an auto dealer would, in a similar spot, be going after the last dollar, too, with gusto. The urge to make a fast buck is fairly general. Stacked right up beside the dealer who is out for all he can get I give you the customer who is not any too ethical.

For every dealer who takes your back teeth there are plenty of customers who resort to back alley negotiations, larcenous propositions and indiscriminate hocus pocus to get what they want when they want it. I have failed to run across a case where a car seeker yelled for the cops when discovering a way to get a new beach-wagon ahead of Joe Doakes. Nevertheless, the goings on in the retail auto business have not been free from bad smells. They are not good for the automobile industry. And since the industry has poured countless millions of dollars into the job of creating customer good will, I am flabbergasted that it hasn't gone all out to prevent this good will from being shot to bits

No matter whether the dealer is more to blame than the customer, or vice versa, in the routine of forgotten priorities, low trade-in allowances, bribes, tips, etc., the public is sore. Almost from the time of the first horseless carriage, good will was the top aim of the auto industry. Dealers had to be warm, genial, popular figures in the community. And back of them stood the manufacturer shooting the wad to keep everybody happy.

Then, bang!—look what happened! Due to the war and the car shortage, a situation developed which, let the blame fall where it may, changed the old time friendly dealer into a deep-freeze unit, transformed countless salesrooms into polar icepacks and made the public sore as a pup at everybody from the phone girl in the town agency to the Detroit motor mogul himself.

Sure, the dealers have had their troubles. They have been in a tough spot. But why have they chilled up on Otis P. Karbuyer so much. Why that aloofness? Why those brutally low trade-in allowances? Why must the salesmen react to a guy opening the front door as if he were the community polecat? I'm only asking.

Mister Auto Manufacturer, you can do something. The dealers are not at heart bad guys. They will repent and revert to type if made to realize from the right quarters that they have been getting into bad habits. Maybe it needs a campaign of re-education with some movie of the old fashioned auto dealer and an illustrated talk on all the things he would rather do than go cold on a customer and lose the good will of even a distant prospect. How about it?

Yours for your own best interests,

ELMER

P. S.—I remember away back when no dealer was too busy to answer the phone unless a customer first briefed his secretary on who he was, and if so why. Them was the days, boys.

General Eisenhower's book on the war is a best seller. Lots of G. I. veterans of the conflict have been yearning to know just what happened in their many battles.

The general has also contributed a recipe in a new book on cooking, proving how versatile the big brass can be. It is for vegetable soup, never, we think, to be popular in German restaurants. What intrigues us in the recipe is this, "As a final touch in spring when nasturtiums are green and tender, take a few stems, cut them into small bits, boil them separately and add the juice to the soup." Nasturtiums in the soup? Was the war fought for that, Ike?

THE FICTION CORNER

THE FIFTH OF AUGUST

By Helen Longworthy

Anna had always been a devoted housewife and mother so it came as a shock to her that her family could be so indifferent to her needs at a time when she felt they should be generous and helpful.

ANNA FARRANT read the letter three times. It didn't seem believable. Nothing, she decided, had made her so happy since the day the war ended.

But it was like Anna Farrant to fold the letter neatly and go on about the business of getting dinner for Jim, Ruth and Lillian without even so much as taking time to call one of them on the phone to tell them the good news.

It was after dinner that she told them. It came all in a happy rush of words. "Belle Mandrel has asked me to visit her. Imagine!—clear across the country."

There was a long silence. It was Ruth, the librarian, who spoke first. Ruth was as proud of her knowledge of Important People as of books. Almost reverently she breathed, "Not the Belle Mandrel —?"

Anna felt cross for an instant. Her memory of Belle Mandrel was the happy-go-lucky girl of their college days. Ruth was thinking of the Belle Mandrel who was an important adviser to the politicians and who last week visited the king of England

"Fuss and feathers," said Anna lightly, "I'm not afraid of Belle Mandrel. In fact I think I'll—." The words hung in the air.

"Of course you'll go," Jim finished heartily. "The girls and I will manage. Do you good!" He gave her a beaming smile that after twenty-five years still gave Anna a thrill.

"Think of all you'll have to talk about, too." Lillian chimed in. It was like Lillian, the teacher to think of that! Anna knew that Lillian's fifth graders would be told the big news early tomorrow.

"When is the great day?" Jim asked.

"The fifth of August," Anna answered almost like a pronouncement. It had been easier than she had hoped. They were the finest family ever to be in favor of her going on that long trip.

In the days that followed Anna was to retell her plans for the trip dozens of times. Everyone was interested to find that she was a friend of the great Belle Mandrel. There was a short write-up in the newspaper about Anna's trip.

Lillian worried over what she would do without a big supply of the satin slips her mother made for her. In her competent way Anna told her that she would make an extra supply before she left. Fussing over the satin, she knew she could have told Lillian to buy her slips at the store but Lillian had been babied too long, Anna told herself with a happy smile.

Very shortly Ruth, knowing she would be cook while her mother was away, fretted that she would be left with lots of canning. Anna assured her she would get it in before she left. The house, of course, must be spotless.

It was in one of the few breathing spells Anna allowed herself that she rummaged around in her clothes closet and decided that scarcely any of her clothes were suitable for the fifth of August They were fine for small town church societies but Anna wanted to look nice when she started on the trip. The family would want her to look well too. She wondered if one of the girls—or Jim would slip her a nice check and suggest she buy a new outfit. It was going to be fun!

There came the momentous day that Jim placed a very business-like envelope on her plate at dinner. Anna opened it, expecting the check for her clothes. Instead it was her train ticket and sleeping car reservation. Jim gave a hearty laugh, "Just wanted you to be sure you could go," he told her, well pleased with himself.

Anna opened her mouth to say she had known all along a ticket was required unless she walked, but how about some money? Then she decided to wait. The family would like to think it surprised her. At least it was comforting to know they were well able to provide for her.

From then on every place they went Jim had her take the long ticket from her purse and show it off. Anna's smile began to wear thin at the corners as the family forgot the check in their pride of her ticket.

Coming home from a movie around the first of July Anna made a big effort to have Jim see a new dress she had noticed in the Bon Ton store window. There were two but Anna much preferred the one with the white collar. Always she had pointed out her wants to Jim and he would say, "Go get it." But tonight Jim seemed too tired to even glance at the store window. Anna was quiet for a block, waiting for Jim to say, "O. K. Pick it up tomorrow."

INSTEAD Jim began talking about a week-end fishing trip planned for mid-August. Anna almost gave up hope.

On the fifth of July she spread out material on the kitchen table and began pinning a pattern on it. She had always hated making dresses for herself and would not have attempted this time if her family had been—cooperative. In an hour Anna was crying softly to herself. The dress was going to be unsatisfactory, and besides what of a coat, hat, shoes and all those extra things?

Remembering the many times she had outfitted them all to the last detail, Anna could have shook them, separately or together. She would not actually ask for money if she traveled in a burlap sack, she told herself.

It would happen that it was the very next day that both Lillian and Ruth "checked up" on her to see if the canning was done and the fussy slips all made.

"Everything's ready—but me!" Anna told them pointedly.

"Oh, you'll make it," Lillian assured her, comfortably.

Anna wasn't sure that she wanted to. She wished for an excuse to stay at home. There were times when she admitted to a few doubts on whether she had the most thoughtful family, ever.

The day that Anna began hauling old suitcases from the attic Jim came home early. Anna was looking at the suitcases with disgust. They were relics.

"Kind of old, aren't they?" Jim asked her.

"They were old in 1900." Anna told him. She waited expectantly for Jim to say, "Here, take this, get yourself a couple of good bags." But Jim sat down to his newspaper. Neither did the girls make any comment when the saw the ancient suitcases.

Anna was desperate. From her jewel box she removed the broach her mother had left her years previous and hurried to the jewelry store. Her thoughts were bitter. That she should be forced to pawn her treasured broach to provide just ordinary clothing for her trip! She wondered if old maids really deserved pity after all.

The jeweler was an old friend and looked at her in wonderment when she asked to sell the broach. He stalled around and finally offered her ten dollars. Silently Anna put the pin back in her purse. Her last hope was gone.

Lillian was opening a jewel case to display a pair of earrings. "To match your good broach," she explained.

"It's something like the earrings Lillian bought here last week," the jeweler told her.

Anna never knew what she answered. So Lillian was decking herself out like a—a totem pole and meanwhile letting her mother go next to ragged on her trip! The fact that she had not shown the earrings at home proved that she was ashamed of her own greed.

It was evening, at last, the family sat relaxed and contented after one of Anna's usual good meals. Relaxed, all but Anna.

"I don't know how we will manage without you," Jim said from the davenport.

"And only a week until the fifth of August," Ruth chimed in.

Anna was silent. Her mind had been scurrying, trying to think of an excuse not to go. She wondered if she should plead a sudden sick spell. The family's thoughtlessness was sufficient cause for a sick spell.

Lillian went to the hall and came back with a loud thumping noise. There was a moment of silence and then the three shouted almost in unison, "Surprise!" Anna turned in her chair slowly.

Suitcases, the newest kind, were in Lillian's hands. "Open them," Lillian said gleefully. The two suitcases were carefully packed; full of new dresses, long housecoats, satin slips, filmy underwear. Anna even saw three pairs of new shoes wrapped in towels. She gasped and looked at the label of the top-most dress. It was too much to expect that the things would fit.

"Oh, they'll fit," Ruth told her proudly. "We certainly checked and rechecked." She unfolded one dress and Anna saw it was the companion dress to the one she had forced Jim to view. Trust Jim to remember the wrong one!

Anna was stunned. She tried to say, "You were wonderful," but the words stuck. Lillian was opening a jewel case to display a pair of earrings. "To match your good broach," she explained.

That brought a tear to Anna's eyes. They had tried to help. They had been thoughtful, in their way. The anxiety they had caused her they would never know.

Ruth was proudly showing her the fussy silk underwear that Anna didn't like. Jim was beaming all over the place.

Anna still couldn't find words.

"We thought we would save you time," Ruth told her.

Lillian felt playful and teased, "Why you wouldn't even have thought of your clothes until August fifth!"

The Gleaner

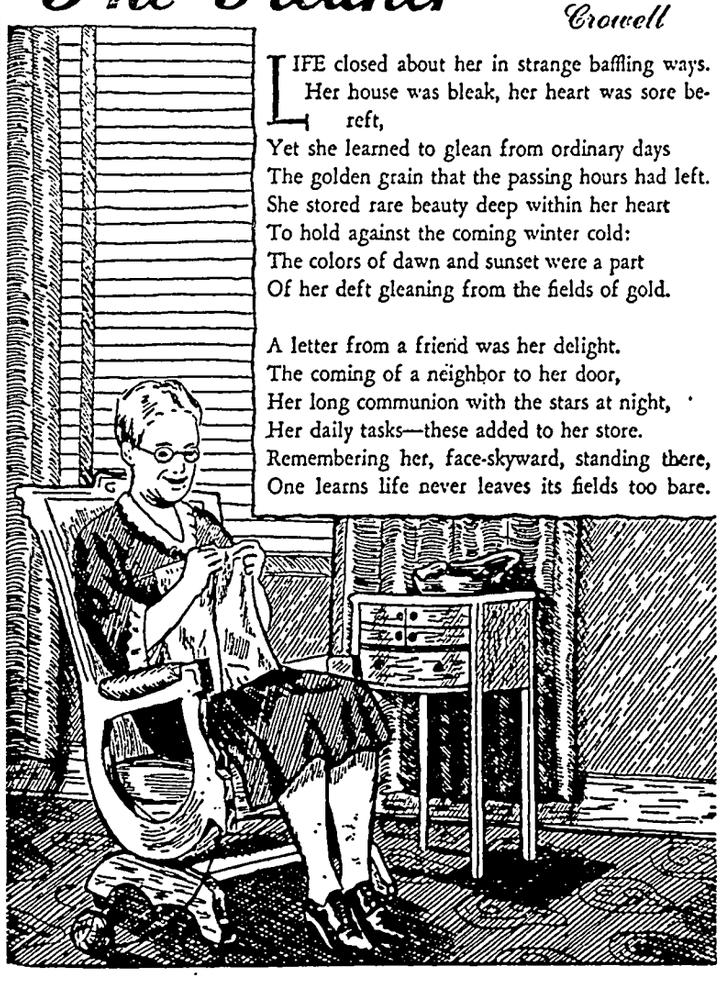
Grace Noll Crowell



LIFE closed about her in strange baffling ways.
Her house was bleak, her heart was sore bereft,
Yet she learned to glean from ordinary days
The golden grain that the passing hours had left.
She stored rare beauty deep within her heart
To hold against the coming winter cold:
The colors of dawn and sunset were a part
Of her deft gleaning from the fields of gold.

A letter from a friend was her delight.
The coming of a neighbor to her door,
Her long communion with the stars at night,
Her daily tasks—these added to her store.
Remembering her, face-skyward, standing there,
One learns life never leaves its fields too bare.

FIRST AID to the AILING HOUSE

by Roger C. Whitman

QUESTION: I have taken all the paint off a wicker set down to its natural color. Now I would like to know what I can put on it to preserve it, as it is very dry. Should I varnish it or leave it as it is?

ANSWER: If you have used a commercial paint remover to clean off the old finish, you should go over the surfaces with turpentine in order to take off every trace of the remover; otherwise your new finish will fail. If you like the color, you can finish the pieces with spar or quick-drying varnish. This should protect the furniture, especially if it is to be exposed to sunlight. Otherwise you can use clear lacquer, which would give a lighter finish.

QUESTION: My living room is finished in natural wormy chestnut that has been waxed. How can I clean it?

ANSWER: There are many good cleaning preparations on general sale which should serve your purpose. An alternative would be to clean off the soiled wax with a liquid wax that is meant just for cleaning waxed surfaces. Still another method would be to go over the woodwork with a cloth dampened with turpentine, then apply a thin coat of paste wax, and when dry polish thoroughly.

TAX COLLECTION
To Start Late

Hancock County taxes can't be paid until March "at the earliest" as a result of the rulings on the soldiers bonus.

Treasurer Roy L. McMillin, Auditor Maynard Schoneman made the statement Tuesday following a meeting to discuss the "tax muddle."

Usually the tax lists are made up by Dec. 31, and taxpayers start paying any time after the first of the year.

CHANGE NEEDED

Those normal tax lists are completed, but now there are complications.

The attorney general has ruled that the soldiers bonus tax of 1.95 mills must be added to the 1949 tax levy. This could not be done legally until a canvass of the Nov. 2 election proved the bonus measure had passed.

LAND CREDIT

Last week, to add another problem, the Iowa supreme court ruled the tax credit on agricultural lands is constitutional reversing its former stand.

That decision cannot become final until January 14, the last day for filing a petition for rehearing.

No action can be taken in Posting these credits on the tax lists until the ruling has become final.

Signed

Roy L. McMillin
County Treasurer

Maynard Schoneman
County Auditor

Old Game and the New

THE football that used to be—
—and the football that is today
—are two entirely different games.

If you don't mind, we'll take you back a bit—just a few years. I spent most of one recent week-end with my old friend Pudge Heffelfinger, who is still Mr. Football.

Pudge was a mighty football player at Yale from 1889 to 1891. He was just as good aroun' 1915 when he was in his 40s. He played for 54 minutes against a crack pro team when he was 53. He was still playing at 65 against another leading pro team in Minneapolis. Pudge suffered a bad knee at 65 and couldn't understand it.

Grantland Rice

Heffelfinger can't understand why a football player can't go 60 minutes at least twice a week. "What are these young fellows made of today?" Heffelfinger asks.

Pudge is now 81 years old. He only weighs 270 pounds, and he still moves around like a lightweight. He has hands like two sets of hams. Bud Kelland says Pudge is a throwback to the dinosaurs.

Now I'll take you to another case—to another friend of mine. His name is Shep Homans of Englewood, N. J. Shep Homans was Snake Ames' substitute at Princeton around 1889. "I never got in a game that year," Shep tells me.

Homans was Princeton's fullback in 1890 and 1891. Homans weighed 167 pounds. He played 70 minutes in 22 consecutive games. His substitute never got to play.

"Sure I was hurt," Shep told me long afterwards. "But you don't quit a game because you happen to get hurt.

"If you don't mind, you might also mention that Snake Ames was a greater all-around athlete than Glen Davis or any other college athlete. Snake was the greatest college player I ever saw. He was also the greatest college baseball player I ever saw. He held three big league teams to less than five hits and beat them all. He was also a great golfer. I've paid to find that out."

Either the football players of 40 and 50 years ago were much tougher and rougher and had more fiber than the present bunch—or the game today is far rougher than it used to be.

Walter Eckersall was a good friend of mine. Weighing 148 pounds, Eckie could travel 60 minutes without taking an extra breath. He carried the ball—he did all the kicking—he blocked and tackled and passed—and he finished fresh.

Maybe the game today is too rough. Either the football players are much too soft—or the game is much too rough.

At the finish of this season many of the best backs in the country including Doak Walker of SMU, Stuart and Stephenson of Army and many others were too badly hurt to be of any use.

Sitko and Brennan of Notre Dame were both out of action. So was Charley Justice with a bad shoulder, according to Carl Snavely, in the William and Mary game. Most of the good backs were hurt and out of action, or useless in action, a good part of the year.

The game today is far rougher than it used to be. The old game was mass pushing and shoving. The modern game is a matter of collision at top speed. The equipment is atrocious, something the coaches should have corrected years ago. They admit their fault now, a little late.

Stamina and Speed

When you measure the old against the new, you run into deep trouble.

In the matter of timing and inches, in the way of measurements, the years prove that the modern stars outclass most of those who belong to the past. They run faster—or at least just as fast. They jump higher or further. They keep breaking records.

Wherever you can use the stop watch or the measuring tape, the new years bring you new champions. But you can't measure baseball and football. You can't measure the days when Walsh and Johnson and Mathewson and Alexander pitched over 400 innings a season—against the stars of today who pitch from 280 to 300 innings.

As we check back we find the old-timers lead in stamina and fortitude—the new stars lead in speed and quick records.

It may be that since the invention of the automobile, no one ever walks anymore and leg power is a missing factor.

Something has happened to stamina. We have pretty fair runners from 100 to the 800 meters. Not much after that.

MIRROR of your MIND
We're All Born Happy
By Lawrence Gould

Is anyone born with a good disposition?

Answer: Practically everyone is, and most people would retain it always if they were not "soured" by unwise or unkind treatment in their earliest years. Even though he may have little fits of temper, there's no sweeter disposition than that of a mentally and physically healthy baby, and if he grows up into a tyrant or a grouch, it is because he has been made to feel that the world is against him, and that there's no way of getting what he wants except by fighting for it or by bossing others so that they will have to give it to him.

Can a guilty conscience make you overwork?

Answer: Yes. The person who "just can't stop working" is defending himself against feelings of insecurity which are often based on the neurotic idea that he does not deserve to enjoy life and its normal pleasures and can only earn the right to live at all by driving himself to exhaustion. The more tiring and unpleasant his work is, the more secret relief he finds in it. With a woman, unconscious guilt feelings can become associated with dirt or disorder and make her a slave to trivial and unnecessary housework.

Are all "allergies" mental in origin?

Answer: No, writes Dr. Harold A. Abramson in The Nervous Child. People with allergic symptoms like migrane headaches or asthma seem to be of three types: those whom tests show to be physically over-sensitive to substances—like eggs—which have no effect on others; those in whom no signs whatever of this type of allergy can be found; and a third group whose symptoms do have a physical basis but are more severe than this accounts for. Members of the second and third groups should have psychological as well as medical care.

Tonsils Play an Important Role
By Dr. James W. Barton

WHILE it is known that sore throat and infected tonsils are the most frequent cause of rheumatic fever and rheumatic fever is the most frequent cause of heart disease, a warning note now comes from various sources that too many healthy tonsils are being removed simply because they are large.

What many do not know or fail to remember is that the tonsils are useful organs and should not be removed. The tonsils were placed in the throat for the definite purpose of filtering poisons or harmful organisms from the blood, and if they are removed while they are still healthy the body loses just that much protection against harmful organisms.

In general, the tonsils help to protect children during attacks by the various diseases of childhood and give this protection until the danger of these diseases has passed; so that after the age of 16, the tonsils usually disappear.

Even if they remain after this age, they are not considered dangerous unless the individual has a sore throat from time to time. Even if organisms are found, if their number is not large and no pus is present it usually is unnecessary to take out the tonsils.

One of the mistakes sometimes made is to remove tonsils in young children because they are enlarged by poison from the first teeth, whereas the tonsils should be left in the throat until infected teeth are removed or infection from sinuses removed.

However, where the tonsils definitely are infected and pouring pus into the blood instead of filtering poisons out of it, they should be removed just as a plugged filter on a water tap is removed once it fails to filter the water and actually poisons it from wastes within it.

The point, then, is that tonsils (unlike the appendix) still have a definite use in the body—namely, the filtering out of poisons from the blood—and should not be removed if healthy, even if large.

★ HEALTH NOTES ★

Infection at the roots of the teeth and the gums first can infect the tonsils which, in turn, infect the blood which carries the poisons to joints and muscles, causing rheumatism and arthritis.

Many doctors are firmly convinced that the feet are as important as the head in earning a living and enjoying life.

Epilepsy is not the hopeless disease of former years because the majority of patients now can be kept free or almost free of attacks.

Investigations show that 100 plus the age may be a fair index of normal blood pressure.

Keeping the feet healthy is a good investment of time and money.

Welcome, New Year

WELCOME to you, New Year, enter newborn king—
Can you tell us something of the tidings that you bring?
Do you carry happiness,
Enough to last the year?
Do you sing a song of joy
To cast out doubt and fear?
Perhaps a balm for heartaches
You bring along with you;
Perhaps a key to friendships
To buoy us all year through.
We bid you welcome, New Year—our dreams we trust with you,
Forgetting ills of all the past, we start the book anew.

Strange New Year Beliefs Still Exist

Over England and Scotland, in the villages of the plains and highlands, ancient New Year superstitions still exist.

It is considered unlucky to wear old clothes on the New Year; bad luck falls on a house if anyone goes out before someone has entered. If the first comer—"first foot," the natives call it—be a man, good luck will bless the house; if a woman or a fair-haired man, the luck is evil. So widespread is this belief that in many villages the dark-haired men of the community make it a regular business to go from house to house to "take the New Year in."

In Herefordshire, at midnight, the girls rush to the spring. The one who gets the first drink, or the "cream of the well," is sure of a handsome husband.

Unlucky, too, is the good woman who gives away a light on New Year's day Where a brand goes out, the evil fays come in. The most tender-hearted woman will see her neighbors shiver in a fireless house rather than give away a light on the New Year.

At midnight on New Year's Eve, custom demands that gentlemen kiss the nearest lady. Here's a fine example of army-navy cooperation.

Pins Once Prized As New Year Gift

Bishop Hall's "Satires," published in 1598, tell how every tenant at the dawn of the New Year presented his lord with a fat capon; and Ben Jonson, in his "Christmas Masque" introduces among his cast of characters "New Year's gift in a blue coat, serving man like, with an orange and a sprig of rosemary on his head."

Oranges and nutmeg, gilded and decorated apples, were frequent gifts exchanged among the poorer people. Ladies of fashion delighted in pins, invented during the Sixteenth century to take the place of clumsy wooden skewers. Here we have the origin of our own "pin money"—a gift of money given in place of pins.

Saint Sylvester's Feast Day Marks End of Year

The feast of St. Sylvester, who was Pope from 314 A. D. until his death in 335, is observed by the Roman and Anglican churches on December 31.

In Germany and Belgium the morning of St. Sylvester's Day is commemorated religiously, while the afternoon and evening are devoted to various kinds of horseplay in anticipation of the coming New Year.

Facts and Fancies Of New Year's Day

New Year's with its open houses, parties, exchanging of New Year's cards, horn tooting, Auld Lang Syne and New Year's resolutions, is one of the oldest celebrations. As a holiday it has been observed since ancient times, and has been marked throughout history by the giving of gifts and the exchange of greetings and good wishes.

In Remembrance

Lesson for January 9, 1949.

JESUS OF NAZARETH was the Unforgettable Man. All our information about him as he lived in Galilee comes from four small booklets known as the Gospels. There was a little more about him in the letters of Paul, and a few additional sayings of his have been preserved in papyrus fragments in Egypt. But the main source of our historical knowledge of Jesus is in these four Gospels. All put together they do not make a big book; but any one of them by itself is a great book.

Dr. Foreman

Who Remembered Him?

IT BOTHERS some people to discover what scholars have always known, that our Gospels as we have them are based on earlier writings and spoken traditions. But this gives us an even better reason for trusting the reliability of these records. They were not made up for the first time a generation or more after Jesus' resurrection. They go back to the lifetime of thousands who personally knew Jesus.

The farther back scholars can trace the origins of the Gospels, the more historically reliable they are proved to be. Some of the information worked into our Gospels came from personal reminiscences; this is the case with large parts of Matthew and John. In the case of Mark, the early story in the church was that as a young companion of Peter on missionary journeys, Mark jotted down the stories which Peter told about Jesus.

At any rate the Gospel of Mark contains just the sort of things that a man like Peter would be likely to remember. Luke himself, a missionary doctor and great friend of Paul, never knew Jesus personally, but lived for two years in Palestine and gathered the materials for his Gospel while there were still hundreds of people there who remembered Jesus well.

What They Remembered

JOHN tells us that it would be impossible to write down all that was then known of Jesus' life. Out of the 400 days (at least) during which Jesus' public ministry lasted, not over 40 are recorded, even in part.

Yet what these men did recall and record is enough to reveal a matchless Person. A fifth Gospel might enlarge our knowledge of Jesus; but it would not greatly change it. Jesus never wrote a book, not even a letter so far as we know; yet such words of his as were remembered have influenced the world.

Jesus' entire public ministry lasted a shorter time than it takes to go through college; yet what he did has had a deeper effect on the world than the work of any university graduate in history. Jesus started no corporation, no formal organization; yet out of his fellowship have grown the greatest institutions in the world.

Why They Remembered

THE STORY of Jesus was remembered and recorded by his followers partly because they could not help it. They could not forget him and did not want to forget him. One thing is true of all those who lovingly cherished these memories of the Master: they loved and adored him.

No unbeliever ever wrote a Gospel. Pilate wrote no life of Christ. Even if Judas had lived, he could not have written one. Our Gospels were written by men of faith, for the purpose of calling out faith in others. "These things were written that ye may believe that Jesus is the Son of God" (John 20: 31).

In one sense of the word we could write a better Gospel now, for today 19 centuries of Christian experience are behind us, and those centuries are full of the doings of Christ through his church. The four Gospels tell us of what Jesus did in Galilee. But now we can tell the story of what Christ has done in Africa and Greenland and Australia and America. Reading the Gospels is interesting, it is important; but the reading has not hit the bull's-eye if it leave you, the reader, merely better informed than you were.

W. Henry Galbreth, director of publications of the Iowa State Education Association, and former superintendent of the Klemme Schools, will be the guest speaker at an all-county meeting of teachers and school administrators at the Garner High School auditorium, on Thursday evening, January 20th. His subject will be "Legislation for Education in 1949."

Mr. Galbreth, who is also the editor of Midland Schools, the ISEA's official journal, has been a member of the association's staff since 1941. Previous to that time he served for 5 years as superintendent of schools in Klemme.

The meeting will start at eight o'clock. Local arrangements are being made by Ronald Smith, Garner high school instructor and president of the Hancock County council of education.

YOUNG KLEMME MAN GOES INTO BUSINESS AT WESLEY

Alvin G. "Red" Bachman, of Klemme, has recently constructed a 40 x 80 building at Wesley which he will use as a sales pavilion. The building is modern in every respect and complete with scales, pens, sale ring and office for conducting livestock sales.

Mr. Bachman hopes to get everything in readiness in time to hold his first sale in the new pavilion next week, Tuesday.

Mr. Bachman is farming west of Klemme and will continue his farming operations along with running his new business at Wesley.

Legion And Auxiliary Held Meeting And Social Hour

The Klemme American Legion and Auxiliary Unit held their regular meeting at the hall on January 4th, with Mrs. J. C. Thomas presiding at the Auxiliary meeting.

The Auxiliary members were urged to attend the Spring Conference at Des Moines on Feb. 27-28. The committees gave their several reports including a report on gifts sent to the boys in the service; candy sent the the hospital at Knoxville and gifts for the Gift Shelf at the Veterans Hospital at Des Moines. The Auxiliary also sends money for the support of an assigned child.

FORTY-TWO ENLISTED IN SERVICES FROM HANCOCK COUNTY LAST YEAR

The Mason City recruiting office reports that 42 Hancock County men enlisted in the Army Ground Forces and Air Forces the past year.

The average age of 528 who enlisted at Mason City was 22 years and 82 per cent were high school graduates. 234 men picked overseas assignments and 294 chose stateside assignments.

SOME HAWKEYE SOBEAN SEED IS STILL FOR SALE

There is a surplus of Hawkeye soybean seed in a few Iowa counties and certain areas of Indiana and Illinois, according to Joe L. Robinson, secretary, Iowa Experiment Association.

This seed may be obtained from the county distribution committee by contacting the county extension director. Price for the Iowa-grown certified seed is $4.22 per bushel. Prices for Indiana and Illinois seed will be slightly higher because of freight charges to bring the seed into Iowa.

Seed from Indiana and Ill. is available to Iowa farmers through a regional agreement between the states. The county distribution committee through the county extension director must handle the arrangements for seed to be shipped from producers in Indiana and Illinois.

This seed is to be used only by the grower who obtains it and is not for resale, according to Robinson.

Farmers desiring Hawkeye seed should contact their county extension director rather than pay excessive prices for seed from outside sources, he says.

IF NOT CHECKED CATTLE GRUBS TAKES HEAVY TOLL

The Iowa cattle feeder who loses $1 per 100 pounds when he sells grubby cattle is seeing only a small part of his total loss from cattle grubs, according to Harold Gunderson, extension entomologist at Iowa State College.

Grubs take their toll throughout their entire life history. They produce irritation and fever when they migrate through the muscles. Irritation and inefficient gains are the result once grubs reach the backs of cattle.

Gunderson cites tests conducted with various packers in Iowa where treated cattle have gained an average of ¼ pound more per day than similar untreated cattle on the same feed. As the grub season lasts about 60 days, a feeder who treats obtains 15 pounds more beef per animal than the fellow who doesn't control grubs.

Gunderson recommends rotenone dust or spray for treating.

WILL COUNT GAME BIRDS

NATIONAL DUCK CENSUS JANUARY 11-14

The annual check-up of waterfowl populations in the U. S. is being made January 11, 12, 13, and 14, under the direction of the Fish and Wildlife Service of the U. S. Department of the Interior by state and federal game officials and by other specially instructed volunteer observers. The census is not an attempt to count the ducks, but rather a numerical estimate in round numbers of waterfowl populations.

The technique of estimating waterfowl is rather involved. For instance, in counting rafts of ducks in open water, the area covered by birds is estimated in square yards, with an allowance of one duck per square yard, and a third subtracted for open water space within the formation. The method has been carefully checked with aerial photographs made with mapping cameras and found to be surprisingly accurate.

It is believed the census will reveal more ducks wintering in Iowa this year than any time during the past decade.

HELLO, FOLKS!

SHAMROCKS TO MEET GARNER

SHAMROCKS HAVE AN EASY VICTORY OVER THORNTON HIGH FRIDAY EVE.

The Klemme Shamrocks hung up another victory here Friday evening when they easily won over Thornton 48-26. The Shamrocks had a half-time lead of 27-14. "Red" Schmidt had a big night as he piled up 23 counters to lead the Shamrock attack, while Alexander, for the losers, played a nice game and rang the bell for 10 points.

The Thornton Junior High went home with the bacon when they defeated the Little Shamrocks 30-23.

Lake Panthers Here Tuesday

The next home game will be January 18th, next week Tuesday when the Crystal Lake Panthers will play the Shamrocks. Friday night, January 14th the Shamrocks go to Garner to meet the Cardinals. This should be a good game.

IT PAYS FARMERS TO KEEP RECORDS

They Help To Locate Strong And Weak Spots In Way Farm Is Handled

Know which way your farm business is going and where to make improvements to keep it headed in the right direction, says H. B. Howell, extension economist at Iowa State College.

He thinks the surest way to keep farming on the right track is to use a record book. Not only does it provide a basis for figuring out ways to do more profitable farming, but an account book affords a means of filing tax returns, and fire or damage claims. A record of actual expenditures may save you farm paying for an item twice, and a record book can serve as a financial credit statement.

Need Inventory

Farm business can be improved through use of a record book. A records shows where money is spent and the source of income. You can relate income and expense, and plan for better business practices in the future.

Howell says that every farmer ought to keep a record of inventory costs and depreciation costs on buildings and fences, fertilizer costs, and an annual feed and livestock inventory along with all expenses and receipts.

There are several methods of keeping records. One is to keep a small notebook, make entries as you go along and total up periodically. Another method is to record every expenditure and payment by posting checks and deposit slips. However, with this method, you may miss small items.

Keep Up To Date

Howell highly recommends having the record book "served" following the noon or evening meal. That way you can keep entries up to date and know how your business is doing at all times.

The shoe-box or spindle method may be effective in some instances, but some receipts or records become lost and the records seldom can be brought up to date without a lot of work.

To help keep farm accounts, Howell has designed a record book that can be obtained at cost through county extension directors. Howell believes that many of the difficulties and pitfalls of farm record-keeping can be avoided through the use of the book.

Officials has given this termination serious consideration since their disastrous fire on Dec. 15, Mr. Jennings stated, "however, due to the numerous difficulties in obtaining suitable quarters, merchandise and equipment, they decided not to reopen the Implement Department in Klemme."

Mr. Jennings has accepted a position as Manager of the Companys Implement Department at Estherville and took over his new duties on January 3rd.

Mr. Jennings family will move to Estherville as soon as suitable living quarters can be obtained.

CITY DUMPS HARBOR RATS

Ever walk or drive by the city dump and notice the healthy rat population out there?

Paul Henderson called attention to a pertinent statement by Iowa State College entomologists the other day. They say that city dumps can be the greatest rat-breeding place in a city or a county.

Henderson said that Hancock County can't afford to maintain such a rat infested place within its limits and suggested the towns volunteer to help clean up the dumps, pre-bait and poison the existing rat population.

In asking for this clean up of rats, Henderson pointed out that the city dump is too large a place to be cleaned without the concentrated effort of the town involved. Everyone in the community stands to benefit by the gesture, he says.

HANCOCK COUNTY MUST RAISE $5,000 TO FIGHT PARALYSIS IN 1949

NEED TWICE AS MUCH AS IN PAST YEAR

March Of Dimes Should Be March Of Dollars

In view of the epidemic proportions of Infantile Paralysis and the tremendous expenses incurred fighting the disease during 1948 Hancock County residents are urged to double their contributions to the 1949 March of Dimes Campaign.

Mr. Roy McMillin, the County Chairman issued the appeal this week in conjunction with the 1949 March of Dimes campaign which begins Friday.

Hancock County residents contributed $2,858.84 to the March of Dimes last year averaging a gift of only .1856 by every person in the county.

"To pay the debts incurred last year and provide a reserve of funds for treatment of the disease during the coming year we must double last years contribution," McMillin said. Everyone should back the March of Dimes because Polio is the respector of no one," the chair man added.

The March of Dimes campaign begins Friday, January 14th and will be concluded January 31st Funds contributed go toward the payment of expenses for actual polio cases in the county as well as for an extensive research program.

NEW CROP SEED AVAILABLE TO COUNTY GROWERS

Seed of 3 new and improved forage crops is now available to Hancock County growers for increasing seed supplies, Paul Henderson, county extension director, announced this week.

He has received information from J. L. Robinson, agronomist at Iowa State College in charge of crop development work, that seed of Emerson red clover, Ioreed Canarygrass and Iowa 6 lespedeza is now available for further increase purposes. Robinson points out that the supply of seed is small and only a few individual farmers in the state can be supplied.

Iowa 6 lespedeza looks very promising for farmers in southern Iowa, according to Robinson. It is sufficiently early in maturity to successfully reseed itself in the area south of the line extending along the southern edge of Monona, Carroll, Story, Tama, and Jackson counties.

Not less than 60 pounds or more than 200 pounds of the lespedeza will be made available to one individual or concern. The price is 40 cents per pound F. O. B. at Ames.

Emerson red clover will be made available in amount no less than 40 pounds or more than 80 pounds per grower. The price is $1.00 per pound F. O. B. at Ames.

Ioreed is a new variety of canarygrass that looks very promising, according to Robinson. Not less than 10 pounds or more than 40 pounds will be supplied to each grower. The price is $1.25 per pound.

Henderson points out that growers must agree to grow the crop for seed and meet certification requirements. Hancock County farmers interested in obtaining seed should either contact the county extension director or write to J. L. Robinson, Iowa State College, Ames.

WALTER BUTTON GOES HUNTING

By JOHN SHARDA

Walter wasn't the hunting type but, encouraged by his wife, he decided to try his luck. He thought he cut quite a fetching figure in the togs he rigged up, but unfortunately, he learned that a man needs more than appearance to bag some game.

EMMA BUTTON laid aside the sweater she was knitting and cleared her throat. Her husband, Walter, instantly snapped to attention. His lean frame had been comfortably sprawled in his favorite chair, but now he was sitting up straight.

"We could save a lot of money on our meat bill," began Emma, "if you'd get out and do some hunting." Walter remained silent. He was accustomed to being mildly startled by his wife's remarks.

"Zeke Smith goes hunting nearly every Saturday," she continued. "And he always comes home with two or three rabbits. Sadie says they save a right smart amount each week."

Walter thought it was time he said something. "I've never done any hunting, Emma. Zeke's been doing it all his life."

"Humph!" Emma snorted. You can learn, can't you? And there's a perfectly good shotgun rusting away up in the attic because nobody uses it." She was referring to a weapon of questionable age and condition that Walter had been given by his grandfather.

"But I'd have to buy a hunting license," remonstrated Walter, weakly.

"But I'd have to buy a hunting license," remonstrated Walter, weakly. He saw his line of defense being methodically torn down by his wife.

Emma regarded him deliberately. "One little cotton-tail rabbit would more than pay for a license."

Walter surrendered. He might as well make the best of it now.

"Yes, that's true," he agreed. "And the exercise might do me good."

"Of course it would, dear," Emma beamed. As usual she had emerged the victor. "Today's Thursday, why don't you go Saturday?" she queried. Emma was not one to put things off once she had made up her mind.

"That's awfully soon," said Walter, even though he knew it wouldn't do much good to stall. "I'll have to give the gun a thorough cleaning and buy some shells."

Emma glared at him. "You can think of more silly excuses," she scoffed. "Now let's hear no more about it. Come Saturday, (here she paused significantly) you're going hunting!" With these parting words she bundled up her knitting and stalked haughtily out of the room.

As Walter heard her heavy footsteps echoing up the stairs he addressed himself to the empty room. "Well, that's that." He, too, went upstairs to find solace in a good night's sleep.

The next day, after work, Walter went up to explore the attic. He found the shotgun standing in a well-cobwebbed corner. It was covered with a thick coat of dust, and in spots it had begun to rust. Walter shook his head sadly. Nevertheless, he carried it downstairs and set to work. Emma nodded approval.

When he had finished, Walter could not help being a little proud of his efforts. The gun gleamed from the tip of the barrel to the end of the stock.

In spite of himself, Walter began to feel somewhat excited. This was his first hunting trip and he intended to make it a successful one.

On his way home from the office that afternoon he had stopped in at the hardware store to get some shells. The proprietor had been most helpful, Walter thought. Not only had he advised him concerning the proper type of ammunition, but he had recommended a particular corn field where, according to him, the rabbits were incredibly plentiful.

Later that evening, Walter surveyed himself in front of the full-length mirror in the hall. He had donned some khaki trousers which he had bought a year ago at a war surplus store but had never worn. A green jacket and red cap completed his costume. He practiced aiming the gun at imaginary targets, glancing out of the corner of his eye to see the handsome reflection he made in the mirror. Not bad at all, he thought.

Emma caught sight of him through the open doorway as he was preening himself. "My, my," she intoned sarcastically, "aren't you the sportsman, though." Her husband hung his head in silence. A fiery blotch of red appeared at his neck and rose rapidly upward until it covered his countenance. He attempted to beat a hasty retreat, but Emma wasn't finished.

"If I were you, Walter Button, I'd wait until I brought home some big game before I started play-actin' in front of a mirror." This powerful verbal blast shook Walter visibly.

Finally he managed to blurt, "I guess I'll go to bed. Got to get up early in the morning." Upstairs he scrambled at a reckless pace.

Saturday morning dawned bright and cold. A light snow had fallen. Walter bounded out of bed with unusual vigor when the alarm sounded. "It's a wonderful day to go hunting," he said as he peered out the window. Without waiting to awaken Emma he dressed hurriedly and stole downstairs.

Quickly he fixed himself a breakfast of bacon and eggs and coffee. While he gulped the food he thought about the adventure which lay ahead. Maybe he'd get half a dozen rabbits! Perhaps a pheasant! Why hadn't he gone hunting before, he asked himself. This was a real he-man sport.

The sun was just a weak, red ball in the eastern sky as Walter headed his little pre-war coupe toward the city limits. About two miles out, he found the corn field which was to be the scene of his debut as a modern nimrod. He parked the car carefully just off the road in a little grove of trees. He clambered out, laden with shotgun, knapsack, binoculars and a great quantity of shells which were distributed among his pockets. He gave the car door a nudge but it failed to shut. However, rather than set down his burdens he disregarded it. The snow had stopped. It wouldn't hurt to leave the car door open.

Off across the field he started, his head held high and shoulders squared. If only Emma could see him now!

The corn field looked extremely long, but Walter wasn't daunted. The bigger the field, the more rabbits there would be, he figured with logic. He wondered idly if he'd be able to carry all his furry victims back to the car in one trip.

By the time he was half way to the end of the field, the bitterly cold wind had chilled him to the bone. His gun had grown surprisingly heavy and it was an effort to move his feet. But still he plodded on. The corn stalks lay like white branches on the uneven soil. And as yet, no rabbits had appeared. Not a single one. They're probably all down at the end of the field, thought Walter.

But at the end of the field, there were no rabbits. Nor did he encounter any on the way back. When he finally observed the car in the distance, Walter felt as though he had tramped a thousand miles.

"What will I tell Emma?" he asked himself out loud. She would scarcely believe that he hadn't even seen a single rabbit. Instead, she'd accuse him of being a poor shot, or of forgetting to load his gun. Hastily he checked. Yes, it was loaded.

If only he would see one rabbit. Just one. Close enough to get a shot. But none appeared.

He was nearing the car now. His spirits had fallen to a new low. His footsteps had slowed considerably as he anticipated the tongue lashing which awaited him at home. Emma was not always an understanding wife. The most disconcerting fact was that this expedition had not been his idea. Emma was responsible but Walter knew that it was he who would suffer. At least he'd get to rest a little as he drove home.

He was within a few feet of the car when he stopped dead still. The sight that met his eyes was a remarkable one.

"For gosh sakes!" he exclaimed. Seated on the seat of his car was a rabbit! A real, live rabbit that eyed Walter with surprise, but certainly not with fear. It evidently had hopped in the car through the open door.

Walter's hand shook as he raised his gun. This was his big chance, he told himself. He mustn't muff it! Then he lowered his weapon as he realized that a blast of shot would ruin his car.

"I've got to get that bunny out of the car," he muttered. "Then I'll shoot him." His day wouldn't have been spent in vain, after all.

Cautiously he inched forward. Mustn't scare the rabbit.

"Shoo!" said Walter. The rabbit didn't stir. If anything, it settled down more leisurely on its haunches. This infuriated Walter. Stepping closer he lunged at the bunny. This time it moved, and fast. But Walter swung into action also. With a jerky motion he brought the gun to his shoulder. Sighting rapidly, he fired. As he picked himself off the ground he glimpsed the white bob of the rabbit's tail as it bounced unhurt toward the corn field.

"There goes my rabbit!" Walter wailed. He stamped upon the ground with rage. Suddenly a sound of escaping air drew his attention.

He gaped with open eyes at his left front tire. It was sinking rapidly. Numerous small holes showed only too clearly what had happened.

Walter went to the trunk and brought out a jack and tire tools. Wearily he sat down on the running board to rest.

It had been a trying day.

Prayer After Pain

HOW can he thank Thee, Lord, for the good grain
Who has not conquered thistle and brier and weed?
How can he thank Thee for the sweet wild rain
Who has not trod parched lands above dead seed?
How can he lift a grateful heart for peace
Who has not known some red-lit battlefield?
O Lord, how can he comprehend release
Who has not felt at last an old wound healed?

Out of earth's agony white flowers shine;
Above the old scarred fields wild grasses run;
Out of the crushed fruits of the sun comes wine;
Out of the night the morning star—the sun.
For every hour of pain that we have had—
Even for these—Lord, help us to be glad.

His Growing Years

Lesson for January 16, 1949

DOUBTLESS God can do anything he wants to do. He could have sent Jesus to earth on a moonbeam; he could have had him for the first 30 years of his life on a lonely peak in the Andes, far from any human dwelling; he could have sent him into the world full-grown, without ever having to go through the grind of growing and learning as the rest of us do.

Dr. Foreman

But God did not plan it that way. If the manhood of Jesus was to be real, and not a hothouse facsimile, he had to come up the hard way. Angels do not grow, they just are; but human beings grow. The great difference between Jesus and ordinary mortals is not that they grow and he did not; the difference is that he grew straight.

No 'Good Chance'

THE world around us makes its impression on us; it makes no impression on dolls. They go on smiling their built-in, painted-on smiles, but we have to learn through tears. And so did Jesus. The heavenly Father saw to it that his experiences were not always easy ones. He was born in a stable, of parents who were very poor, living the first few years of his life as a displaced person in a foreign country, with a price on his baby head.

He grew up in a village "off the main line," among companions not one of whom ever became famous, working through long years at a simple and not too well-paid trade. During Jesus' first 30 years his neighbors never guessed that the most extraordinary person of history was living in their village.

We sometimes wish that we had an easier time of it, and that God had seen fit to cast our lot in some big city with a rich family, instead of where we are. We feel we could be better people if we "had a chance." Yet every reader of these lines has a far better chance than Jesus. It did not take perfect surroundings to shape a perfect life.

Holy Family

WE CALL Joseph and Mary and the rest the "Holy Family," but they were not known that way in Nazareth. They were just Joseph the carpenter, and his Mary. Then there were the boys and girls; Mark (6:3) tells the boys' names, but no one ever remembered to put down the sisters' names. Even then it was no small family. Jesus, as the oldest of seven, would have many responsibilities. After Joseph's death he would be the chief breadwinner. Seeing that the rent was paid, that there was grain in the house for Mary to grind into meal, finding money for clothes for seven growing children—this could not have been easy for Jesus the young carpenter.

They were not an easy family to live with, those boys and girls. When Jesus later began his work of teaching and healing, we hear that even his brothers did not believe in him. But in spite of the brothers, there was always Mary. Mother-like, she loved her first-born as no other could or did.

There are some who worship her as "Queen of Heaven," but it is enough for us to remember that she was queen of the home where Jesus the child grew to be Jesus the man. Not this side of heaven can we know how much we owe, as Christians, to this one woman, whose mind and spirit were woven in to the thought and spirit of her Son.

Home Memories

INDEED, Jesus whole boyhood was woven into his manhood. Among life's most precious memories are those of our growing years. Later on, we can see how Jesus' mind was bright with memories of home. The parables of the patched garment, of the leaven hidden in the meal, of the poor woman hunting with a lamp for her one lost coin, of the hungry neighbor at midnight, of the son who said "I go" but did not go — these and many others may well be echoes of Jesus' boyhood home. Deeper than these are Jesus' habits of prayer, his fondness for calling God "Father," his familiarity with Scripture even in death's agony—here surely are patterns learned in childhood's growing years.

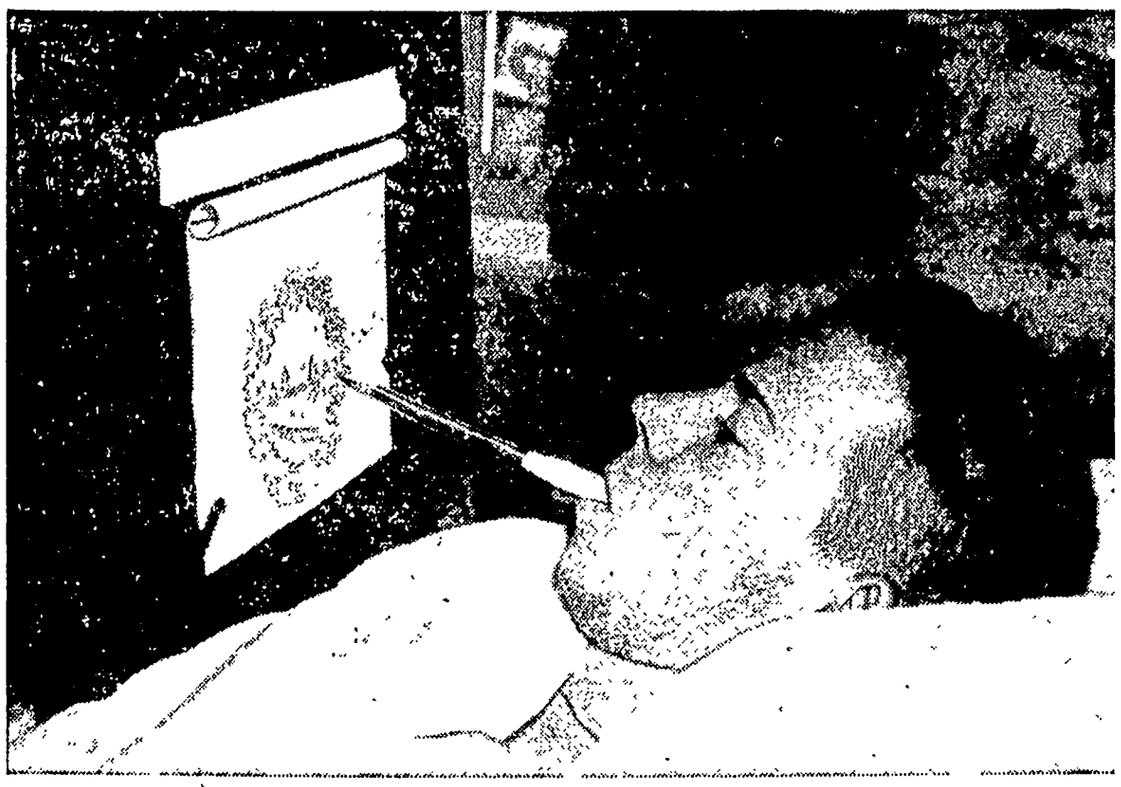
HONORED . . . President Truman is shown presenting the medal for merit, highest U. S. civilian award, to Myron C. Taylor, emissary to the Vatican since 1939. In the picture, the President is congratulating the 74-year-old ex-U. S. steel executive following a presentation ceremony at the White House. Taylor was appointed emissary to the Vatican by the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt. The appointment caused considerable discussion and disagreement among prominent church leaders, some objecting that Roosevelt had violated the policy of separation of church and state.

SITE OF ATOMIC PILE . . . An exterior view of the ancient Fort de Chatillon, a second empire fortress outside Paris, where France has started the first atomic energy pile known outside the American-British-Canadian combine. Announcement of the pile was made by Frederic Joliet-Curie, French high commissioner for atomic energy, who also announced discovery of a sizable uranium deposit in the mountains of the Aveyron, near the medieval city of Rodez. Frederic Joliet-Curie is one of France's leading Communists as well as a scientist.



HIGH COURAGE . . . The war left young Jimmy Wallace of Chicago, Ill., little but a mind and heart. But, totally paralyzed from the neck down, this Vaughn hospital patient uses what is left of him to the hilt. He has taken up drawing and is shown here working on his Christmas greeting, which he illustrated with a snow-covered cottage surrounded by holly wreath. Each stroke takes a mighty effort for he draws with a pencil held between his teeth. Jimmy first seized the nation's imagination by praying on a huge six-foot rosary hung over his bed.

"OPERATION SANTA" . . . It's all over now, but eager hands reached out toward one of St. Nick's major assistants, shown standing in the "Operation Santa Claus" plane at Tempelhof airport in Berlin. He is Lieut. John Konop of Astoria, L. I., and he arrived laden with packages of clothing, candy and toys for Berlin's waifs. Operation vittles stepped aside to let Santa take over the whole show, providing a heartwarming contrast to blockades and cold war. The plane carried more than 20,000 Christmas gifts for children in the German capital.

Presidential Inaugurations Are Mostly Circumstantial

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WASHINGTON.—"The King is dead, long live the King." Thus the ancient rite proclaimed a new sovereign who "by the grace of God" must take up the scepter. At once a hundred pairs of hands are busy preparing for the coronation. Courtiers and commoners, the noble masters and mistresses of ceremony, seamstresses and workmen, knights and stable boys, each trained to his task begin their work for the great event.

Form and program may differ, but where kings and emperors reign, the ceremony, according to the stern law of tradition, seldom varies in any but the smallest degree.

BAUKHAGE

Only a cataclysm can effect a change. I heard about my first coronation when I was 12 years old. I remember it for two reasons, one being the fact that it almost didn't come off. On the very eve of the ceremonial day, the heir to the throne fell ill. All celebration was called off. And then on the day after the event was to have taken place, as the nation waited anxiously to hear the fate of its sovereign-to-be, a shocking and ludicrous thing occurred.

One of the country's leading newspapers came out with a report of the coronation, mentioning even minor details just as if it occurred (and just as it did occur later)

This journalistic faux-pas was forgotten by most people outside of the profession, but I was to be reminded of it when I went to work on a rival newspaper in London many years later and heard the tale retold as a grim warning to pressmen and journalists.

The editor of the erring journal didn't think he was taking much of a chance He knew the coronation program never varied from the reign of one sovereign to another. Up until that time, I suppose, no English king had ever been rash enough to become ill and change the program.

As a matter of fact, I didn't take the warning seriously. Later I was able to insert much color in my report of the wedding of a royal German princess by the simple expedient of translating a story of the nuptial ceremonies of her brother which had appeared in a Berlin newspaper some years before.

But no one could attempt to write up the inauguration of an American President from the account of a previous ceremony A mere two centuries is short enough in a nation's history, to be sure, but many changes have taken place in our habits and customs since George Washington took over the presidential oath of office.

It is said that George Washington never considered himself America's first President, never referred to himself or was referred to by his contemporaries as such, since others served before him under the first constitution. The United States was already a nation, recognized as such by the presence of foreign ambassadors on April 30, 1789, the day Washington took the oath of office.

The position of the previous "presidents" was largely honorary and not filled by popular vote, and when the day came to invest Washington with the new powers, there was no precedent, no set of rules to follow

New York was the capital, and General Washington set out from Mount Vernon to New York on the long journey which turned out to be a spontaneous tour of triumph with a reception at every city along the way.

There was no dearth of ideas as to the social program A flower-bedecked barge, accompanied by a whole flotilla of private craft, carried the President-Elect across the Hudson, and he was wined and dined and welcomed with gaily-bedizened guards of honor surrounding him.

But when it came to the actual ceremony, a deadlock occurred. The senate argued for an hour as to whether it should receive the new chief executive seated or whether the members should rise. Indeed, they might be talking still if the house of representatives had not suddenly appeared. Washington then entered the building with due pomp and finally was led to an outdoor balcony where the crowds of Broad street witnessed his oath.

That part of the ceremony—the taking of the oath out of doors — is now an established precedent, although it was either forgotten or ignored until James Monroe's day The chamber of the senate or the house where it took place until Monroe's time was, however, usually open to as many of the public as could find room

Circumstance has contributed to variations in the program. Besides the moving of the capital in the early days there have been the cases of death in office. Five times a President has taken the oath without the usual ceremony for this reason. President William Henry Harrison came into office as a hardy military hero, and, scorning a carriage, rode bare-headed to the Capitol on horseback. A month later he died. Vice-President John Tyler was in Williamsburg and did not reach Washington until two days after the appointed date. Tyler took the oath on April 6, 1841, in Brown's hotel in the presence of members of the cabinet.

The next emergency installation took place when Andrew Johnson took the oath in the Kirkwood hotel a few hours after Abraham Lincoln had died from an assassin's bullet. The first time that a President was sworn in away from Washington since it had become the nation's capital was when Vice-President Chester Arthur took the oath in his own home in New York City shortly after the news came of President James Garfield's death at Long Beach.

When President William McKinley was shot at the Pan-American exposition, Vice-President Theodore Roosevelt hurried to Buffalo in time to take the oath in the home of Ansley Wilcox on the same day the President expired. And most of us are familiar with the scene in the little Northampton home where by lamplight a father, as the witnessing notary, took the oath of his son, and Calvin Coolidge succeeded Warren Harding who had passed away a few hours before in a San Francisco hotel.

When Franklin Roosevelt died at Warm Springs in 1945, Harry Truman took the oath in the White House executive wing. This was "public" in the sense that the door to the little office was open, and photographers and newsmen, this one among them, looked over each other's heads from the crowded corridors.

Some Variations Took Place

Another circumstance has affected the procedure of the accession to office Because of the variability of the calendar, March fourth has four times fallen on Sunday Until Woodrow Wilson took the oath on Sunday, March 4, 1917, in the President's room in the Capitol, no President had ventured to keep the law and violate the Sabbath.

President Monroe on succeeding himself had announced simply that he would take the oath on Monday, March 5. In 1849, the same thing occurred in the case of President Zachary Taylor. But for some reason, President Rutherford Hayes actually became President before his time. He was secretly sworn in on Saturday, the third, the ceremony being repeated on the fifth in public.

For some years it has been considered necessary for an outgoing President, if there is one, to take part in the ceremony. His presence has been as much expected in the carriage or automobile which carries both men to the Capitol as the President-Elect. This was not always so, and both the Adamses made it a point to absent themselves, the former leaving the city before the ceremony, and the other taking a horseback ride at the moment when the guns boomed out the salute to his bitterly-hated opponent.

Perhaps the inaugural day first began to take on its present complexion with the advent of President James Madison. People thronged into the capital and the first inaugural ball was held. President Monroe, who followed him, gave us another precedent — the presence of the marine band But it was left to Martin Van Buren to bear a unique honor. He was the first American-born citizen to hold that office Up until his time the Presidents were all former British subjects

Because of the war and a desire to emphasize the "fourth-term" as little as possible, the 1945 inauguration ceremonies of Franklin D Roosevelt took place on the White House portico instead of on a platform on the east front of the Capitol building which is now accepted as the usual location

No outgoing President will ride with Harry Truman this year, but one ex President may attend the ceremonies. The warm feeling which exists between the former small-town boy from Missouri and the wealthy retired engineer will undoubtedly assure Herbert Hoover a place of honor if he wishes to accept it.

Shooting at Cobb's .367

THERE is a certain mark in baseball, and there are only two ballplayers now hanging around who have even a faint wisp of a chance to equal or beat it. The mark is Ty Cobb's lifetime batting average of .367. Here is one of the greatest records that sport has ever known.

The .367 is high enough. But when you figure this represents 24 years of play against the top pitchers from almost three decades, the picture takes on added greatness.

TY COBB

The two players referred to are Ted Williams of the Red Sox and Stan Musial of the Cardinals. Neither will ever last for any 24 years. But each has at least a long shot, outside chance of meeting the .367 challenge by hitting from .380 to .390 for the remainder of what would have to be a miracle career.

You might be interested in selecting the leaders from past campaigns. Here they are—

Ty Cobb—24 years, .367.

Rogers Hornsby—19 years, .359.

Joe Jackson—10 years, .356.

Billy Hamilton — 11 years, .353.

Dan Brouthers, Ed Delehanty, Willie Keeler, Tris Speaker, Babe Ruth, Harry Heilmann, Bill Terry and George Sisler follow in order from .348 to .341. Lou Gehrig finished at .340, two points under Babe Ruth's .342.

Ted Williams, today, is slightly over .350 and Stan Musial's lifetime record to date is .345.

Ted Williams is 30 years old and should have at least seven or eight good years left. The war cut into his chance for any longtime mark, and it also hit him just as he was approaching his peak. His average was 356 when he gave three years to the service.

Musial is only 28 years old and should have 10 seasons left. His mark is .345. Both Williams and Musial could launch their wiry frames on batting splurges and finish close. But it would take miracle hitting.

One thing to their advantage is they don't have to hit against such pitchers as Johnson, Young, Joss, Walsh, Wood, Donovan, etc.

Joe DiMaggio is out of the race. Joe is now 34 years old. He has been around as an active pro since 1932 when he was with San Francisco, and that was 16 years ago. He can have only a few big years left and his lifetime average is only around 331.

So only the Red Sox and the Cardinal aces have any chance to mingle with the Cobbs and the Hornsbys, the Joe Jacksons and the Billy Hamiltons above .350.

Two Greatest Records

Ty Cobb set more records than an adding machine can handle in a day. But there are two that are almost unbelievable. The first of his incredible performances has already been named—that of finishing with a lifetime average—taking in 24 years—of .367.

Here are two leading examples Hans Wagner and Nap Lajoie are still remembered as two of the greatest hitters of all time. I saw both Wagner and Lajoie in the years of their prime. Both were masters of the ash. Yet, after 21 years, Lajoie's all-time mark was .338 and Wagner's was 329.

Here's another angle. After 16 or 17 years, both Lajoie and Wagner began to fade away from their twin peaks. But, after Cobb had completed 20 years, his batting averages for the last four years were: .378, .339, .357 and .323—the last mark was in Cobb's 24th campaign. At the end of 20 years, Cobb's mark was around .372.

Cobb's other high mark was just a amazing Hans Wagner led the National league in batting through eight seasons. Hornsby led his league seven times. But, from 1907 through 1919, Ty Cobb led the American league in 12 out of 13 years. He led nine consecutive years, was finally stopped by Tris Speaker in 1916 and then came back to the front in 1917, 1918 and 1919.

In 1922, just 1[illegible] years after he reported to Detroit, Cobb made his final challenge He batted .401 that year, but George Sisler's .420 was more than the veteran could match

Check back and you'll find few ballplayers still around after seventeen major-league years. To find one good enough to pass 400 is something else again

There are a few records that will not be broken that anyone now living will ever know about.

One is Babe Ruth's output of 714 home runs. The other is Cy Young's pitching record of 510 big league victories The other two belong to Ty Cobb. 367 for 24 years leading the American league in 12 out of 13 consecutiv seasons

CALIFORNIA CLIMBERS

MAIN objective of the Sierra club, an organization of rock-climbers in Southern California, is the conservation of natural resources. But while the 90 active members are pursuing this objective they manage to get in plenty of thrilling sport scaling Southern California's highest peaks.

Only the most proficient climbers are permitted to try their luck on overhangs like the one shown above. However, Jim Gorin, in the photos below and to the right, has been at it for seven years and is one of the best in the club. He leads in the total number of climbs, despite the handicap of having only one leg.

The rope in the circle picture is merely the climber's life line. It doesn't get you up and down that mountain slope. You get there with your own two hands and feet, picking out the best holds on your way up.

Below, left, is a practice session at Stony Point for novices in the club. The rope holds on a rock in a nearby park. Even oldtimers hold practice sessions before a three or four-day climbing trip.

Below, right, is Ray Gorin, a veteran rock climber who has passed his love of the sport to members of his family, including Douglas, the one-and-a-half-year-old free rider shown in his special perch atop Dad's back.

MIRROR of your MIND • • • Keeping Promises

By Lawrence Gould

Should you hold a person to a promise he regrets?

Answer: That depends to start with upon whether it is one he CAN keep. If someone has promised to pay you a debt and you know that he has the money, you can hold him to his promise, though this may cost you his friendship. But to demand that another person shall continue to give you his love because he has vowed to do so is another matter, since his power to keep this promise largely depends on unconscious forces which he cannot control. If these work against you, your insistence will make them resist all the harder.

Will "emotionally disturbed" people become insane?

Answer: This is much like asking whether someone who is sick will die—it depends on the severity of the disturbance. Anyone whose desires conflict with the dictates of his conscience will have warring or "disturbed" emotions, and of course, this is the case with nearly everybody. Only when the conflict is so painful that the person cannot stand it any longer and "escapes" into hallucinations or delusions—for example, that the accusations of his conscience are mysterious "voices"—does he become insane or "psychotic."

Do twins write and spell alike?

Answer: Not invariably, reports a psychologist from Uppsala university, Uppsala, Sweden, after studying the records of 530 pairs of twin school children between 8 and 15. Both fraternal and identical twins tend to have similar handwriting, but while the "identicals" are also alike in their ability to spell, the "fraternals" differ more and more as they grow older. The report suggests that this is because spelling and imaginative composition depend more upon heredity than writing, and only "identicals" have the same "genes."

Insulin Helpful in Mental Cases

By Dr. James W. Barton

BEFORE shock treatment was discovered, it was estimated that, at the rate mental disease was increasing, in less than 50 years one-half the people of the world would be needed to care for the other half.

Then came the discovery of shock treatment—insulin, metrasol, electric—and it was felt that there would be a lowering of the rate at which mental illness was increasing. This has proved true.

Unfortunately, there have been some cases in which the usual insulin shock treatment has been too severe, and mental specialists have found it necessary to stop this kind of treatment. It is gratifying to know that army research workers, by reducing the dose of insulin used but using it oftener, now can treat many of these cases safely and with excellent results.

In "Archives of Neurology and Psychiatry," Dr. D. S. Sullivan states that treatment with insulin, given by the intensive subshock technique, not only is effective in producing an improvement in the symptoms, but also completely stops the symptoms for certain periods. In addition, it brings about apparent recoveries of the psychotic or mentally upset patients seen in the army.

The majority of the patients treated were suffering from the double personality or dream-state type of mental illness. Many of the patients had been psychotic or mentally afflicted three or four months before reaching the hospital from overseas.

Despite this long period with mental symptoms, the majority responded well to the intensive sub-shock insulin treatment.

"Intensive insulin subshock treatment, consisting of adequate subshock reactions twice a day, seven days a week for three weeks, should be used in all mentally disturbed states of the severe anxiety-tension type with severe depression."

★ HEALTH NOTES ★

In Great Britain there are more cases of rheumatism in proportion to population than in America. This may be because there are fewer dentists or because of the damp climate.

Painful and aching feet are just as much a handicap in life as is a painful or aching head.

There are millions of people who have normal eyes and require no glasses who, however unknowingly, do some damage to their eyes or fail to obtain the satisfaction their normal eyes can give them.

Orthopedic physicians, chiropodists and podiatrists all state that the greatest single cause of painful feet is poor-fitting shoes.

"No," replied Mary.

Can a Farmer Get Something For Nothing?

|---|---|
| YES | X |
| NO | |

● HERE'S HOW . . .
We haven't any "get-rich-quick" scheme. In fact we can't guarantee that you can get something for nothing. But we can tell you how a lot of farmers did it last year with fertilizer. And you can turn the trick the same way.
Here's one way it worked. Research shows that alfalfa and clovers respond more to phosphate than most Iowa crops. So these farmers applied 250 to 400 pounds of 4-16-0 per acre at time of seeding their legumes with an oats nurse crop. The EXTRA oats resulting from the fertilizer paid for the fertilizer. And the extra benefit to the legume seeding was free.
That's one way of increasing profits with fertilizer. See us for further suggestions and for all your fertilizer needs.

IOWA REGISTERS NEWBORN BABES FOR 2ND YEAR

While most states are just getting the system under way, Iowa has begun its 2nd year of numbering newborn babies under a universal birth registration system.

Effective January 1, 1949 every state in the union began using a system under which every baby born in North America is assigned a permanent number.

Under the uniform system the number is in 3 sections and it designates the country of birth, the state in which the child is born, the year, and the sequence.

State's are indicated according to their alphabetical placing in the roll call of state. Thus "14" designates Iowa.

The first Iowa number to be assigned for 1949, when the state health department makes up its list for January, will be 114-49-000001. The "1" in the first section of the numbers stands for U. S. A. The "14" shows the child was born in Iowa. The second section of the number, "49" designates the year of birth.

NEW WINTER SPORT IN IOWA

Seventeen North Iowa Lakes Open To Winter Fishing

Because of low water and oxygen deficiencies which indicates serious winter fish loss in 17 northwest Iowa lakes, the Conservation Commission, by administrative order, has opened these lakes to winter fishing. The order became effective Jan. 11th and remains in force until March 1. Anglers may take any species of fish with no size or bag limits applying in the waters listed below.

The administrative order, in part, follows: "The State Conservation Commission of Iowa—does hereby order and declare that—Marble Lake, Swan Lake, Prairie Lake, Little Spirit Lake, Hottes Lake, Minnewashta Lake, and Lower Gar Lake in Dickinson County; Tuttle Lake, Mud Lake, Rush Lake, High Lake, Elk Lake, and Virgin Lake in Emmet County; South Twin Lake in Calhoun County; Crystal Lake in Hancock County; Morse Lake in Wright County; and Little Clear Lake in Pocahontas County are hereby opened to fishing to all persons having proper fishing license, and such persons may take, catch, or have in possession any and all species of fish from the above named lakes providing said fish are taken in accordance with the provisions of the state fishing laws for inland waters, except that size, catch, and possession limits shall not apply.

Lost Diamond Found In Taffy

For some time Mrs. Egeland missed a small diamond in her wedding ring and the Reverend and Mrs. Egeland did a lot of searching about their home, going through the vacuum sweeper cleanings, looking under furniture, but to no avail.

Evidentally the loss dated back to January 4th when a Methodist Sunday School class had a taffy pull at the church. At any rate, Mrs. Asa Arnold found the diamond in a piece of taffy last week and learned that Mrs. Egeland had lost one. Now Mrs. Egeland is again happy!

ASSESSORS WANT LAWS CLARIFIED

Deputy county assessors from 8 North Iowa counties gathered at the Hancock County courthouse last Wednesday and discussed matters pertaining to their office in interest of uninformity on real and personal valuations for the 1949 assessment.

Assessors were present from Franklin, Cerro Gordo, Mitchell, Worth, Winnebago, Kossuth and Hancock counties.

The group urged clarification of what constitutes an average inventory by the state tax commission or the legislature. Certain other changes in the present law were recommended to the legislative committee and state tax commission for study.

FEEDER CATTLE SHIPMENTS IN DECEMBER DROP

The Iowa farm picture was featured with several ups and downs last month, the Iowa crop and livestock reporting service said Wednesday.

The reporting service said shipments of feeder cattle took a seasonal decline, shipments of feeder sheep and lambs doubled the December, 1947 shipments, milk production was the lowest since 1935, egg production reached an all-time high and farm holdings of corn was the 2nd highest on record.

Shipments of feeder cattle into Iowa last month were 47 per cent above December, 1947, the service said, and although shipments of feeder sheep and lambs were high, the total for the year was the lowest since the drought year of 1936.

The service said milk production last month totaled 401,000,000 pounds and egg production was estimated at 326,000,000 There was an estimated 490,000,000 bushels of corn on Iowa farms Jan. 1, 1949, the service said. That compares wih 504,000,000 bushels on Jan. 1, 1943, following the 1942 bumper crop.

Public Health Bill Faces Tough Battle in Congress

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WASHINGTON.—The dim roar of an approaching battle in congress is being heard over the horizon. The struggle will concern S.1320, the national health insurance and public health bill.

This measure was opposed in the last session by an organization formed by the American Medical association which turned out to be, in terms of dollars spent, the biggest lobby in Washington, and that is a record.

Why does the medical association oppose the bill? Supporters of the legislation say because the majority of the doctors, like the majority of the people in the country don't understand it.

BAUKHAGE

Many doctors think it would foul up their practice of medicine with politics. Many also say it would destroy normal patient-physician relations because the patient would have to take what medical treatment he could get on an assembly-line basis. This latter assumption is based on a misapprehension of what is actually in the bill which I'll mention later

The former charge is a prediction and can't be answered categorically I can understand it. When I was in college, I got a summer job on the Chautauqua daily Chautauqua is a pretty big summer community, and health is important A young medical student friend of mine whose father had a pull got the job of inspecting cowbarns of farmers supplying milk to Chautauqua. I made the rounds with him once. He examined the bovine living conditions thoroughly and some were pretty vile He made notes and put them in a report recommending that purchases from a particular farmer be suspended until the barns were cleaned up

What happened? He got a sharp call-down from his superior. After that, inspection consisted in opening cow-barn doors, holding the nose, and looking the other way.

That happened many years ago, and I have heard that Chautauqua county is noted for its model dairies. But there is always a lurking suspicion that when a politician puts his finger in the pie it turns sour

The only specific answer to this charge of politics that I have discovered is one offered in a pamphlet gotten out by the Federation of Women's Clubs which says: "the plan allows for the representation of the people paying for it"

Perhaps a better answer lies in the fact that the American Federation of Labor and the CIO, both of whose leaders know just about as much about how politically-controlled institutions operate as any organization heads in the country, favor the bill. It has been supported by many individual doctors and by the Physicians Forum, and the Committee of Physicians for the Improvement of Medical Care

But what is "it," this national health insurance bill? Are you familiar with its purpose, what it proposes to do and how it proposes to do it?

Let's go back. What was the most shocking revelation in the World War II draft statistics? I'd be willing to bet the thing that most painfully surprised the whole country was that one-third of our youth of military age was unhealthy.

Out of fifteen million registrants, five million were rejected for physical or mental disabilities. Rural residents as a group were even less healthy. Forty-one out of each 100 rural registrants were turned down as 4-Fs. It had been just the opposite in World War I when farmers outdistanced city folk in good health.

From these figures, we suddenly discovered that the American youth wasn't such a hale and hearty individual as we had thought. Later, as you may not know, we learned that 325,000 Americans die every year who could be saved with proper medical care

About twenty per cent of our people can afford all the medical care they need.

Half our families—those with an income of $3,000 a year or less—find it hard, if not impossible—to pay for even routine medical care.

Thirty per cent of our families in the $3,000 to $5,000-a-year bracket would have to go into debt or make other sacrifices to meet the cost of severe or chronic illness.

So you can see why America is twenty-three per cent unhealthy.

From the beginning Americans have believed that sound minds are the responsibility of the state, hence the public school system. A sound mind isn't much good in an unsound body. So, say the supporters of the national health insurance bill, it is logical and thoroughly in keeping with American principles to tax everybody so that everybody can get medical care. They argue that freedom from persecution by germs is as much the business of the whole people as freedom from persecution, censorship, or any of the other restrictions our ancestors came to America to avoid.

I won't go into the history of the bill. It was written after years of study, six years of public hearings before congressional committees.

Those who have opposed the measure have made their chief argument a contention that it would be another step toward a socialized state, that it would indeed socialize the medical profession On point one, the supporters say truthfully "that argument was once raised against the public schools, city water-works, municipal sewage systems, electric light and power plants, which are now accepted as a matter of course."

Under the national health insurance bill, the federal government would collect the money and manage it along with the social security fund which it does now, disburse it to the states for the services rendered by the doctors and approve of the various state set-ups.

The actual arrangements for the services of the doctors who would go right on with their private practices as well if they wanted to, would be made between doctor and patient. The patient, unless his family doctor refused to join up, would have his services just the same, only they would be free. The doctor wouldn't have to accept any patient he didn't want.

Part of the money would go to the states for research, medical education and various preventive services. How much would it cost? One and one-half per cent of your earnings up to $3,600 which your employer would match If you are self-employed, you would pay three per cent up to $3,600 of your own earnings. And that, say the bill's proponents is no more than you pay now (on the average) to a voluntary group health agency if you belong to one and it's less than you would pay to a private physician.

Physicians' rates and mode of payment will be established by the vote of the majority of the physicians in the given area or locality.

Since the worst shortage of doctors is in rural areas, it is expected that with assurance of adequate pay through the national insurance fund, more physicians will be attracted to those areas. Also the fund will help to expand local public health services, rural hospital and ambulance service.

Aside from the poorer health in farm communities, maternal mortality is higher and, as every farmer knows, accidents are high. There are 54 deaths per 100,000 population on farms, only 20 per 100,000 in industry.

In the controversy over this measure both sides point to the experience of other countries. They claim the national insurance system was inaugurated in Germany in 1883. One American Medical association member says medical care declined under it. He probably knows more about it than I, but the statement was certainly a surprise.

Similar complaints have been made against a similar plan which has just been inaugurated in Britain But a recent poll taken in England says 91 per cent of the physicians have joined up which would seem to show they approved of the way it works even if they opposed it in the beginning. And the people voted it the most popular measure passed by the present government. The British Medical association did not oppose the bill as a whole but fought against certain portions, particularly those which they thought might make them "servants of the state."

These facts I have checked as nearly as I can and I do not believe they will be disputed. As to the opinions, they remain as such. And you can't look into the future. From what I can learn, the supporters of the bill believe that it will be one of the first introduced in the new congress, that it will reach the floor by February and that the chances for its passage are good.

● IDAHO'S BEN HURS

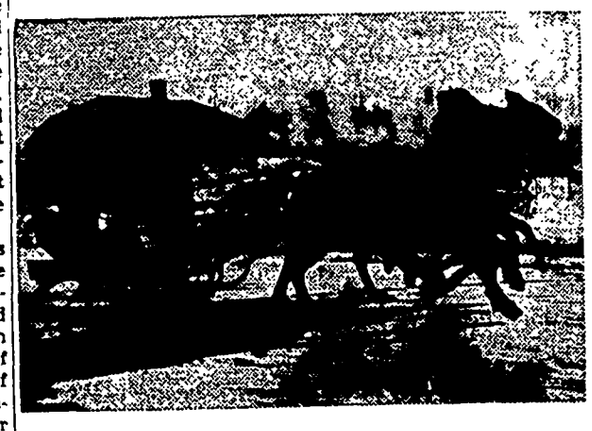
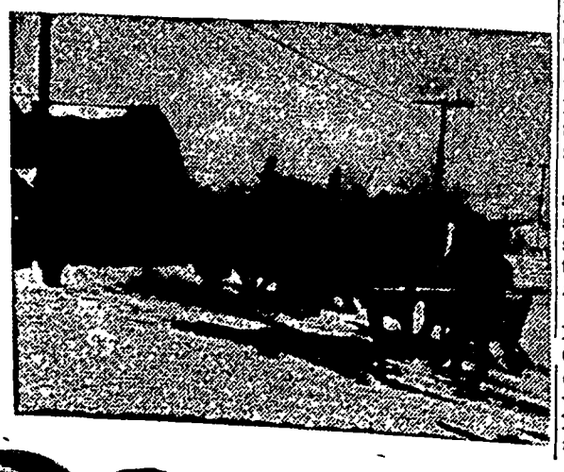
DEEP in eastern Idaho where the gem state rubs borders with the Teton country of Wyoming is the homey town of Driggs, a right friendly little place until snow tucks in the mountain valley for the winter. Then things begin to hum at his home of the All-America Cutter Racing association where good horseflesh and two-runner sleighs team together during January and February to revive an old sport for spectators across eastern Idaho and western Wyoming.

The picture to the left is of Donna Kempton, queen of the 1948 Driggs cutter races, holding the sorrel team of Ken Johnson, also of Driggs. This team is one of the tops in the field of some 40 annual entries in the cutter circuit.



Racing enthusiasts, after ransacking every old barn and warehouse in the area in search of oldtime cutters, have begun building their own. The new model shown in the circle is from Jackson Hole, Wyo. To the left is an old cutter (foreground) ahead by a nose of the newer chariot-style type. Top-flight cutters make the quarter-mile dash in 22 to 23 seconds.



Oldtimers in the neighborhood have been herding these snow sulkies around for the last 20 years, but it wasn't until just four years ago that cutter racing was formally organized. Teams of two horses always are used. Horsemen claim a winter on the cutter circuit is good for a horse jaded from too long on a track.

Second Time Around

THE MOST important spot in any baseball player's career is the second time around. It is the sophomore year, not the freshman span, that counts.

Naturally a ballplayer likes to look good that first season to get his chance, but too many of them have suddenly hit the soapy chute after a fine initial campaign, much to the sorrow of some optimistic manager.

Grantland Rice

Among those who will be closely watched next season will be: Al Dark, the Braves' shortstop; Richie Ashburn, the fleet-footed Phillip outfielder; Billy Goodman, the Red Sox first baseman; Larry Doby, the Indian outfielder, and Hank Sauer, and Virgil Stallcup of the Reds.

Some of the pitchers under scrutiny will be: Gene Bearden of the Cleveland club; Robin Roberts and Curt Simmons of the Phillies; Bob Porterfield of the Yankees; Pittsburgh's Bob Chesnes; Ralph Hamner of the Cubs and Erv Palica and a few other Dodger entries.

The three prize rookies who can play leading roles next season are Dark, Ashburn and Bearden. Ashburn will have no pennant-winning act to unroll, but Dark and Bearden might. Both are fine young ballplayers on teams that won pennants last fall, largely or partly because these two rookies were around. The Braves couldn't have won without Dark and the Indians couldn't have won without Bearden.

I can almost hear Billy Southworth singing: "Honey dear, listen here—I'm afraid to go home without Dark."

Dark, a great football player—almost another Van Buren, a fine golfer—a star all-around athlete, can be the top entry of 1949.

So can Gene Bearden of the Indians. If Dark is as good as he was last year, and Bearden is just as effective, we might see a replay of 1948 this next season.

Raschi and Porterfield can mean a lot to the Yankees. You may recall the able job Frank Shea did for the Yankees in 1947. He was a different Shea in 1948, where he had exchanged his streamlined form for a blimp If Shea reports at 190 or 193 pounds, he has a chance. He has plenty in the way of stuff and heart.

Doby, like Raschi, is hardly a sophomore He was around in 1947. But not too much in evidence. His first big year was 1948 and he has the equipment needed to have a bigger year in 1949

Looking to 1949

We are now looking through winter's snowstorms, mists and fogs into the campaign of 1949 from late April to October. Who will be the star rookie of 1949 to make good on his "second trip around?"

You already have the leaders—Dark, Bearden, Ashburn and Goodman Doby can be rated, if you figure him a 1948 freshman or a 1949 sophomore

Doby is as good an all-around outfielder as I've seen besides Musial, Williams, and DiMaggio. And Bearden is the best young pitcher I've seen in some time. He was the pennant and the world's series savior of 1948. But there are always pitfalls ahead. Who can tell where they are?

In 1947, Ewell Blackwell looked to be one of the star pitchers of many years The 6-foot 6-inch star from California won 22 games and lost eight with the drooping Reds. With other teams he would have passed the 30 mark Here was one of the great young pitchers from baseball history to reach the game.

But it was a different story in 1948. The tall and willowy Blackwell came along with a sore arm. He was never right through the 1948 season, where the year before he had pitched 17 consecutive no-hit innings.

You can't pitch with a sore arm. Blackwell couldn't. You can't pitch with too much fat. Shea couldn't. You can only pitch when you are in shape.

You can only play baseball when you are in shape, and yet last spring I'd say that about 70 per cent of the players who reported were not in nearly as good condition as Ducky Medwick was, and Medwick has been around for more years than most of us can remember.

Medwick has always reported in shape. And then gotten in better shape. Most ballplayers report in soggy shape and spend most of their time trying to work off fat. At least too many do.

I don't believe this will happen to Dark, Ashburn, Bearden, Doby, Goodman, Chesnes and one or two others who can be vital cogs in various pennant machines of 1949. I look to see both Raschi and Porterfield of the Yankees ready to go.

FIRST AID TO AILING HOUSES

By Roger Whitman

QUESTION: I have an unfinished walnut sewing cabinet. Could I use walnut stain and varnish on it?

ANSWER: If the color of the wood is good, I see no reason for using a stain, unless a dark color is desired. It should suffice to cover the wood with fine sandpaper to get a very smooth surface. Then after dusting off, apply several coats of quick-drying varnish. Sand the first coat lightly and dust carefully. An alternative to varnish would be a penetrating wax finish, which can be obtained at a well-stocked hardware store. This gives a good, somewhat dull finish. Later, it may be given a higher lustre with several thin coats of paste wax, each one dry and hard before applying.

QUESTION: My kitchen walls and ceilings are made of wainscoting. I would like to cover them with smooth surfaces. I can't rip it out, for we would lose our insulation; and if we plaster over it, we will have the walls flush with the window frames. Can you advise me what to do?

ANSWER: You might nail up a thin plywood panel directly on the wainscoting. The board usually is applied on a framework; but in your case I believe you could do a good job without the framework, provided you fill the joints carefully according to the manufacturer's printed instruction sheets.

DOUBLE DUTY

By JOHN H. HOSE

He was so young to have the heavy burden he was carrying, but Martha didn't realize her son was strong mentally as well as physically, nor that he could keep a secret as well as the next person.

"JOEY, supper will be ready in half an hour," called Martha to her son who was entering the spring house with a bucket of milk in each hand.

"O. K., Mom," shouted the lad in response, "I'm through with the milking. I'll be in as soon as I clean up."

Martha watched him a few minutes later as he trudged toward the house. He was big for 14, and with faithful "Shep" trotting along at his heels, Joey made an impressive picture against the backdrop of the setting sun.

"Just like a magazine cover," thought Martha, as tears of pride welled up into her eyes. Her little man. Joey had shouldered a burden during the past year that many a man could not have handled as well. The plowing, planting, fence repairs, and the thousand odd chores that must be completed on a farm had all been mastered by Joey. He seemed to almost relish his role as man of the house while dad was away.

Day after day he had toiled in the fields with the team while other boys his age were swimming, fishing, and berrying, unhampered by the cares of labor. But Joey had seemed impervious to their comings and goings. Many evenings at the supper table, Martha noticed the boy dozing from exhaustion. A spoon or fork would often pause, suspended mid-way between mouth and table. She never gave utterance to this observation of weariness, lest her sympathy extinguish his feeling of being the family breadwinner. Their conversations were those of business partners rather than mother and son.

Martha longed to tuck him in at night, or to hug his tow head to her breast. Little Joey was her only consolation in her longing for Big Joe. Countless times during the lonely nights, she had tiptoed quietly into his room to stand beside the bed where he slept. Often she caressed his blond head or kissed him lightly on the cheek as he lay deep in the refreshing sleep of childhood. Each time, she struggled within herself to check the tears of love and loneliness as she slipped quietly back to her own empty room, fearful lest she waken him and bring his big world tumbling down around him.

Joey was living from day to day in a world of big responsibility, and she could not, in spite of her longing to be more demonstrative toward her 14-year-old, jolt him into reality. She told herself that was the reason why she had never told Joey about his father.

Well-meaning friends had tried to persuade Martha to sell the farm and move to town. Her troubles dated from the day she had received the telegram from the Arizona hospital. Big Joe was never coming back! He had a hopeless case of tuberculosis—it was just a matter of months. But how could she tell Joey? The knowledge of her unshared grief had caused her to shed thousands of inner tears in Joey's presence, and endless nights of heart-breaking sobs in her own room. But she felt that, somehow, they must keep the farm that held so many fond memories.

The first days after she and Joe were married had seemed almost impossible. The work at the barn and in the fields had continued endlessly. At first, she had worked side by side with Big Joe, and they had sacrificed everything, denying themselves the very necessities of life in order to make the payments on the farm. Then little Joey had come to crown their happiness. A mutual pride and joy which they had shared in watching other things grow on the farm had then been centered in Joey.

Martha had decided that life was practically perfect until one day big Joe had come in from his work in mid-morning. Surprised to see him, Martha had inquired what was wrong. Joe just stared off into space, and then he answered.

"Martha, there's something wrong with me. I'm weak and tired all the time, and I keep coughing and coughing."

For the first time Martha noticed how tired Joe really did look. She suggested that he see a doctor at once, but big Joe said he probably just had spring fever. The following Saturday when they went to town, she had persuaded him to stop in to see old Doc Crane.

"Just like a magazine cover," thought Martha, as tears of pride welled up into her eyes.

It hadn't taken Doc long to decide that Joe should have some X-rays. The following month the X-rays were taken by the county health officer in the new mobile unit, and Doc Crane's fears had been substantiated. Doc suggested Arizona.

Martha could still remember those two weeks when she and Joe had planned how they could make out if she could keep the farm going. Her father would help and little Joey would continue to school. Big Joe was not to worry, but exert all his effort toward getting well again.

The first year, things had gone very smoothly indeed, until the rheumatism laid her father on the shelf. Martha was desperate. All the spring work lay ahead, and it was impossible to find anyone to take over the work. She had talked it over with Joey, and together they had decided to go it alone. She could still hear little Joey as he said.

"Gee, Mom, I'm big enough to do the work. Grampa let me plow some last year, and I'm lots bigger and stronger now."

So Joey had become the man of the family. Then the telegram had come. Big Joe would never be coming back. There were those who thought Martha cruel for not telling the boy that his Dad wasn't coming home. At times, she thought she must tell him, but she postponed it, feeling that, somehow, the right time would come . . . a time when he might be strong enough to stand the heartbreak. Perhaps in a few weeks before Joey returned to school, or when Miller moved in to sharecrop the farm.

The summer had come and gone swiftly. Already the first suggestion of impending autumn was noticeable in the coloring of the countryside. The crops had been abundant, and the harvests were good for Joey and Martha. Many had bestowed compliments and Joey glowed with pride when the men had remarked about the size of the yield during the threshing season.

Returning home from a Saturday shopping trip, the two were making big talk about the coming school term.

"We sure were lucky to get Miller, weren't we, Mom?" asked Joey.

"Yes, son," replied his mother, "And not a bit too soon either. I don't know what I would have done with you going back to school if we hadn't found someone to take over this winter."

Suddenly Martha knew that the time had come to tell Joey the unhappy secret which she had carried now for more than a year in her grief-stricken heart. But how could she bring herself to do it? She must strive to make it as easy as possible.

She swung the car into their lane, and pulled to a stop in the yard before the kitchen door. The purchases were quickly unloaded, and Joey lighted a fire in the big kitchen range. Now was the time! Even before she removed her wraps, Martha laid her arms across Joey's shoulders, and began.

"Joey, dear, there's something I've been wanting to tell you for a long time. I've been so proud of you this summer, and I . . . Well, somehow it seemed I just couldn't spoil everything you were working so hard for with bad news. Now you're going back to school, and we're so fortunate to have Miller coming.

"I want you to work hard at school this fall," she continued as she noted the questioning look in his eyes. Then she simply related, "God decided that you and I had a job to do together, Joey . . . Your Father will never be able to come home. In fact," she continued as she struggled to hold back the tears, "he may have only a few more months to live."

There was a long moment of silence . . . a moment which lasted an eternity for Martha. "Oh, dear God, make him understand," she prayed silently.

Joey didn't say a word but drew his mother's face to his own and kissed her, tenderly and boyishly. He patted her softly on the cheek.

"Aw, gee, Mom, I understand," he said, and the tears stood in the corners of his eyes. Martha could see how brave he was trying to be. "Now I better take care of my feeding," he said somewhat hoarsely. "Can we have the pecan roll we got in town for our supper, Mom?" he asked as he changed from his suit coat into his overall jacket. The coat was thrown carelessly across the seat of a nearby chair. Martha watched him walk slowly from the room, a firm set to his shoulders.

"He took it like a man," she thought, as she removed her own wraps. Then she saw his coat lying on the chair, and smiled, thinking, "He acts like a man in some ways, but when it comes to his clothes, he's all boy." She picked up the coat to hang it properly. As she did so, a small notebook and some papers tumbled from the inside pocket. Gathering them up to replace them, Martha was startled at the sight of the yellow envelope. Could it be?

It was! Among the contents of Joey's pocket was the well-worn and much read telegram from the tuberculosis sanitarium.

My Creed

I HAVE the faith to know that this deep sorrow
Weighing upon my heart will lift at last;
That I shall waken on some glad tomorrow,
Happy once more, the troubled darkness past.

And I have hope—I keep its fire burning,
Although my soul and body be distressed—
The hope that somehow with the old earth's turning
This pain will cease, and time will bring me rest.

Oh, I believe that He who walks beside me
Closer than any lover, any friend,
Will lead at last, no matter what betide me,
Into the sunlight at the journey's end.

MIRROR of your MIND

The Fear Of Death

By Lawrence Gould

Is the fear of death instinctive?

Answer: I do not believe it is directly so, if only because no living person has experienced death or knows what it is like But all of us have had two types of experience, pain and frustration, and learned to fear them both, and one or the other is the basis of what death means to most people The average person fears death either because he believes it will involve terrible suffering (which, of course, it may not) or because, as one man put it, "I can't bear to think of missing all the fun that I get out of living."

Does society neglect the "unattached"?

Answer: Yes, especially in cities, writes Arnold M. Rose in the American Journal of Sociology. Except for the wealthy, it is very hard for any man or woman who lives alone to find satisfactory housing, food, or recreation, or even facilities for wardrobe repairs. The reason would seem to be that except for the "unattached" themselves no one particularly cares what happens to them. The majority of us seem to feel—unfairly in most cases—that a person who refuses to be or remain a member of a family unit has no claim upon us.

Is psychiatry at best "a drop in the bucket"?

Answer: It is, in the sense that there are not enough practicing psychiatrists to treat more than perhaps five per cent of the people who need their help. But one drop of ink in a bucket of water will tint the whole pailful, and it is no less true that ideas originating with psychiatry are coloring the thinking, if not always the behavior of millions of men and women who have had no direct contact with it. Modern theories of education as well as of parent training have a largely psychiatric basis, and criminal law may come next.

Can't Live by Vegetables Alone

By Dr. James W. Barton

WHILE there may be a few "strict" vegetarians who apparently are as healthy and vigorous as meat eaters, in the great majority of cases it will be found that they eat butter, egg and milk which, of course, are animal foods.

Why should man eat animal proteins?

Each food stuff—protein, fats, starches—has a special duty or duties to perform in the body, the special duty of proteins being to maintain the structures and cells of the body and to replace those that are worn out. In addition, proteins can supply energy. The special duty of fats and starch foods is to supply energy.

Further, an examination of the stomach and intestines of man and animals clearly proves that man was meant to have a mixed diet—meat, fats, starches—other animals mostly vegetables and grasses, and certain other animals a protein diet only. This has been worked out according to the length of the trunk of all three.

At the Chicago World's Fair the stomach and intestines of a cow, a dog and a man were shown, in which it could be seen that a cow's stomach (two stomachs) and intestines were much larger and longer than that of a man, and man's much longer than those of a dog.

Animals that live entirely on grasses and vegetables, as the cow, have a larger stomach and longer intestine than those which live on meats alone, or meats and vegetables.

The stomach and intestine of man are not adapted to receive and digest such bulky and unmixed diets as are advocated by "strict" vegetarians.

It would be difficult for man to eat a large enough bulk of vegetables to obtain his needs for proteins, vitamins and minerals. Further, first-class proteins are found in animal foods—meat, milk, eggs, fish—and the other proteins in vegetables—peas, beans, rice cereals.

★ HEALTH NOTES ★

Though many old persons have normal blood pressure, the greater number have high blood pressure. Physicians now agree that it is natural for the blood pressure to increase with age.

Rheumatic fever is the cause of many cases of heart disease in middle age, and it may also be the cause of rheumatic brain disease.

If the kidneys are not doing a perfect job of separating wastes and poisons from the blood, a serious condition will arise wherein the individual will have poisoned blood circulating throughout the body.

Since DDT is poisonous when taken into the human body it never should be placed where it might be mixed with kitchen supplies.

Splendid Cough Relief Is Easily Mixed at Home

To get quick and satisfying relief from coughs due to colds, mix this recipe in your kitchen. Once tried, you'll never be without it.

First, make a syrup by stirring 2 cups granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. A child could do it. No cooking needed. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Then get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist. This is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its quick action on throat and bronchial irritations.

Put the Pinex in a pint bottle, and fill up with your syrup. This makes a full pint of splendid medicine and you get about four times as much for your money. Never spoils. Tastes fine.

And for quick, blessed relief, it is surprising. You can feel it take hold in a way that means business. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and eases the soreness. Thus it makes breathing easy, and lets you sleep. Money refunded if not pleased in every way.

Pinex Is Swift Acting!

When Your Back Hurts -
And Your Strength and Energy Is Below Par

It may be caused by disorder of kidney function that permits poisonous waste to accumulate. For truly many people feel tired, weak and miserable when the kidneys fail to remove excess acids and other waste matter from the blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling. Sometimes frequent and scanty urination with smarting and burning is another sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won countrywide approval than on something less favorably known. Doan's have been tried and tested many years. Are at all drug stores. Get Doan's today.

KEEP COWS COMFORTABLE AS POSSIBLE IN WINTER

While it is impossible to entirely duplicate ideal conditions for cows in the winter time, dairymen who manage to keep cows comfortable are well repaid for their efforts, says Floyd J. Arnold, extension dairyman at Iowa State College.

He points out that the ideal envirment for a dairy cow is a sunny spot in the middle of a luxuriant May or June pasture when the thermometer registers between 40 and 50 degrees.

Try to duplicate those conditions in the winter time, Arnold suggests. In addition to water and an abundance of good quality feed, the thing the dairy cow probably most desires is a comfortable stall. Under favorable conditons the cow spends about one-half of her time lying down.

A comfortable stall is one that is dry, roomy, well lighted and well bedded.

Ventilation is important. The moisture evaporates from the bodies of the cows, and a damp, foul atmosphere develops in a poorly ventilated barn. A good ventilating system also helps to regulate the temperature. Poorly ventilated barns may be drafty and may often cause udder troubles and other health problems.

Cows like to exercise and should be given the chance to do it, Arnold says. High producing cows should not be left out of doors too long in winter time. However, a couple of hours on pleasant days will do them good.

Condition Improved

Mrs. Willard Fessenden has been critically ill at the Mercy hospital at Mason City the past week, but was reported slightly improved the first of the week.

MINK

Clarence Kastler of Clarion, mink farmer, found 19 mink dead in their cages recently, representing a loss of around $800. On learning a small boy and dog had been seen around the pen, Sheriff Roy Wilson questioned the five-year old. On being assured he was "not going to be spanked," the lad explained how he had let out the mink, one at a time, to be killed by his pet Scooty, after which he had carefully put each mink back in its cage.

Hulda Wiles was called to Boone Jan. 8th by the serious illness of her sister, Mrs. Tom Williams, she passed away Jan. 17th.

WHEN you see the 1949 Chevrolets, a glance will be enough to tell you they're new—all new—in line and contour, in beauty and style. And when you look inside, and under the hood, and beneath the chassis, you'll see that their newness is not merely in outward appearance, but in design and engineering and construction as well.

But, to a lot of people, the 1949 Chevrolet is already old. They know what it will do, and how exceedingly well it will do it—they know all about its performance, its comfort, its power, safety, durability and economy. They are the engineers and technicians of the General Motors Proving Ground—the largest, most completely equipped, outdoor testing laboratory in the automobile world.

Here, before a single new 1949 Chevrolet went into production, experimental models were tested—made to show that they possess, in greater measure than ever, all those qualities on which Chevrolet has built its leadership.

In short, the General Motors Proving Ground tests are your assurance that your new-model Chevrolet has proved its worth through many months and many, many thousands of miles of rough handling.

Soon you will see the new Chevrolet—and when you do, you will see a car not only new, but tried and true.

COLLEGE AND BIG BUSINESS

A congressional committee reports that American colleges are partners in real estate projects, chain restaurants, mail order houses, department stores, gas stations and many other enterprises. One practically owns and operates a spaghetti plant and piston ring factory. Another has money invested in a Limoges china and leather industry. One of the biggest universities has apartment house, office building and Radio City Center projects running into millions.

Our colleges have to invest their endowment funds some way and it is perfectly legitimate to do what they have been doing, but the charge is made that, since the income of educational institutions is exempt from taxes, the colleges are in unfair competition with business men and cost Uncle Sam millions in taxes every year.

About that we wouldn't know too much, but it is disconcerting to a man to find that the little lady he has been so tenderly calling Alma Mater is an industrial tycoon, a member of a dozen boards of directors and maybe a top distributor of potato chips, catsup, auto tires and lubricating oils.

Can it be that Alma, instead of being the dignified and handsome gal carved in marble on the lovely campus, should be pictured with a prematurely bald head, a counting-room twitch and a strictly business look? Instead of a sweet and aloof lady interested mostly in the arts and sciences, is she a holding corporation, an inner tube manufacturer and a promoter of chain lunchrooms?

Don't tell us that Dean Dumplin and Professor Highforrid have in truth been responsible for the kid's education but that the spaghetti, mustard, orange drink and real estate businesses have been a big help, too.

Down there on the gridiron is it possible that the lads have been giving their all for dear old Schlotz, Brown, Hallock & Whiffle, Inc., the Cronkhite Doughnut Machine corporation and the Grand Union Radio Ornament Industry? Is it possible that the old grads should sing it "For Siwanikosh, for Country and for Whooziss' Refrigerators"?

These are disillusioning times. We like to think of the faculty worrying only over a student's progress in philosophy, literature, Greek and mathematics, and never in an all-day conference over whether to put a few hundred grand into a department store, a row of de luxe apartment houses or a new tooth-powder idea.

Of course it costs money to run universities. All those funds have to be invested where the return will be good But we hope the paper isn't delivered the night the news comes out that Little Lester has had to be withdrawn from college because his old man couldn't keep him in and at the same time pay the rent, food and clothing bills sent in by the college's business affiliations.

The Nationalized Pub

England is considering nationalization of the pubs (bars and taverns to you) Government operation of hangovers is something new. But it is a further indication of how far the idea of state control of everything, up to and including the dark brown taste and the morning after, is going.

For generations, it would have been thought far below the dignity of any government to run a saloon and put itself in the position of replying to unceasing orders of "make mine the same, Joe." But today a proposal that the state operate poolrooms, bowling alleys and men's smokers would hardly astonish anybody

Just the same, we hate to think of any sovereign state becoming a combination saloonkeeper, bartender and bouncer. It isn't going to be nice when the folks take to blaming bad Mickey Finns on bureaucracy or demanding a change of administration on account of what seems to be a government imposed headache.

International Uniform Sunday School Lessons

By DR. KENNETH J. FOREMAN

SCRIPTURE: Matthew 3; Luke 3:1-23a; 7:18-35; John 1:19-34.
DEVOTIONAL READING: Luke 1:59-67, 76-80.

No Greater Prophet

Lesson for January 23, 1949

"OF ALL the characters in history, which one do you admire most?" We know how Jesus answered that interesting question.

Dr. Foreman

He had a great array of personages from whom to make his selection But he took as the Great Man of all time, up to his own generation, no heroic figure from the past, no king, general, scholar or prophet. The greatest man, for Jesus—or at least one so great that he could think of none greater—was one of his own contemporaries, a cousin of his who was in jail at the time when Jesus said of him, "Among those born of women none is greater than John." Known to us as John the Baptist, that is, John the Baptizer, we seldom realize either his greatness or the close connection between his life and that of Jesus.

John of the Jordan

WE DO not know how much Jesus himself owed to John. We do know that John was the man who first called the public's attention to Jesus John it was who gave some of Jesus' most important disciples their first training; John who introduced to Jesus, and turned over to him, some of his own followers. It may be significant too that Jesus' first preaching was identical with that of John (compare Matthew 3:2 and 4:17)

Some Christian scholars have gone so far as to suppose that it was John's preaching that stirred the young carpenter from Nazareth to leave his shop and begin his great work as teacher.

Whether this is so or not, we do know that it was the baptizing by John which led to the baptism of Jesus, and that Jesus' baptism was the turning-point between Jesus' private life and his short and stormy public career. It is quite clear that if there had been no John the Baptizer, the story of Jesus would have been very different from what it actually was

Only a Voice

JOHN'S own picture of himself is not a picture at all. When they asked him to say what he was, and half-expected him to declare that he was the Messiah, the long-looked for King, John said only, "I am the voice of one crying in the wilderness."

John, so far as we know, never accepted dinner invitations, he was never under the roof of any friend, and he had no roof of his own. People even called him demon-possessed, he was so far removed from ordinary life.

But Jesus was always in people's homes. That is one reason why the greatness of John fades before the greatness of Jesus, for a Voice makes a poor companion Jesus had the human sympathy that John lacked, and John well knew this. "He must increase, but I must decrease," he said.

Repentance: Seed and Fruit

NEVERTHELESS the Voice spoke truth. John must have been a powerful preacher, for his meetings were held miles from the nearest town, so that to reach him from Jerusalem one would have to travel through wild country infested with bandits. Few modern preachers, without benefit of advertising, music or choir, without even a tent, would dare to start a revival meeting 15 rough miles out of town. But John did—and the people came in crowds. We do not have the full report of his preaching that we have of the preaching of Jesus, but we do know that he broke the hard crust of his listeners' conscience.

He made them see how unfit they were for the Kingdom of God for which they prayed; he broke down their pride till they went down to the Jordan and were baptized under the open sky, in public confession of their sins.

When men asked him, What shall we do? John did not have the fuller, higher message that Jesus later had. But he did make plain two things about the good life, the life that pleases God: it cannot even begin without repentance and confession of sin, but it does not end there. Repentance is not a simple granite milestone on life's way; it is a seed which if it is real will bear fruit.

Baked Puddings Tempt on Cold Days
(See Recipes Below.)

Baked Dessert

ARE YOUR DESSERTS fragrant and appetite-satisfying these cold winter days? If not, get busy, light the oven, and bring out your pans and mixing bowls for these recipes are certain to inspire you thoroughly and delightfully.

LYNN SAYS:
Know Your Food Facts and Fancies

For best results in baking, have milk at room temperature before mixing it with the other ingredients. This is especially true when mixing biscuits, muffins and cakes.

A teaspoon or two of lemon juice brings out the full fruit flavor of fruit pies. Add it when mixing the fruit in the sugar.

Leftover ham may be ground and shaped into balls. Serve with a sweet-sour sauce!

Roll biscuit dough into a large circle, then cut into pie shaped wedges. Spread with softened butter, sprinkle with brown sugar and nutmeg. Then roll into butterhorns, starting at the wide end and bake. Most attractive and delicious!

For breakfasts that delight on cold mornings, serve spicy sausage patties with french toast and syrup. Start off with a colorful, plump baked apple.

In sewing braid or rick-rack on any kind of fabric, use scotch tape to hold firmly in place. When the machine work is done, simply peel off the tape.

To save frosting a butter cake, sprinkle the batter with finely chopped filberts before baking; do not use on sponge type cakes since the batter is not heavy enough to hold the nuts and they will sink to the bottom.

Fringe used as trimming should never be ironed. Instead comb it carefully while it's still wet.

Many people believe breakfast just isn't breakfast without a bowl of steaming hot cereal every morning. Dried fruits added to the cereal while it cooks gives it a most pleasant flavor.

Pieces cut from an old felt hat or slippers and glued to the bottom of table legs will help prevent scratch marks on kitchen linoleum.

A food tip to remember is that waste ends of tongue may be ground, mixed with dressing and used as a sandwich spread.

You can improvise shoulder covers to hang over dresses, in the closet with old pillow cases. Just make a slit in the closed end and slip over the hanger.

'Star-Spangled Banner' Once Just Another Tune

Bet you never heard this little-known fact before. "The Star-Spangled Banner" was once just another patriotic tune known as "The Defense of Fort McHenry."

The words were written in 1814 by Francis Scott Key, a lawyer of Maryland, who witnessed the British bombardment of nearby Fort McHenry during the War of 1812.

The lyric at once gained popularity as a national air. "The Star-Spangled Banner," however, was not officially named and designated as the national anthem until congress so legislated March 3, 1931.

POLIO FUNDS HELP FAMILY

JURGENS FAMILY CAN TELL YOU MARCH OF DIMES IS WORTH WHILE

(From Willmar, Minn. Paper)

A family of four . . . and three of them sent to their beds with the dread disease of poliomyelitis.

That was the situation in the Floyd Jurgens household last fall. Jurgens, a farmer from just south of Wilmar, was himself the first to catch the disease. "It hit me mildy at first," he said. "I thought it was only a cold." That was a few days after the county fair.

Then, on Nov. 10, when Jurgens was better, seven year old Samuel showed the same symtoms. Like his father, he was sent to the University hospital. Next it was Mary Jane, 10, who came down with the dangerous sickness the day before Thanksgiving. She, too, was sent to the University hospital.

That was almost the entire family. Only Mrs. Jurgens was left up and around.

But long before that, the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis had stepped in. It took care of the financial cost and almost as important, boosted the family's flagging morale.

That family was lucky—they all came home. And they came home without twisted bodies or crippled limbs. The boy expects to return to school sometime in February and Mary Jane not long after. Jurgens finds he is able to do most of the work around the farm himself again.

But one thing no one in the family of Floyd Jurgens will ever forget, says Mr. Jurgens, is the helping hand extended in that time of need by the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, better known as the March of Dimes.

Floyd Jurgens is going on the radio Friday night to urge his neighbors and friends to support the drive of the March of Dimes and to explain why it is so important to him that the drive succeed. You can hear him at 7 p. m. Friday on KWLM.

Britt, Iowa
Jan. 21, 1949

Mrs. R. A. Jorgenson,
Sec March of Dimes,

Find inclosed check and also a piece of write up from the Daily News, Willmar, Minn. telling of three cases of Polio in my sons family since the last of September until 10 days ago when Mary Jane came home, and all are ok now. We know what this Foundation does, no telling who is next to get this disease.

Yours truly,
F. W. Jurgens

A BOUQUET TO BERT JONES

The sleet storm of Saturday night and Sunday tore down telephone lines and snapped many telephone wires and some over 150 telephones were affected on the Klemme exchange.

Bert Jones, local manager and his crew deserve a "bouquet" this week for the work they did to get telephones operating again after the storm. They had three lines down and hundreds of line breaks, but all telephones were operating by Tuesday morning.

It was a big job, well done, and no time was lost to restore telephone service in the Klemme community.

Sportlight by Grantland Rice

Winning System Player

THERE HAVE been a numberless, unlimited number of horse players who had systems that could beat the races.

Unfortunately, those who brought their systems to me were a trifle ragged and hungry. They hadn't eaten much lately. Naturally, this state of affairs doesn't breed too much confidence in the party of the second part.

Grantland Rice

They have an exception around Santa Anita. I hope he is still there. He is the only man I know who has consistently beaten the races for 35 years.

"At least," he told me last winter, "I've had 34 winning years and only one losing year."

Old-timers will know him, famous from Belmont to Santa Anita. He was a $100,000-a-year winner around New York in the days of Arnold Rothstein. Even in the pre-Rothstein days.

He had an element of what I consider raw luck—except when I win—worked out to a fair science. Here are parts of his winning system:

1. THE HORSE—his breeding, opposition, etc.

2. THE TRAINER and the owner—Did they have winning stables?

3. THE JOCKEY—especially certain jockeys on certain horses.

4. THE WEIGHT—an important factor.

5. TRACK conditions — fast or muddy.

6. POST position — on certain tracks. Inside for some, outside for others.

7. A STUDY of the horse's last three races—what happened? What horses beat him? What horse did he beat? Did he have good or bad racing luck?

8. THE DISTANCE—another important factor. Six furlongs? A mile? A mile-and - quarter? He likes speed horses for longer distances. So does Julie Fink, one of the Speed Boys. Speed horses are no good in shorter races where they quit. They're better horses in longer races.

You can't win 34 out of 35 years on luck. I've found that out. My system is to play nothing better than 10-to-1 shots—20-to-1 preferred. Most 8-to-5 favorites should be 4 to 1 anyhow. Or maybe longer.

Concerning Thoroughbreds

A thoroughbred race horse is a peculiar animal He is twice as big as a lion or a tiger. He can outrun both. His average weight is around 1,100 pounds.

He is one of the finest-looking animals in the animal kingdom. Yet he isn't as smart as a cow. A cow gets hooked up in a barbed wire fence, remains still and moos plaintively until help arrives. Not the thoroughbred. He tears himself apart trying to get loose.

A horse is the toughest animal to teach anything—far in back of the chimpanzee, gibbon monkey, cape, elephant, dog, seal, etc. We got our dope some time ago from the American Natural History museum, the Bronx zoo, Ray Ditmars, Dr. Hornaday and Johnny Kieran.

Also the thoroughbred is about as tough as a sick rabbit. Blow on him—and he withers. We barely squeezed the horse into the 10th spot.

Both Dev Milburn and Tommy Hitchcock used to tell me how dumb polo ponies were But a thoroughbred is usually dead game—not always—fast and something to look at.

I have never seen a good-looking thoroughbred finish second or third when I was betting on him to win. Certain established liars will tell you I am wrong You don't have to believe them.

You can imagine how Citation looked to his backers at Laurel last spring when he was beaten by Saggy at 1 to 10.

Santa Anita and Hollywood are both run with a certain touch and precision that New York lacks. Dr. Charles Strub is on hand early. So are Gwin Wilson, Hugh Blue and other officials. They are usually in at least hours before the first race is run.

But the important part is that Santa Anita has a full share of $100,000, $50,000 and $10,000 races all set up to lure horse-owners trying to break even. Citation practically blew $200,000 in getting injured in a push-over race.

I had hoped he would be the exception. Man O' War was withdrawn because there were signs of leg trouble—Count Fleet broke down—now the brilliant Citation has to be retired in the middle of Fort Knox and the mint.

● and THERE THEY GO!

● Down in Florida where palm trees grow like wildflowers, thousands of avid fans are thronging the Biscayne Bay kennels where another thrill-packed season of dog racing is under way.

Racing greyhounds, fleet aristocracy of dogdom, are being groomed for their swift but fruitless chase after an elusive rabbit—the bunny they never catch.

The dogs are as carefully groomed for their track performance as any "Citation." But despite the excitement of the chase, the greyhound's life is a dull and rigidly routined affair. His day starts at 6 a. m. with a leisurely walk, and from then until post time he just exists through a succession of ordeals like brushing, combing, massaging and grooming.

From 6 p. m. until just before post time the dogs are kept in kennels (left) while veterinarians make a final check and kennel masters line up in the stalls.

Final check (in circle) is given by William Moore, presiding judge, as patrol judge, Wally Henderson, holds the dog.

...Y'RE OFF! The starter has released the ki...liberating the hounds, and the race is ...e greyhounds are in hot and panting ...of the rabbit, not one of them will they ...tch.

...some mishap or miracle a dog did ...to catch the bunny he would find he ...eat it. For it is a tin rabbit (below), ...electricity. The mechanical lure em... modern dog racing was first used

● Thundering down the track after the dummy bunny, these fleet greyhounds cause as much excitement as their equine counterparts. "Beachcomber" is top racing dog in this country. He won 12 out of 13 starts in the 1947 season.

THERE ARE MORE than creamy potatoes to the following recipe. With the additional ingredients used to glorify them, you may use them for a light lunch or supper.

Stuffed Idaho Surprises
(Serves 6)

- 3 Idaho potatoes, baked
- 6 frankfurters, diced
- 1 cup diced celery
- 1 small onion
- 2 to 3 tablespoons shortening
- ½ pound quick-melting cheese

Saute the frankfurters, celery and onion in shortening; add a little water and steam until celery is done. Allow water to evaporate. Cut baked potatoes lengthwise and remove potato from skin. Mash the potato, adding seasoning and milk until they are creamy and smooth. Fill potato shell with frankfurter mixture; then a thin slice of cheese and top with the mashed potato. Place in a moderate (350 degree) oven until tops are lightly browned, about 15 to 20 minutes.

Escalloped Spinach
(Serves 10)

- 2 eggs, well beaten
- 2 cups milk
- 2 cups cracker crumbs
- 4 tablespoons melted butter
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 2 cups cooked spinach

Mix all ingredients thoroughly, reserving about ⅓ cup of buttered crumbs for the top. Place in a buttered casserole and cover with crumbs. Bake in a slow oven (325 degree) until crumbs are browned and the mixture is set in the center, about 35 minutes

French-Fried Cauliflower
(Serves 6 to 8)

- 4½ cups cooked cauliflowerets
- 2 eggs, slightly beaten
- 1 cup dry bread crumbs

Dip cauliflower into slightly beaten eggs, roll in bread crumbs and let stand at least one-half hour.

Cauliflower will look prettier and taste better when you serve it with canned tomato sauce and a bit of Parmesan cheese as a pep-up touch. This may also be used as an idea for a vegetable platter, adding green beans or peas to surround the cauliflower.

Fry in deep, hot fat (350 degree until brown. Drain on absorbent paper.

Broccoli Souffle
(Serves 4)

- 3 eggs, separated
- ⅓ cup hot, thick white sauce
- 1 cup chopped, cooked broccoli
- 2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese

Beat egg yolks and add to white sauce. Add broccoli and cheese. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into a buttered baking dish and bake in a moderate (350 degree) oven for 50 minutes. Serve with cheese sauce: make two cups thick white sauce with three tablespoons butter, three tablespoons flour and two cups milk. Season with one-half teaspoon salt, one-eighth teaspoon pepper and add one-half cup grated American cheese. Cook in double boiler until cheese melts.

Fried Brussels Sprouts
(Serves 6)

- 1 onion, chopped
- 3 tablespoons butter
- 4 cups cooked Brussels Sprouts

Cook onion in butter until tender, add sprouts and toss gently until heated thoroughly.

Use These Hints to Make Vegetables Appetizing

Hollow out the halves of eggplant. Stuff the shells with a combination of cooked eggplant mixed with sauteed mushrooms, onion and cream sauce. Cover with crumbs and bake in a casserole in a hot (400°F.) oven for 20 minutes.

Onions may be hollowed out and filled with mushrooms and cheese sauce, then baked in a covered casserole in a moderate oven for an hour.

Beets will be zippy if you cut cooked beets into thin strips and heat with ⅓ cup top milk, 2½ teaspoons horseradish and 1 teaspoon salt.

Cauliflower leaves should not be discarded. Cook, covered for 15 minutes and add them to white sauce.

Wax beans will be appetizing when served with toasted, slivered almonds.

Chives or mint, chopped and added to melted butter will do flavorsome things to cooked carrots.

Cost of U. N. Is Low Compared With War

If the cost of maintaining the United Nations and 12 of its specialized agencies for one year were spread over the entire world, each person would be paying about ten cents a year. The total cost of operation is $225,251,635.

This sum is only about one-one thousandth of the annual cost of the second World war, and two-thirds of the bill goes for care of refugees and displaced persons.

ALFALFA AND CLOVER SEED IMPORTS EASE THE SHORTAGE

Record or near-record imports of alfalfa, red clover, alsike clover and sweetclover seed this fall may lessen the pinch of short supplies and high prices for these seeds, according to E S Dyas, extension agronomist at Iowa State College.

He bases his statement on a report made by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics crop reporting board earlier this month. A record high of imports of alfalfa seed for any month was established in November when 3,630,700 pounds were imported Of these imports, 94 percent were from Canada.

While the large imports of alfalfa seed have not yet had a lowering effect on prices paid to growers, big imports of other seeds have lowered prices paid to growers. Dyas points out. Almost a million pounds of red clover seed have been imported since July 1, representing 14 times as much as was imported all of last year and compared to only a trickle of 5,500 pounds imported on the average for the past 5 years.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Truman Proposes Keeping Pledges In State of Nation Congress Talk; Mercy Killing Has Public Support

EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

CONGRESS:
Big Order

In calm, unhurried manner, President Truman outlined to the 81st congress his legislative proposals. To the surprise of no one he asked legislators to enact virtually every recommendation he made during his election campaign He called for more taxes, authority to restore economic controls, a broad program of social legislation

ALONG WITH corporations, individuals in the middle and higher-income brackets would share in the task of providing the four billion dollars more annual revenue which Mr. Truman says the government must have.

These are the major recommendations made by the President in his "state of the union" message

INFLATION—Widen government control over bank and consumer credit, exports and transportation allocations, extend and strengthen rent control Grant authority to regulate commodity speculation, allocate scarce key materials, control certain wages and prices, if necessary.

TAXES—Raise four billion dollars additional revenue for the government, mainly by taxing corporations, but also by boosting estate and gift taxes, consider increasing income taxes for the middle and upper pay brackets.

LABOR—Repeal the Taft-Hartley law and re-enact old Wagner act—but with bans against jurisdictional strikes and secondary boycotts and some provision for avoiding strikes in general industry. Boost minimum wage from 40 to 75 cents an hour.

BUSINESS — Strengthen anti-trust laws by closing loopholes that permit monopolistic mergers and consolidations.

FARM—Use price supports to keep farmers at a fair economic level.

OTHERS—Extend social security; set up system of pre-paid medical insurance. Aid state educational systems. Pass same civil rights proposals made to 80th congress. Push power, flood control and navigation projects on the rivers. Maintain armed forces "sufficient to deter aggression." Pass universal training legislation.

MERCY KILLING:
Has Advocates

Euthanasia, a euphemism for "mercy killing", gained important support in New York state where hundreds of Protestant and Jewish religious leaders petitioned for legislation legalizing the practice.

THE QUESTION has agitated humanitarians and sociologists for centuries and there are many cases on record where mercy killings have been committed. Despite legal barriers and penalties, the record in such cases, for the most part, shows that juries are inclined to look with some leniency on the person who kills another to put him or her "out of his misery."

On an appeal to the emotions alone, much convincing argument for euthanasia may be presented. But, considered from all other angles with individual rights, possibility of criminal intent and other such factors involved, the practice could become highly dangerous.

The New York group advocating the measure included 379 Protestant and Jewish ministers of the Empire state, the largest group ever publicly to advocate euthanasia. The practice is now punishable as murder in all the 48 states. The petition was sent to every member of the New York legislature.

THE MINISTERS' petition, sponsored by the Euthanasia Society of America, declared that the "ending of the physical existence of an individual at his request, when afflicted with an incurable disease which causes extreme suffering is under proper safeguards not only medically indicated but also in accord with the most civilized and humane ethics and the highest concepts and practices of religion."

The safeguards: The sufferer must submit a petition, duly attested by himself and his physician, asking for euthanasia. This must be presented to a court of records which will appoint an investigative committee of physicians. If this committee agrees, the court may permit euthanasia.

New Star

Dorothy Malone, in typical Hollywood garb — that is for picture releases such as this—was the first film player to be accorded stardom in 1949. Warner Brothers, her bosses, elevated her to filmland's top pinnacle for her performance in the film "One Sunday Afternoon."

CASTE SYSTEM:
Officers Adamant

The superiority which many army officers feel and affect over the G. I. came graphically to light in Berlin There, in the biggest American club in the city, U. S. enlisted men were barred—but German frauleins were admitted.

G. I.'s and civilians got hot as the proverbial two-dollar pistol. Enlisted men won a temporary victory when the board of governors of the club suspended the month-old ban pending a special meeting to thresh out the matter.

One lieutenant-colonel epitomized the officer viewpoint. Ninety per cent of enlisted men were all right, he conceded, but it was the other 10 per cent which caused the ban.

"THERE ARE 10 per cent of the enlisted men," he said, "who do not know how to behave." Then he added the clincher: "We don't want these enlisted barbarians with officers and ladies." Evidently possessed of the power of his convictions, he asserted he would resign from the club if enlisted guests were permitted.

Significant was the reaction of the German civilians. In effect, they asked if such tactics had any place in the teaching of democracy. As one employe put it: "The ban simply means that everybody in Berlin can come into the club except an American enlisted man. That is not our idea of being American."

HARMONY:
Some Question

Congress was off to a rough start. The hope of general "harmony," expressed by President Truman and some congressional leaders, grew dim at the start.

Republican Senator Vandenberg charged Democratic colleagues with violating the spirit of bipartisanship in foreign affairs.

Committee assignments provided the spark which set off the blast of discord. When the Democrats decided to take eight of the 13 seats on the foreign relations committee, the Republicans cried "foul" and uttered their protests.

SENATOR VANDENBERG, who will be replaced as committee chairman by Senator Connally (D., Tex.) called it a "political decision." Senator Morse (D., Ore.) was less restrained He charged that the implications are that the Democratic party proposes to play politics with war and peace."

Democrats denied any partisanship, claimed they were entitled to more seats because they have a bigger majority than the Republicans had.

Vice-President Barkley regretted the "controversy." He told reporters that the bigger Democratic majority will in no way affect the bipartisan course of the committee.

CHINA REDS:
No Comment

"The winners tell the funny jokes —the losers holler 'deal!' "

But the apparent winners in China's civil war weren't saying a word, and the nationalist government's peace offensive appeared stalled against a wall of Communist silence.

From the government side came a rising tide of clamor for a truce and a negotiated settlement. The Communists, who have been winning, continued to say nothing.

Nanking reported growing anxiety among Chinese who had predicted quick Communist response to Chiang Kai-shek's New Year offer to mediate. It was predicted that the Red answer, if and when it came, would be a demand for the government armies to lay down their arms.

In Peiping, a group of delegates to the national assembly sent the Communist leader a message urging an immediate cease fire order because, they said, "the people cannot endure any further suffering."

Meanwhile, American position, as indicated by two statements, seemed uncertain, or divided. Vice-Admiral Oscar C. Badger, commander of U. S. naval forces in the western Pacific, denied rumors of a withdrawal of "American forces from China." He declared the rumor was based on reports the marines had terminated their lease on Shantung university campus where they maintain their barracks."

"Wishbone" Magic

Puzzling over the amazing power of a chicken wishbone—that's going to make someone's fondest wish come true — are movie stars Dan Dailey and Celeste Holm. The trio call attention to the nationwide "Wishbone Contest" being sponsored by by the Poultry and Egg National Board.

WISHBONE:
Send It In

Perhaps you've never thought about it, but there must be a particular reason you like chicken every Sunday. Now, if you'll only think about that reason, tell it to a judge, and it happens to be declared the best submitted, you will find your fondest wish coming true

THERE IS a big "Wishbone Contest" going on in these United States and the national prize is the granting of the winning contestant's own "most-desired" wish. The contest is sponsored by the Poultry and Egg National Board of Chicago, and the only requirement is that a chicken wishbone—a real one—must accompany each entry. Anyone in the United States is eligible for the contest.

Contestants must write, in fewer than 100 words, their reasons "Why I like chicken every Sunday." They can send entries in the form of an essay, limerick or slogan—but each entry must be accompanied by a real chicken wishbone and the contestant's "most desired" wish.

THREE REGIONAL winners will receive a trip to Hollywood to witness the final judging, which will take place at a gala chicken-dinner celebration. During the Hollywood stay, the regional winners will be honored at the "wishbone premiere" of "Chicken Every Sunday."

NEED SHERLOCK HOLMES

Thief Makes off With Pound Notes

British authorities would be very happy had the renowned Sherlock Holmes been real and available, since the country was facing two aggravating and puzzling problems.

Someone had stolen seven sheets of one-pound sterling notes, amounting to approximately $560, from the extraordinarily guarded bank of England printing works.

As an added poser, someone had been going around smashing stained glass windows in the Wolverhampton area of the Midlands. Circumspect, well-behaved Britons couldn't understand how anyone could do either of these reprehensible things.

An idea of how hard-to-cater may be the pound-note thief is provided in the fact that the money, stolen last summer, had only begun to circulate recently.

Marshall Plan Has Halted The Spread of Communism

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WASHINGTON.—When this country was struggling into early manhood, it was clear to our statesmen that if the tree of western democracy were to flourish and bring forth fruit in its season, it would have to be shielded from foreign interference.

The Monroe doctrine was enunciated. It was defensive, negative rather than positive; it simply said to the world: hold what you have, but take no more. It was a large order for a young nation. It covered a lot of territory. It worked.

The world grew older and smaller. A new, powerful anti-democratic force arose. American leaders decided that if the tree we had planted now in full fruit, were to continue to live and flourish, the ramparts we watched would have to embrace and protect our friends whose liberties were threatened even more immediately than our own.

BAUKHAGE

The Marshall plan was enunciated in June of 1947. After thorough debate in congress, it finally was given sinews on June 28 of this year.

What is the score today?

Mere announcement of the idea is credited with checking Red revolution in Italy, with blocking the tide of Communist aggression in western Europe.

Now, after only seven months of functioning, I believe that objective observers will admit with Economic Cooperation Administrator Paul Hofman, a hard-headed businessman, that "it has not only stopped the march of Communism, but has turned the tide in the opposite direction." Only recently, Yugoslavia drew up agreements for trade with western Europe, thus smashing one hole in the iron curtain

The ECA is just what it was labelled—"enlightened self-interest." To a chaotic and jittery Europe, it helped to bring, a 25 per cent increase in agricultural production over the previous year; industrial production above the pre-war level of 1938; relaxation of inflationary pressures in all the ERP countries except France and Greece.

Now what?

To convince our people that the game is worth the candle, that whatever the cost, this is the first bloodless war ever fought, that it is cheap insurance against a shooting war.

To convince congress that the charges, among others, that ECA is not being efficiently operated, that big business is being favored and little business slighted are unjust, or if the charges are true, correct them.

To Speak Or Not To Speak

Before congress convened, Washington was enjoying its usual influx of national conventions, among them two groups concerned with the oral cavity—the dentists and the speech-teachers of the nation. Although I was invited to attend sessions of both groups, I exercised my jaws at only one—the speech instructors' meeting.

The job of the speech instructor is, of course, to get the learners to use words to express ideas—a difficult task. Not that the raw material is lacking. The dictionary is full of words, and the air is thick with ideas. More difficult is getting the words out of the dictionary and the ideas out of the air into the learners' heads

The next step is to get the learner to understand the meaning of the words he uses and then to translate them into ideas which somebody else can understand — aye! — there's the rub!

Consequently the speech instructors have not only a difficult, but a hazardous profession. Leaving a man alone with a lot of words is like leaving him in a laboratory with a lot of breakable atoms.

We know from recent reports that some of the scientists working with atomic energy go blind.

It's a wonder to me that more speech instructors don't go deaf.

I suppose speech teachers also teach that most useful corollary art—the use of words to conceal one's meaning. It is one I practice arduously.

After a decade and a half of broadcasting, most of my listeners haven't the slightest idea of what my politics are.

One point which was stressed at the speech conference was that the competition for power which ends in strife—domestic, industrial, international—is due, chiefly to improper communication. I agree with that assumption.

There is no excuse for this in this day and age It was different when a Cro-Magnon appeared at the door of a Neanderthaler cave in the year 23,000 B. C. — the mastodon on which he was riding having broken a tusk or an axle or something—and all the poor man wanted was to borrow an extra tusk. But since the Cro-Magnon was unable to communicate his perfectly peaceful desire, and before he could present his driver's license or his membership card in the loyal order of moose, for identity, the Neanderthaler, after shoving his wife in the corner and calling his dogs, would step out and welcome the unfortunate visitor with a hearty wallop on the cranium

The result was probably a war between the Neanderthalers and the Cro-Magnons in which the Neanderthaler had a fifty-fifty chance of eating Cro.

Even if the innocent visitor had been able to grunt without mis-pronouncing his consonants and lacerating his labials, and even if his inhospitable host had listened to him, that host probably could not have digested his plea—as easily, at least as he later digested him

We have words to work with, and thus are able to fashion the tools of communication. But unless the speech teachers (and all teachers) furnish the skills for the use of those words, the effort is in vain.

Unless the idea behind what we believe in can be communicated, (and it can't be, unless we agree on the meaning of words) it withers on the vine.

Thus, the speech teacher must teach his pupils not only the medium of communication, but the means of using it— and convince them it has concrete value.

In the field of labor relations at home, or international understanding abroad, we never can hope to achieve a real bulwark for democracy unless a mental contact can be made, communications established—words and ideas joined so that they have a universal meaning and the message they convey can be digested

As Eric Peterson, general secretary-treasurer of the International Association of Machinists, put it: "The need for better lines of communication between labor and management, and between the conciliator and disputing parties is a distinct challenge. For basically, the failure of these two groups to iron out their disputes without ill-will or violence is part and parcel of the broader problem of discord which plagues the world today in its quest for peace."

Peterson went on to say that a starting point for speech teachers might be to pay less attention to Demosthenes who became a great orator by practicing shouting until he could be heard above the roaring of the waves, and a little more to developing men whose voices may not be loud, but whose skilfull persuasion can be heard above the misunderstanding in men's hearts.

Speaking for management at the conference, Robert Chester Smith, director of industrial and personnel relations for the Pullman Standard Car Manufacturing company of Chicago, expressed his belief that each of the three members of the industrial triumvirate—the investor, the manager and the laboring man—"has been and continues to be too short sighted. Each has been looking at the problem through its own specially-conditioned glasses, and has been unable to see either upward, downward or sidewise. and unfortunately not very far ahead."

John Q. Jennings, head of Industrial Relations for the Singer Manufacturing company, told an interesting story about how New York's great tugboat dispute last winter had been settled. The negotiations had dragged on for hours until well after midnight. Management and union men had basically agreed on the point at issue, but whenever they tried to phrase the agreement on paper, they got entangled in a maze of complicated terminology.

Shortly after 1 a. m., one of the negotiators happened to say in simple language what everyone else was trying to say in technical language. Somebody had a brilliant idea:

"Why not put it just that way in the contract?" They did—a two-sentence paragraph in ordinary rank and file English was inserted—a departure Jennings described as something brand-new in union contracts.

'Yet Without Sin'

Lesson for January 30, 1949

YOU will never feel the current if you never swim upstream. If you are a drifter through life you can hardly know what the word "temptation" means. And Jesus was no drifter. If ever a powerful purpose, devotion to God, a noble mind and a pure heart could set a man free from all temptations, Jesus would have been that man. But he had his temptations all the same. After the great day of his baptism, when the heavens opened and he felt the Holy Spirit as plainly as a bird from the sky alighting on his shoulder, we are told that he was "full of the Holy Spirit." Surely no temptation could reach him now! Yet the Spirit led him to the wilderness where Satan waited for him.

The Devil Is Smart

SATAN is a persistent devil. He never takes No for an answer. he will be back again with the same temptation in another package It was so with Jesus. We must not think that Jesus was tempted to low and ugly sins. People are tempted on the level where they live

After the Baptism, if not before, he was fully awake to the fact that he was God's beloved Son, that it was his responsibility to begin the "Kingdom of God;" he knew he had a position and a power that no one else on earth had ever had. The problem was: How should he use this position and this power?

Each of the three temptations in the wilderness had something to do with that problem. Two of the temptations, at least, were not to do anything wrong in itself. Each time Jesus was tempted to choose something less than the best. And choosing less than the best, when the best can be had, is sin.

All Temptation Sounds Good

"TURN stones into bread," the tempter said And why not? People were hungry all around; Jesus grew up in a land where most people were lucky to get one square meal a day, let alone three Jesus would be the Divine Leader o the Kingdom, the Founder of the New Age Why not make it the Age of Plenty? Why not abolish hunger from the earth? It could be done, it sounds good.

So does that other temptation — "Throw yourself down, the angels will see that you are not hurt." Perhaps many worshippers at the Temple expected that the Messiah, God's King to be, would fly down out of a cloud.

Then that temptation which seems at first reading so ridiculous—fall down and worship Satan. It was not so ridiculous as it appears. What did Jesus want but to be King of Kings and Lord of Lords? What difference does it make how we attain our ambitions, if we only reach them? All other world-conquerors had achieved the pinnacles of power by "worshipping Satan," that is by using violence and trickery

But Jesus, being full of the Holy Spirit, knew that not everything that sounds good, is good.

He saw clearly that not even he could bring in the Kingdom of God simply by feeding people, or astonishing them with aerial stunts, and still less by using those ancient methods of the world-conquerors, the tools of Satan, violence and lies

Defense Weapon

JESUS met his great enemy and beat him down with a single weapon. Every time, Jesus comes out with a quotation from the Bible, incidentally always from Deuteronomy, evidently a favorite book with him. We have the same weapon at our disposal today, and more besides.

There is nothing magical in a Scripture quotation. The point is not that Jesus had memorized these verses so that he could quote them; anybody could do that even without believing a word of them.

What Jesus did was to make those truths his own, they were part of his mind, actually his own convictions. Do you really want to rise proof against temptations? Do as Jesus did make God's ideas your own The sharpest lie will blunt itself against the keen edge of Truth

TOYS that walk have always been sure winners. That is why you will get as much fun making this clown wheeltoy as some youngster will have playing with it. The legs are fastened to the wheel. As the wheel turns, the legs go up and down. The pattern offered below provides a quick and easy method of building this colorful toy. No special tools, skill or materials are needed. The pattern specifies exactly what to use and where to use each piece. A few pieces of wood, a dowel, wire, clothes hanger and a few dabs of paint is about all you need. In order to insure painting the clown properly, the decorating guides on the pattern are traced directly on the wood. These are then painted the colors the pattern suggests.

I STILL DON'T LIKE IT, FRANKIE

By COLIN DELL

Frankie had big ideas but when he struck what he thought was real pay dirt, Louie rebelled, albeit meekly. Everything went smoothly enough, but that, as far as Louie was concerned, was what was wrong—it was too smooth.

FRANKIE LIBOLD switched off the ignition and the green sedan glided to the curb and stopped, only a few feet from the winding footpath in Jackson Park.

"How's that for timing, Louie?" he asked in a suave, cocky voice that matched his personality. "I told you the old boy's as regular in his habits as a night watchman. I ain't been clockin' him all week for nothin'."

Louie Ferensic eased a .38 automatic from his shoulder holster and dropped it into his right-hand coat pocket. He looked like an undertaker and talked like he looked. "I still don't like it, Frankie," he said slowly. "I still don't like it."

Frankie's hard black eyes gleamed contempt. He snorted derisively, then turned his attention to the figure advancing along the graveled footpath.

He was an old man, but his bearing was upright and dignified. His progress was leisurely and the reason was evident. It was a white cane he carried in his right hand. The tap-tap-tap of the metal-tipped walking stick rang clear in the afternoon air as the old man felt his way along the brick-bordered path. He was within ten feet of the car when Frankie Libold and Louie Ferensic closed in, one on either side.

"All right, gran'pop, just take it easy and do as you're told and you won't get hurt," Frankie Libold said. He prodded the old fellow with a blunt-nosed revolver. "Just keep on walkin' and act natural."

The blind man faltered for an instant and a shadow flicked across his face. Not fear, perhaps, but something akin to it. Then Louie Ferensic grasped his arm and urged him forward and into the car.

He remained silent during the forty-five minute drive to the west side, seemingly stunned by the unexpected. He allowed himself to be led to the second-floor hide-out without causing a disturbance. He sat quietly while Frankie Libold adjusted the handcuffs that shackled him to a low iron cot.

The two gunmen moved to a window overlooking the street and talked in low tones. "You and your hunches," said Frankie. He sneered at his morose associate. "It came off without a hitch, just like I said it would. And if this caper don't bring us a hundred grand my name ain't Frankie Libold."

"Maybe so," said Louie, "but I still don't like it." He shot a glance at the old man where he sat disconsolate on the bed. "I only hope his old lady keeps her head and leaves the G-men out of it."

The pair talked on in husky monotones while they kept an eye on the cars crossing the busy intersection below. The bells of a Catholic church tolled the Angelus. Sounds began filtering up from the bowling alley on the first floor—the sharp click as the ball hit the polished surface of the alley, the echoing crash of the pins. The acrid exudations of a varnish factory tainted the air.

Frankie Libold stretched lazily and suppressed a yawn. "I'm going out and get a paper," he told Louie. "Soon as I come back we'll get down to business."

He was back again in less than fifteen minutes, and he came in waving a newspaper. "She talked," he growled, tossing the paper to Louie. "Get a load of those headlines." "RETIRED INDUSTRIALIST BELIEVED KIDNAPPED," Louie read. And in smaller print: C. M. Carter, blind millionaire, disappears during daily stroll in Jackson Park.

It was a two-column spread, complete with diagrams and indignant editorials.

Louie Ferensic dropped the paper in disgust. "Wha'd I tell you?" he demanded accusingly. "Now what are we going to do?"

"Do? Why, the same thing we started out to do, you idiot!" Frankie snapped. He walked to a table and picked up a plain sheet of typewriter paper. "Get him something to write on," he told Louie. "We'll get this ransom note done now and put it in the mail. She'll pay off or else."

Frankie Libold studied it carefully. "It's all full of holes from them nails," he announced finally.

Louie pulled an empty drawer from a dresser and laid it upside down on the bed. Frankie started to lay the paper on it, then drew back. "Can't you get anything better? This thing's got nails coming up through the bottom." His smoldering eyes raked across his unresponsive partner. "Skip it," he growled. "Just skip it."

He slapped the paper down on the rough surface and thrust a fountain pen into the blind man's hand. "Here." He took the hand and guided it to the paper. "Feel around on this so you can tell what you're doin', then write exactly what I tell you to write. And watch those nails, you're punching a hole in the paper."

The sensitive fingers of the retired industrialist explored the makeshift desk, then the pen in his hand came to rest at the proper point. Frankie began dictating—slowly, for the blind man seemed to have trouble finding a smooth surface to write on. He kept shifting and rearranging the paper, this way and that, but finally the note was completed.

Frankie Libold studied it carefully. "It's all full of holes from them nails," he announced finally, "but at least she'll know it's his handwriting."

He put it in a plain envelope, addressed it, and attached a special delivery stamp. "Take it over on the south side and mail it," he told Louie. "And be careful you're not picked up on the way."

A near-sleepless night left the kidnappers in worse spirits than ever. They snapped at each other like dogs "Get out of here and get yourself some breakfast," Frankie ordered gruffly. "And don't be all day about it. I'm hungry too."

Louie Ferensic yanked his hat down low on his forehead and stalked out without a word.

Frankie stared after him, his face a twisted mask of hatred. He laughed deep in his throat. "Still don't like it, eh?" he muttered half to himself. "I'll give you something you'll like even less after we collect that hundred G's, and it won't be half the money, either."

He paced to and fro between the window and the door for a few minutes, then sat down at the table and began playing solitaire. He was arranging the cards for a second game when he heard footsteps in the hall outside.

The door swung inward and Louie Ferensic stood framed in the opening. Then suddenly he came hurtling into the room, catapulted by the foot of a man standing directly behind him

"Don't shoot, Frankie!" Louie screamed as he fell. But he might just as well have saved his breath. Frankie Libold was covered by half a dozen guns before he had time to move.

Several of the plain clothes men frisked Frankie and relieved him of his gun and the handcuff key. Another, obviously in charge, crossed the room to the bed and released the blind man.

The old fellow was smiling in a pleased manner. "I see you got my message in time, officer," he said, seeking his rescuer with sightless eyes.

"We did, Mr. Carter, and I think that was a pretty clever idea, too—punching it in braille on the ransom note. All we had to do was locate a bowling alley on an intersection, with a Catholic church and a varnish factory in the same neighborhood, and that wasn't hard at all."

Louie Ferensic glared at his gaping partner. "You see?" he said spitefully. "I told you I didn't like it."

MIRROR of your MIND ● ● ● Social Efficiency

By Lawrence Gould

Can we tell when someone is about to "go to pieces"?

Answer: Not by any one specific set of symptoms, says Psychologist Donald W. Dysinger of the University of Nebraska. The best indication that someone is headed for a break-down is a "reduction in social efficiency"—that is, a lessened ability to get on with other people and/or to keep up with his job or profession. The essential problem with all "maladjusted" people is to understand the individual as a person—not to label him with "diagnostic tags." For it is when someone ceases to be himself that he's ripe for treatment.

Do some people really like to quarrel?

Answer: Yes, for several reasons. A weak person, for example, may feel that he has to pick a quarrel every now and then to prove he's not afraid to stand up for his rights, while one with a secret vein of cruelty may deliberately get others angry to give him a better excuse for trying to hurt them. Finally, there's the neurotic who goes about making trouble, not because he is really a fighter, but because he has a deep, unconscious need to suffer which he gratifies by making people dislike and abuse him.

Should you let a child know his illness scares you?

Answer: Never, if you possibly can help it! The feeling of insecurity he'll get from seeing you show "weakness" may hurt him worse than the pain he has to suffer, and that applies to the after-effects of an illness as much as the illness itself. Dr. Morton A. Seidenfeld of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis says the effect of this illness on a child's mind is largely the product of his parents' expressed fears of what it may do to him, or still worse, hearing them say "how terrible it is to be a cripple."

Brain Operation Relieves Grief

By Dr. James W. Barton

I HAVE written several times about the operation known as prefrontal lobotomy, where the nerves supplying front lobes or portions of the brain are cut, giving great relief to patients suffering from symptoms which arise in these lobes. These symptoms are grief and great anxiety or fear.

In the early series of cases, the operation was performed with only one object in view—namely, to relieve the patients of their deep grief and depression.

There was no thought at first that the patient ever would be well enough mentally to leave the institution and return home.

Once relieved of grief and depression, these patients became more orderly in their personal habits, took no responsibility whatever, and became in fact almost like children. Later it was found that some of these patients received even more benefit than the loss of their symptoms of grief and depression and began to take part in games and even do light work about the institution.

Almost every week now, brilliant results from prefrontal lobotomy are being reported. Not only are a large percentage of these cases able to return to their homes, but also many are able to return to their former occupations

In the "Connecticut State Medical Journal," Drs Jane E. Oltman, S. Brody and S. Friedman report that 107 patients have undergone prefrontal lobotomy at the Fairfield state hospital in Connecticut since May, 1946. Most of these patients had chronic mental illness, with an extremely unfavorable prognosis (not likely to ever recover).

"The results of lobotomy were encouraging in that 86 of the patients showed some improvement, 15 remained unimproved and five died.

Thirty of the patients were so improved that they were able to leave the hospital on an extended visit.

★ HEALTH NOTES ★

The first symptoms of heart disease are shortness of breath and pain under the breastbone, but those symptoms can be caused by other conditions than a failing heart.

One of the safeguards to protect a sane individual from being committed to a mental hospital is that he must first be certified as insane by two physicians.

Two factors are to be considered before committing a person as insane: the personal liberty or freedom of the individual and the safety of others.

The great majority of persons, had they facial defects or deformities of body, would have a persecution complex and carry a chip on their shoulder.

A Song on a Bare Bough

I HEARD a valiant cardinal
Dark-red against the winter dawn;
He whistled from a leafless tree
Upon a barren lawn.

The tiny dauntless splotch of red
Shot up a challenge straight and high:
A rocket-burst of silver stars
To shower a winter sky.

The little brave, intrepid thing,
A conqueror of cold and night,
He drenched the bare boughs suddenly
With color and with light:

A triumph and a victory
That I have come to understand.
I laughed, a broken laugh, and took
Life once more by the hand.

Corduroys in Color—Since our last survey of male modes, corduroy jackets have moved up into first place for sartorial honors. Formerly, the boys were wearing them in light tan only. Now, they've branched out and you girls swoon for those collarless style corduroy jackets in maroon, green or gray. What are they trying to do, anyway—steal your thunder?

BOTH STORAGE TANKS WENT DRY AS PUMP STOPPED

Klemme Was In Extreme Danger From Fire With No Water

Residents have been without city water for six days due to failure of the deep-well turbine pump at the pumping station which was turned off Thursday, at which time a call was sent to a Des Moines pump company to send repair men and a truck derrick.

Due to the blizzard and blocked roads the Des Moines crew and their equipment were unable to reach Klemme until on Saturday and they worked almost continuously to lift out the 250 feet of pumping apparatus to get at the trouble.

Monday all of the casings, shafts and turbine pump had been lifted out and the repairs made. The pumping equipment was being again lowered into the well when the gas engine, operating cables on the truck, gave out, causing another delay until a mechanic from Des Moines could bring up a bearing and repair the engine. Work was again resumed and as this is being written Tuesday afternoon, the pump is about ready to operate again.

The pump had not been operating properly for some time, as all water users in Klemme have noticed that the pressure has been very low for the past two weeks. It has also been stated that the pump had been vibrating for some time, which caused the four or five tons of weight to loosen and unscrew one of the casings near the bottom over 3 inches, throwing the pump out of adjustment.

Great Fire Hazard

Due to the fact that both large storage tanks had not been checked. both tanks were bone-dry which put Klemme "on the spot" as far as fire protection was concerned. The fire truck carries a couple of hundred gallons of water for some fires and 4 or 5 small chemical hand extinguishers, but that meager amount of protection was practically nil. The hazard of having a major fire was harder on the nerves of Klemme residents than going without ample water for a few days.

Supplies Water

Kenny Medin and the boys at the Creamery win the bouquet this week for their splendid cooperation in the emergency by providing water for all who needed it. The men at the creamery even hauled water in cream cans to business places and residents where it was most needed. Others went to the creamery with buckets and cans for their supply. Others in town got their water from a few wells, cisterns and many even melted snow to get needed water.

Klemme residents are real thankful that a fire did not break out during the time the pump was out of commission. We are dependent on our water supply in combating fires as our truck has very little chemical to combat a large blaze.

THE FROG SAT ON A LOG

Many readers have written to me about the familiar -og words, such as cog, dog, frog, hog, log. "We are utterly confused," a Connecticut speech teacher writes. "Some of the -og words sound right with the 'ah' sound; but others sound silly unless we pronounce them with an 'aw' sound. Why is this? And please give us a rule to go by."

In parts of New England, particularly in and around Boston, many people pronounce all the -og words with the short "o" sound, which is equivalent to the Italian "ah." Such words as cog, dog, log, frog, hog are pronounced: Kahg, dahg, lahg, frahg, hahg.

But elsewhere in the nation, for some reason which I am as yet unable to explain, the -og words fall into three groups: (1) those words in which the "ah" sound prevails; (2) those words in which the "aw" sound (nearly as broad as in "law") prevails; (3) those words which are about equally divided between the two sounds, some people saying "ah," and equal numbers saying "aw."

For example, in the speech of the country as a whole these words are in group one (ah): Cog, jog, clog, flog, grog, agog, eggnog.

These words are in group two (aw): Bog, dog, frog, hog, log, catalog, dialog, epilog, monolog.

These words occur with either "ah" or "aw.": Fog, synagogue, demogog, pedagogue.

Thus, in Standard American speech, one might hear: He was grahggy from too much egg nahg; so, when he came to a jahg in the road, the fawg obscured his vision, and his car hit a lawg.

Most dictionaries recognize and sanction these differences as good American usage. A few, however, such as Funk and Wagnalls' and Winston's, list only the "ah" sound in all the words. This is inaccurate and unrealistic reporting, another instance of the way in which some dictionaries still dwell in the ox-cart age.

MIRROR of your MIND

Capacity To Love

By Lawrence Gould

Do brilliant people love more deeply than dull ones?

Answer: Not always, of course; the person who shows the most obvious brilliance often is too self-absorbed to love at all. But love is, as Shakespeare put it, "of imagination all compact," so that men and women of superior intelligence may both "see" more in the people they love and set up a richer if more complex relationship with them. The man to whom his wife is just "a good old gal" may be truer to her than a poet would be, but he won't appreciate her beauty or her talents as well, or get as much thrill from being married to her.

Can the spread of mental illness be blocked?

Answer: We can work toward that goal, at any rate, says Dr. Samuel H Kraines of the University of Illinois. "Preventive psychiatry" should try both to make people better able to endure strain, and to reduce the amount of strain they have to endure. This may be done by educating parents, removing unhealthy social and economic pressures, and providing facilities for nipping mental illness in the bud by early treatment. The ultimate purpose of psychiatry is not merely to cure sick minds but to cultivate "positive mental health."

Will confused dreams "make you nervous"?

Answer: No, but they may make you realize the existence of emotional disturbances which you've managed to repress when awake, though they do not always show what these are. For the difference between sleep and waking is that while you sleep your "self-control" relaxes and lets feelings which you have refused to recognize break through enough to mar your slumbers. This may make you "wake up tired," but it still acts as a safety-valve which on the whole relieves your inner tensions more than it intensifies them.

Famous Baseball Duels

IT HARDLY seems possible that in in less than two months several thousands of ballplayers will be headed for the sun again, south or west.

In the meanwhile, the hot stove league is getting hotter now that football is packed away where it belongs. And one stove league feature has been the argument involving Tris Speaker and Joe DiMaggio. Here's one leading example:

Grantland Rice

"Dear Sir: The other night we sat around and, after the inevitable late-hour discussion of the comparative abilites of Joe Louis and Jack Dempsey, naturally the chitchat switched to the all-time baseball team. One man averred that there should be a place for Joe DiMaggio. That he is such a great star that it seem ridiculous to bar him.

"It was pointed out that currently, and for the last 20 years or more, the all-time outfield has been made up of Ty Cobb, Babe Ruth and Tris Speaker, and which of those three could a fellow toss out in favor of DiMaggio, no matter how great Joe is. It was said we could throw out Speaker, that old Tris had been only a great fly-catcher and that he didn't really rank with Cobb and Ruth and DiMaggio.

When I got home, I got out the record book to look up Tris' records and I am convinced that DiMaggio is forever locked out of the all-time outfield. Surely, no one questions the rights of Cobb and Ruth and, after a bit of study, no one can query the right of Speaker to the center field spot, either.

"Now look In the 22 seasons, embracing 1907 through 1928, all Tris did was average 344 at the dish, in 2,789 games and after 10,208 times at bat, during which he got 3,515 hits. Only Cobb, Rabbit Maranville and Hans Wagner went to bat more than 10,000 times the only others in the history of the games who hit safely more than 3,000 times are such stars as Cap Anson, Cobb, Eddie Collins, Nap Lajoie, Wagner and Paul Waner. Even Ruth didn't make that category.

"The only others to top his lifetime batting record were Cobb, Rogers Hornsby, Dan Delahanty, Billy Hamilton and Willie Keeler. Ruth is two points back. Think of the other greats who couldn't bang .344 in their careers, and Tris did it for 22 years!

"He's in the book for hitting 50 or more doubles in five different years, showing his amazing speed, and a knack of taking the extra base that DiMaggio has He leads in the matter of two base hits, with 793. Aside from those figures, Speaker also shares the record for most assists from the outfield in one season—35. He once was guilty of perpetrating a pair of unassisted double plays in a season, and his mark of four triples in his three World Series stands alone.

"I'm sorry that DiMaggio can't make it, but the book won't yield. Speaker was good. It says so."

Caswell Adams."

Speaker vs. DiMaggio

The Speaker-DiMaggio duel is a tough one to analyze. In addition to being hard and timely hitters, both were great outfielders. On the defensive side alone, they were better than Cobb and Ruth. Both had better arms than Cobb and both were faster than the Babe.

Speaker had a better chance to show his all-around outfield ability than DiMaggio. He played in the day of the dead or at least deader ball. This gave him a chance for a much longer range.

Speaker was a star at going back for a ball—and so is DiMaggio. Both could also come in. Speaker was a master at fielding ground balls, perhaps the best in baseball.

No one would be more dangerous in a pinch than DiMaggio has been—with men on bases, waiting to be driven home. I doubt that DiMaggio can ever reach Speaker's all-time batting mark of .344. Few have ever passed this set of figures.

Connie Mack has the idea that there should be new baseball rankings every 20 years since so many things change. This is a good idea.

DiMaggio then would certainly head the new order—dating back to 1920 or 1925. Or possibly beginning with 1930, when Cobb and Speaker were through — when Babe was fading—when Wagner and Collins and Lajoie had all finished.

TeachingReligion

Lesson for February 6, 1949

SOME PEOPLE, strange to say, don't believe in Sunday schools. Most North American Protestants do, because Jesus did. The word may not be found in the New Testament, but the thing is there. If Jesus did not believe that religion could be taught, then he was guilty of wasting much of his time, for he worked at teaching in season and out of season. He was a product of the Sunday School, in a sense. During his childhood he would go to the synagogue school weekdays and especially on Sabbaths; we know that by the time he was grown it was his "custom" to attend synagogue service.

Dr. Foreman

And in every Jewish community the synagogue was the place where for two hundred years and more, children and youth and older people had been taught the Word of God.

If Christians today are faithful to Christ's example, we also will keep at the job of teaching our religion to every child within our reach.

Body and Soul

READERS of the gospels will note that when Jesus went home from the synagogue on the Sabbath, his day's work was not done. He would spend hours, sometimes till far into the night, healing people brought to him for cure. Jesus ministered to mind and soul. Jesus was interested in personalities, whole people, not half-people. Our minds have to be fed, but we live in bodies, and bodies have no little to do with personalities. Jesus was not content with teaching sick people; he made sick people well. So the church today, if it is faithful to Christ's principles, will consider people as complete personalities.

The Common People

WE FIND that Jesus did not insist on university audiences. Indeed, he never spoke to a university audience. His teaching was always in the midst of groups of very plain people. There were great universities in those days, but it was not necessary for any one to be a graduate of one of them in order to enter Jesus' school, or to understand what he taught. He taught the plain people plainly.

In all our teaching we try to use the pupil's language and to put our Christian ideas in the thoughts that the pupils can understand.

At the best seminaries, young ministers-to-be are carefully taught how to put the great Christian doctrines in ways that the simplest people can understand. Teaching over people's heads is not teaching them at all.

God and Education

JESUS did not try to teach people carpentry, or arithmetic, or geography. No doubt he could have done so. But he had something more important on his mind, something which he alone could teach. He taught religion, or in other words he taught the truth about God, and about man, and about right relations between God and man. So the teaching church, whether in the Sunday school or in the books written by its scholars or in its schools and colleges, when it follows Christ's example, is always teaching religion first and foremost. We do not believe that religion is a secondary issue, something you can "take or leave."

Religion on Two Feet

JESUS did more than talk. He lived. His whole life and character were saying more loudly and plainly what his words said.

So the Christian church today, when it is faithful to Christ, must translate into actual living the faith she teaches in Sunday school lessons, in catechisms and books and sermons.

What we do, as Christians, speaks louder than what we say. Every Sunday school teacher needs to remember that what is said on Sunday is important, but what the teacher does on Monday is more impressive by far. The reason why Jesus was more effective than John the Baptist was that John, after all, was a Voice, while Jesus was a Friend. Are you who teach others about God simply a Voice? A phonograph could do as well.

For Quick Cough Relief, Mix This Syrup, at Home

Here's an old home mixture your mother probably used, but, for real results, it is still one of the most effective and dependable, for coughs due to colds. Once tried, you'll swear by it.

It's no trouble at all. Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments until dissolved. No cooking is needed. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Now put 2½ ounces of Pinex into a pint bottle, and fill up with your syrup. This makes a full pint of splendid cough medicine, and gives you about four times as much for your money. It keeps perfectly and tastes fine.

And you'll say it's truly excellent, for quick action. You can feel it take hold swiftly. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear the air passages. Thus it eases breathing, and lets you sleep.

Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its quick action on throat and bronchial irritations. Money refunded if not pleased in every way.

KEEPING HEALTHY

'Mistakes' That Cause Migraine

By Dr. James W. Barton

FOR many years, physicians have been searching for the cause of migraine—one-sided headache accompanied by nausea and vomiting. When it was discovered that ergotamine tartrate (gynergen) or inhaling pure oxygen would stop the attack in the majority of cases, patients and some busy physicians did not seek further for the cause. Research and clinical physicians always try to find the cause of an ailment and prevent attacks. Thus, a Boston number of "Medical Men of North America," Dr. Graham, Harvard medical authority, states:

"Any doctor who has seen a patient with a full-blown migraine attack will realize that it is a violent experience, and frequent repetition of which can make serious inroads on health and livelihood, in some cases actually causing total incapacity."

Because migraine is such a serious ailment, Dr. Graham suggests investigation from various viewpoints—the history of the beginning of the attacks, how often attacks occur, other symptoms present besides headache, how much relief is obtained by treatment used, any family history of headache, any injury that may have occurred.

There should be a thorough physical examination, then a mental and emotional analysis. For some of the mistakes in everyday living that are factors in causing or aggravating migraine are:

(1) Getting up too late in the morning and hurrying breakfast and stool habits; (2) Working steadily through the day without any breaks; (3) Staying up too late at night; (4) Not enough time off for relaxation or recreation; (5) Too much concern about household duties and cleanliness; (6) Too much starch food; (7) Too much extra or outside work and responsibilities; (8) Trying to do too many things in one day or week.

The ergotamine tartrate treatment is still considered best in severe attacks, while acetylsalicylic acid (aspirin) appears to control mild attacks.

★ HEALTH NOTES ★

It has been well said that weight control is of the best methods of knowing one's health. As long as the weight is kept down, blood pressure will remain down. And remember this warning, too—overweight is a forerunner of diabetes. As one famous authority puts it, diabetes is the fat man's folly and obesity opens the door to diabetes.

Most causes of sciatica are infections of the teeth, gums, tonsils, gall bladder and large intestine. Next commonest cause is injury.

Plenty And More Of It—

PARTY FARE FOR TEEN-AGERS

Take a plate of hamburgers, add some potato chips, fruit drinks or cocoa and offer to teen-agers. Result—more wanted. If you have some members of the teen-age generation in your family, here is the route to home party success.

You can almost always tell a teen-ager by his appetite. If the gang moves in on your house regularly for after-skating snakes, or congregates for some trial sessions on the art of dancing, no telling what food will strike their fancy.

But if you're one of those wise and foreseeing mothers, you'll make sure there's a snack shelf all set up for such raids. There will be sandwich spreads, flavorings for milk and fruit drinks, and mountains of cookies. There will be bread or buns, and a limitless supply of potato chips and pickles.

The refrigerator will probably take a beating, and the electric mixer may run full tilt turning out homemade malted milks, but the fun the crowd will have in your kitchen can more than make up for the cleaning up after ward

Kitchen Fun

The grand part about providing party fare or snacks at home, say food specialists, Iowa State College, is that it gives the young folks a good time at low cost at home. More than that, they like the idea of concocting their own "eats" without much parental supervision. And chances are, they'll get more good wholesome food via the kitchen table and range than they would elsewhere.

If it's to be a special party provide all the "makings" but let the youngsters take over from there. A recipe book in full view will be all the direction they need to stir up cheese and mushroom rabbit, cocoa, cheeseburgers and other substantial fare. What matter if the result isn't absolutely perfect—it will still be the hit of the party.

One thing you can be sure of, appetites probably won't be finicky. But sometimes it helps to make sure that the menu has some good wholesome variety. A little preliminary planning may assure success all the way around. So why not post some bill board menus as guides. Such a menu might be: cheese and mushroom rabbit (fix it yourself, recipe on page 18); celery and carrot sticks in refrigerator, god cake (ready and waiting), pineapple or orange sherbit also in refrigerator and cocoa (to be made).

Another menu might be: assorted sandwiches, celery and radishes, individual fruit salad with cream cheese dressing, ice cream and pinwheel cookies, milk or cocoa.

Or if cheeseburgers or hamburgers are nominated for the evening, list suggestions as potato chips, celery, olives and other relishes, ice cream and cookies, milk drinks to go along.

Make It Gay

A party, on the spur of the moment or otherwise, is much more of an event if there's a gay tablecloth or some tricky napkins to set the right note. A few bright but inexpensive cloths just for teen-ager parties could be tucked away near the snack shelf. Then there won't be any question as to what can be used for those events.

Chances are a supply of rough-and-ready aprons would be a welcome addition to the activities also.

If less elaborate menus are in order, popcorn and apples prove a satisfying combination. Or cookies, fruit drinks or cocoa may top off an evening of fun. Perhaps the main item of fare might be ice cream with a variety of home-prepared sauces.

OBITUARY OF JAMES A. TRUMBELL

Funeral services for James A. Trumbell, 1124 North Pennsylvania Avenue, were held Tuesday, January 25th at the Major Chapel at Mason City with the Rev. Wilbur Dierking of the Presbyterian Church conducting the services. Interment was at Amsterdam Cemetery, Goodell, Iowa. Bearers at the cemetary were Bill Butts, Joe Burgess, Dale Brede, Anson Avery, Summer Fuller and Verner Christie all of Goodell.

James Abiah Trumbell was the second child of Cornelias Rittenhous and Adeline Trumbell. He was born at Rock Glen, Penn., January 29, 1867. At the age of seventeen he moved with his parents to a farm northeast of Belmond, where he lived until August 11, 1891. when he was married to Carrie Kelly Elder. They farmed at several different places including six years at Rodman and then they purchased the farm known as the Elder farm, where they lived from 1902 until 1921, when they moved to Mason City where they have since made their home. The three children, all of whom survive are Sumner of Klemme, Harry of Goodell and the daughter, Florence, Mrs. Harry Pringnitz of Swaledale.

Mr. Trumbell was a man of few words, a good neighbor and a devoted father. He had excellent health all of his life until the last few months when he began to fail and on Saturday morning, January 22nd, after a short illness, he passed away. He leaves to mourn his death his wife, Carrie Trumbell, the daughter, Mrs. Harry Pringnitz and two sons, Sumner and Harry, seven grandchildren and four great grandchildren, two sisters, Dora Wright of Ellenburg, Wash., and Carrie Lampson of Long Beach, California.

Out of town people present at the services were the grandson, Clair West of Sioux City and Mr. and Mrs. Lester Bonner of Swaledale, friends.

Five Hundred Hogs Housed In Schmidt Yards During Storm

The sudden blizzard Thursday night was a tough one for truckers here who had lives to transport. However, L. Schmidt called in his truck to unload hogs and nearly 500 head were housed in his building until the storm subsided and roads were again open for trucking.

A semi-trailer load of hogs was pulled behind the Klemme Food Market to get protection from the storm. Next morning the truck had to be pulled out with a tractor, but the hogs were in good shape.

Cautions About Contracting For Corn Borer Control

Hancock County farmers contacting spraying service for corn borer control were offered this advice this week from Paul Henderson, county extension director. "Read the contract and make sure you completely understand what it says before you sign."

Information received at his office from Harold Gunderson, extension entomologist at Iowa State Colloge, prompted Henderson to pass on the advice. Gunderson says that farmers may save themselves a large bill for an ineffective job if they show any contract which they don't understand to a county extension director, vocational agriculture instructor or a lawyer before the sign.

"Merely hiring a custom spray operator and having a signed contract doesn't end the farmer's responsibility for protecting his crop," Gunderson stated. He listed three responsibilities of the farmers:

1. Know insecticides—read the label and be sure you are buying DDT, the only recommended chemical readily available for effective corn borer control.

2. Know that your operator is dependable—that's insurance of correct application.

3. Determine the time for the spraying—count your own egg masses by making daily examination for corn borer eggs when corn gets around 25 inches tall Treat when 50 or more egg masses are present per 100 stalks in corn 35 inches tall.

Henderson pointed out that egg counts reported by Iowa State College may indicate a general moth activity in an area, but they don't tell the specific time for treating any certain field. Differences in varieties, soil fertility, planting dates, and variations in local weather conditions affect the time when 50 or more egg masses will be present per 100 stalks in any one field.

Henderson emphasizes that the Iowa State College does not recommend or introduce any commercial company or brand names.

He also points out probable cost for corn borer control. According to Art Young, president of the Iowa Airplane Sprayer and Duster Association, most custom operators using airplane equipment are planning to charge I3.00 per acre. That price includes material and application.

MANGE-FREE HOG WILL YIELD BIGGER PROFIT

Iowa farmers who are selling their hogs infected with mange may be losing as much as $4 per head, says Harold Gunderson, Iowa College extension entomologist.

Half the loss comes from lower prices and the other half from slow gains in the feedlot. In winter and early spring, large numbers of mange-infected hogs are bought by packers at a discount.

Gunderson advises hog raisers to use benzene hexachloride to rid their hogs of mange. It is usually used in the form of wettable powder. Guderson recommends strengths of .12 percent to .25 percent of the gamma isomer. For pigs up to 3 months of age, use the .12 percent concentration. For older hogs, the stronger concentration is more likely to give complete control in one treatment.

Treat sows before they farrow. Gunderson says that if sows are treated individually ad carefully, there need be no worry of losing pigs. Be sure to cover the under parts of the body. If the sows are free from mange, it is unlikely that pigs will have mange.

Spraying will give best results if there is an agitator on the sprayer, according to Gunderson Pressures of 60 to 400 pounds per square inch will do a satisfactory job. Apply about 1 gallon of solution on each sow.

He cautions the purchaser of benzene hexachloride to read the instructions carefully. He points out that it is necessary to know the concentration of the gamma isomer before the spray can be mixed accurately.

Gunderson also warns not to spray hogs less than 30 days before they are sold. Fat on the animals absorbs the chemical. If the animals are slaughtered within 30 days, the benzene odor may be noticeable.

YOU CAN'T AFFORD A GULLY

How much does it cost to own a gully?

Commenting on this question, A. E. Rasmussen, Chairman of the Hancock County Agricultural Committee, says that few farmers stop to consider the cost of a gully.

Mr. Rasmussen points out that there are three major cost items: the breakdown and loss of the organic matter in the soil, loss of the topsoil that is washed away and most important of all, a decrease in the productive capacity of the farm.

The cost of the breakdown in soil structure must be figured in terms of food lost. It may never be possible to fully restore the land to what it would have produced had it been properly handled.

Topsoil washed away is a positive loss to the farm and it may be a permanent loss in terms of future production. The production which would have been possible had the topsoil been held at home in the yardstick for measuring this loss.

The gully itself may be healed in time by grass or other fast-growing sod-forming plants. But it may always be a threat to the farm and may never be brought back into full production.

"When you stop to think of it," says Mr. Rasmussen, "no farmer can afford a gully. In fact, gullies cost more than the Nation can afford. The production from that land is needed to maintain a good standard of living. The farmer needs it and the country needs it.

"And it will cost the Nation a lot less to help a farmer prevent the gully than it will to allow the gully to dig its way into the limited supply of live-giving topsoil."

ATTEND DISCUSSION MEETINGS THIS WINTER

A good way to spend some of your winter evenings is to meet with local civic groups that get together to discuss topics that have an effect on your status as a citizen. and the well-being of the country, says Paul Henderson, county extension director.

The essence of democracy is learning to think, plan, and act together, he says. Henderson believes that Iowans can do this best by attending rural group meetings and by taking an active part in them.

In the main, the degree to which these meetings are interesting depends upon the individuals taking part. However, there are three techniques employed by many group leaders which help maintain interest by giving each person an opportunity to make himself heard, Henderson says.

First, leaders are trained in special sessions where they are given special information that they present in meetings. Second, members of the groups are furnished discussion guide sheets. This permits them to use their eyes as well as their ears in following the remarks made. A third, groups are divided into sub-groups consisting of from 4 to 7 members. Each sub-group gives attention to one question, then report their reactions back to the entire meeting.

INJURED

Fred Sautter, 26, of McGregor is recovering in a Dubuque hospital from injuries received when a large rock fell on him. Fred was operating a drilling machine in a sand pit, and the large rock, evidently loosened by the drilling, pinned him between the drill and the rock face.

Friends of Bob Nietert, Emmetsburg, who is blind, gave him an unusual Christmas gift—a ball of tinfoil about the size of a bowling ball, which weighed 40 pounds and has a sale value of about $40. 9,000 pieces of cigarette wrappers, chewing gum wrappers, etc., went into the gift.

LAKE PATROL ACTIVITIES INCREASE IN 1948

The annual report of the state boat inspector to the Conservation Commission reveals that seven lake patrolmen, operating 8,600 hours on six major recreation lakes, gave aid to 270 "boats in distress" during the 1948 season. The patrol, operating in Clear, Okoboji, Storm, Manawa, Blackhawk, and North Twin Lakes, was called in 34 cases of near drowning.

Safety talks and demonstrations were given to 15,00 people during the period; 739 warning tickets issued; and 33 prosecutions for illegal boat operation carried out. During the period 1,266 construction permits were issued, 482 private motor boats registered, 1,930 commercial row boats licensed. Fifty-nine commercial power boats and two sail boats were licensed to operate on state-owned waters during the year.

BUFFET MEALS PROVIDE—

EASY WAYS TO ENTERTAIN

One of the easiest ways to entertain friends is at a buffet supper. A colorful table laden with delicious foods can set the mood for the occasion, say food authorities. And serving is simple, for your guests will help themselves.

Have you ever served a buffet meal to entertain your friends? If you haven't, try it, and see how easy it is. There's really not as much bother to buffet meals as there is to arranging a regular company meal.

And, says Jewel Graham, extension nutritionist, Iowa State College, everyone likes the easy informality of gathering around the buffet table to help themselves to the good food you've provided.

Make It Pretty

Key the table cloth, dishes and centerpiece to the type of food you are going to serve, she suggests. Potery, gay linens and wooden bowls are perfect mates for informal meals. For the centerpiece, use fruits vegetables or seasonal flowers.

For those times when you want an extra-special, more formal type buffet, bring out your loveliest linens and your nicest glassware and china.

As for the menu, keep it simple. A main course, dessert and beverage are all you will need. For example, the menu might include baked beans with tiny sausages, a tossed cabbage salad, olives and relishes, muffins, cake with chocolate sauce, and coffee, tea or fruit juice. Or it might be chicken loaf, curry gravy, buttered peas, fluffy baked potatoes, clover leaf rolls, relishes, lemon meringue pudding with graham cracker topping, a beverage.

Arrange the food so your guests will pass around the table in one direction. Place the main dish at one end of the table a group of six or eight plates beside it. The other foods—salad, vegetables, rolls—go along the side of the table within easy reach of the guests.

Easy-to-Serve Food

If you want the serving dishes to look as nice as the moment you put them on the table, even after several people have helped themselves, arrange the food in individual portions. This might be sliced meat loaf or salads in lettuce cups.

Beverage go at the other end of the table, of if things are going to be too crowded, put the beverages, cups and cream and sugar on a small table near by.

If you are serving only a small group, keep your meal as informal as possible, Miss Grahm says. Let your guests pass around the table and then gather in the living room. Help the male guests out by using small tables on which they can place their plates of food. Women guests are pretty good at managing a plate on their laps, but men just never seem to acquire that knack.

Second servings are a part of an informal buffet. Invite your guests to go back to the table, or pass the serving dishes yourself. When it's time for desert, everyone stacks his own dishes on a small side table and hepls himself to dessert.

Nothing makes a meal more pleasing than foods which are served at their best—hot foods kept hot, frozen foods firm, and salads cold and crisp. Casseroles can keep foods warm until all your guests are served.

You can avoid embarrassing moments by using plates which are large enough to accommodate all the foods your guests will want to take. And, secondly, make the foods the kind which are easy to handle.

Now that you know more about buffet service, try it the next time you invite friends over for an evning of games or friendly chatter.

SAVED FAMILY

"Stinky" saved the day for a family of six people at Solon recently. "Stinky" is a four month old puppy and his barking and whining aroused the family of Mr and Mrs. Clifford Lamansky, when gas and smoke fumes from a defective damper filled the basement

PAPER WAD

Duane Spire, 8 year old Tama lad, is now hospitalized in the university hospital at Iowa City, as the result of being struck in the eye with a paper wad. He now has some sight with the eye, which was injured when his half-brother "shot" him with a rubber band sling shot.

CHECK HOME FOR FIRE HAZARDS NOW

Now is the time to make the special check of your home just in case some fire hazards are present, says Elsie Mae Van Wert, county extension home economist.

The occurrence of a number of fires in rural homes lately is adequate reason to make doubly sure that it can't happen at your home, Miss Van Wert says. Check the furnace, chimneys, flues and smokepipes once again, even if you did last fall. Don't wake up some night and find the house full of smoke and flames. Inspect the wiring of all your electric appliances, especially those portable heaters you are using for extra cold weather.

Check the wiring around the house even if the appliances and lights seem to work all right now. Make sure there are no extension cords lurking under the rugs. They mean potential trouble any time.

If your refrigerator motor isn't the "sealed-in" type, be sure it is cleaned and oiled. It can over heat and start a fire.

Cords on portable lamps often get stepped on. Eventually they will wear out, so be sure they are in good condition, and that they are long enough to serve the purpose. An emergency involving the wiring system of your home arises, you can cut off the current immediately.

Make sure you have metal or glass containers for ashes. Keep the attic and basement free of old rags and papers. Make sure the attic has an opening so you can inspect it frequently.

Last of all, be sure not to use gasoline or kerosene to start a fire either in the kitchen range or the living room stove.

Except for shock, he was removed uninjured.

WOOD CARVINGS

A walnut tree once grew near Lewis in Cass County, is keeping the friends and relatives of Harry Stevens, Red Oak, supplied with Christmas presents. This is a diesel ...a modern locomotive that means better service to you

Leaders of two unions think it's a feather-bed ...a "make work" grab that means less service to you.

Leaders of unions representing railroad engineers and firemen seek to force railroads to add extra, needless men on diesel locomotives. This is sheer waste—a "make-work" program which would mean fewer improvements and higher costs—for YOU!

Railroads use modern diesel locomotives because they are one of the means of giving faster, better service to you.

Two men compose the crew of a diesel. They occupy a clean, comfortable cab at the front. The engineer handles the throttle. The fireman sits and watches the track ahead. With no coal to shovel, he has practically nothing else to do.

No Benefit To You

Now the leaders of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen want to use the diesel locomotive as a means of forcing a feather-bedding scheme on the railroads. The extra men they propose to add to the diesel crews are not needed. There is no work for them.

The union leaders are fighting among themselves about which union should furnish these extra, needless men. The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers have even threatened a strike. You may not be interested in this dispute of these two unions, but you would be vitally concerned if these groups succeed in putting through this feather-bedding scheme, because it would mean a slowing up of the improvement program of the railroads—of which the diesel is the outstanding symbol.

Diesel crews are among the highest paid railroad employes—real aristocrats of labor! Their pay is high by any standard. Granting of these demands, therefore, would mean that the railroads would be paying out millions in unearned wages to those in the very highest pay brackets.

We'd Like To Spend This Money On You

You know how much the diesel has meant to you in increased speed, comfort and convenience. The railroads have many more of them on order for even greater improvement in service to you. But needless drains of money, such as this present demand of the unions for needless men on diesels, reduce the ability of the railroads to spend money on better service for you.

Proud as the railroads are of the diesel, it is only a small part of their improvement program. Since the War, literally billions of dollars have been spent on improvement of tracks and stations, on new passenger and freight cars, as well as on diesel locomotives and on the many other less conspicuous details of railroading that contribute to improved service.

Feather-Bedding Means Less Service To You

But brazen feather-bedding schemes like the one now proposed would, if successful, divert large sums of money from our present improvement programs. Even worse, they would make improvements like the diesel worthless by making the cost of their operation prohibitive.

These demands are against YOUR interest—as well as those of the railroads. They are schemes to "make work". Neither you nor the railroads should be forced to pay such a penalty for progress.

That's why the railroads are resisting these "make work" demands to the last ditch—that's why they are telling you about them.

Brilliant Sun Dogs

With the thermometers here registering 14 degrees below zero Saturday morning and the sun shining brightly, highly colored "sun-dogs" appeared in the southeastern sky with unusual brilliance, which generally signals colder weather ahead. However, in this case temperatures were much warmer by Saturday night, and by Sunday morning the reading was zero.

THE BUDGET MESSAGE BY GOV. BEARDSLEY

Governor William S. Beardsley is to be congratulated on the budget message which he delivered before the members of the Iowa State Legislature last week. In it the chief executive made known his financial plans for the state government. The Governor's recommendations were sound In this even members of the minority party were in agreement. Many of the legislators stated that they recognized the soundness of the governor's recommendations and expressed themselves as willing to accept his proposals.

That the Governor whittled millions from the askings of the state departments and institutions made at the budget hearings some weeks ago, is not surprising. At the time these requests were made, many, including Governor Beardsley, at that time the governor-elect, felt that the askings were far from being justified.

The various state departments and institutions had asked approximately 128 million dollars for each of the next two years. The Governor's recommendations, however, cut that down to a little more than 88 million dollars or about 40 million a year less than the askings. His recommendations are only about 13 million dollars more a year than was given these departments two years ago in spite of the fact that operating costs have increased by far greater proportions. But the Governor showed how this could be accomplished in a business like way without curtailing the service to the taxpayers.

The details of the Governor's recommendations have been published so it is not our purpose to go into the various proposals at this time, except to say that there was sound logic in all of them. The message showed that the Governor had given the matter carful study and that he is thoroughly familiar with the subject. Governor Beardsley's budget message should prove to the people of Iowa that he will do all in his power to give them a business like and an economical administration.

SELL SHORT-FEDS ON EARLY MARKET

Iowa cattle feeders might make a smart move by heading short-fed cattle for early markets. That tip comes from Francis Kutish, Iowa State College Extension farm economist.

He says that prospects for making money by holding short-feds for the April-May market are not very good at present. He points out that normally it takes a rising market to carry heavy cattle that long. The cost of putting gain on heavy steers is high.

Kutish says that there may be a greater than usual seasonal drop in prices of better grades of cattle this spring. So far, there hasn't been a lot of choice and prime cattle on the market, but he expects more and more to come in as spring approaches.

Indications also points to a lot of native cattle coming to market this spring. In a year of lots of corn, more native cattle are fed—not so mny per farm but on a lot of farms, Kutish says. These cattle are usually finished to grade good. They will compete with the short-feds now on farms if the short-feds are carried over to the April-May market.

Another thing that points to a slower market for the better grades of cattle in April and May is the fact that there were more cattle on feed January 1 than any other year on record. There were more of all weights, but the biggest increase was in cattle weighing 900 pounds or more.

ROAD NOTES

BY C. F. MERTEN, COUNTY ENGINEER

The year of 1948 was a very active year in Hancock County highway construction with expenditures greater than any previous year in the history of the county. With one exception the close of the year found our roads in excellent condition, the exception being the east and west road from Hayfield to a point two miles east of Miller which was graded but not graveled. The Maudlin Construction Co. has a contract for graveling this road and work will be completed as soon as weather and road conditions are favorable.

The following amounts were spent in Hancock County Road Construction Fund in 1948:

|---|---|
| Grading 20 mi. of road | $43,316.00 |
| Six wooden bridges | 16,065.43 |
| Concrete & steel bridges | 4,410.12 |
| Culverts & extensions | 15,892.20 |
| Clearing & grubbing | 5,828.50 |
| Graveling 20 mi. of road | 32,393.00 |
| Right of way | 9,419.81 |
| Steel buildings | 3,835.00 |
| Driveway culverts | 3,626.00 |
| TOTAL | $134,786.00 |

The cost of maintaining Hancock County roads in 1948 was, like the construction, higher than in any previous year. This is due to increased labor, equipment and material costs and to additional traffic on the highways. One example of the increased service requirements of our highways in the additional number of school busses which are now operating and call for all-weather roads.

The road maintenance money was spent as follows:

|---|---|
| Labor | $67,366.82 |
| Motor Fuel | 19,260.00 |
| Oil and Grease | 2,949.09 |
| New Equipment | 55,639.98 |
| Equipment repairs and Maintenance | 23,768.11 |
| Buildings | 13,201.75 |
| Tiling and drainage assessments | 9,393.70 |
| Lumber, culverts, and other material | 18,590.68 |
| TOTAL | $210,170.13 |

In addition to the work done with county funds as stated above the following roads were built with funds known as Farm to Market Funds which are under the jurisdiction of the Iowa Highway Commission but must be spent on County Roads. The following construction work was completed in 1948 from this fund.

Trunk roads north and west of Woden

|---|---|
| Grading 4½ miles | 24,585.93 |
| Graveling 4½ miles | 6,112.77 |

The grading of the trunk road from Hayfield thru Miller. 7.2 miles; and from Klemme east, 5 miles; is completed but cost has not been computed to date Graveling of these roads will be completed in the spring. The complete cost of grading and graveling these two roads will be approximately $80,000.00 of which has been or will be paid from the Farm to Market Road Fund.

The engineering on all work done with County Road Construction and Road Maintenance Funds and approximately two-thirds of the construction work done with Farm to Market funds was performed by the County Engineer and his assistant at a cost of $8,948.66 paid from the County Road Funds. The other one-third of the engineering on Farm to Market Roads was done by outside Engineers and Highway Commission Employees and was paid from Farm to Market Funds.

The Road Maintenance Fund is secured from a tax levy on property. The Road Construction Fund consists of Hancock County's share of State gasoline tax. The Farm to Market Fund consists of Federal Aid and Auto taxes a portion of which is allotted to the counties on an erea basis. Our annual share of this fund is approximately $75,000.00. Approximately one-half of the Farm to Market money is allotted to counties on a need basis but this money goes to counties in which the roads are not so well improved as they are in Hancock County.

TALLE WANTS EXCISE TAX CUT

An Iowa Congressmn, Rep. Henry O. Talle, the Second District Republican, believes its about time that wartime excise taxes on several commodities and services should be cut and has introduced a bill in Congress to this effect. Under his bill the excise would revert to their pre-1943 level. They were to have gone back to these levels six months after the end of the war, but never did.

Rep. Talle's bill would provide for reduction of taxes on dues, memberships nd initiation fees, jewelry, furs, toilet preparations and cosmetics, electric light bulbs, long distance telephone calls, local telephone calls, telegraph and cable rates, railroad, telephone and bus transportation, and on luggage.

The bill also provides that the tax on amusements such as the theaters, sports events and similar affairs would drop back from the present 20 percent level to 10 percent.

THE FICTION CORNER

OLD SHOE

By JOHN H. HOSE

Terry was just an old shoe, and when the new assistant pastor came to town Marg found herself dreaming of this utterly different person in serious terms—that is, until Terry proved that old shoes were the most comfortable after all.

THE screen door slammed behind Terry, disturbing the quiet of Sunday afternoon up and down Fourth street. It wasn't the gentle slap with which screen doors are apt to close when released casually. There was a revolver-like bang of one wooden frame forcibly meeting another.

In quick succession followed the whirr of a starter and the clash of rapidly meshing gears.

"Well! He certainly left in a hurry," said Mamie as she removed her apron. "What in heaven's name did you do to him, Marg?"

"Oh, he's just an old sorehead!" replied Marg to her mother's question. "We were talking about something to do for this afternoon, and when I said I wasn't interested in stalking through the woods to observe the beauties of Nature, he got huffy and went tearing out the door. That's all there was to it! What's more, I don't care if he never returns," she added as an after thought.

"But it's so unusual for Terry to act like that," sighed Mamie, as she eased her rather ample self into an unoccupied chair in the Langley living room. "Maybe the dinner didn't agree with him?" Mamie was always concerned with the reaction of others to the perfection of her culinary art.

"He sure ate plenty, if that's what you mean," muttered John Langley from behind his newspaper.

Marg sat on the arm of the davenport, staring vacantly up the street in the wake of the departing automobile. She and Terry Ulrich had been going together for three years, had known each other since high school days. Everyone expected them to be married some day, and until last month, Marg had more or less planned on it herself But that was before the advent of Tom Prentiss.

"I shouldn't have been so sarcastic with Terry," thought Marg to herself as the family continued to discuss the somewhat abrupt departure of her intended, "but I wish he'd have an original idea just once. I'm so sick of his small town ways and hick notions." Her revery was interrupted by the syrupy voice of her sister-in-law, Blanche.

"I think I know where the trouble lies," drawled Blanche in her easy flowing, but somewhat aggravating tone "She's like all the other girls at church ever since that new assistant pastor came. All you ever hear them talk about is Tom Prentiss. Don't tell me you've fallen for him too, Marg?"

"Blanche, dear, you can be so tiresome at times," retorted Marg

"Since you folks are all so concerned with Terry's rude departure, I'll leave the discussion with you. I'm going to take a nap."

This wasn't the first time that Blanche had casually read Marg's thoughts and feelings Marg threw herself across the bed, after turning down the coverlet and kicking her shoes off onto the floor. How did Blanche know about Tom Prentiss, though? Was it so very obvious?

The soft breeze of the Indian summer Sunday stirred the ruffled dimity curtains which hung at her window, and Marg thought about Tom Prentiss.

Rev Brown had introduced Tom to the choir members about five minutes before rehearsal time eight or nine weeks earlier. He was the new assistant pastor, and would have charge of all youth work, as well as the musical program of the church. During that first hour of rehearsal, the members of the choir had felt that Tom was a bit overbearing and arrogant. But the sureness with which he guided them through the difficult passages of the anthem for the following Sunday made them realize that this poised young man was really a topnotch musician.

After they had gone into the church sanctuary to practice with the organ, they were more convinced than ever that the new assistant was a youthful genius.

Enthusiasm for Tom Prentiss was contagious. The following Sunday the congregation buzzed after services with talk of the new pastor. Several said the choir had never sung so well, and the young ladies of the congregation were aware of his good looks, too.

John Langley was an elder of the church, so a few Sundays after Prentiss' arrival, John invited him to the humble abode on North Fourth Street to delve into the wonders of Mamie Langley's cookery. And Marg had a chance to observe Tom at close range.

Throughout the meal, he sparkled with brilliant bits of conversation, and fairly captured Mamie's heart by storing away huge quantities of food. After dinner, he had insisted upon coming into the kitchen to help with the dishes. He expressed admiration for Mamie's art, and went with John into the rose garden to express his admiration for John's horticulture.

"What a marvelous personality he has," she thought to herself now, two weeks later. What other man ever came into this house for Sunday dinner and wound up in the kitchen afterward drying dishes? He was so common and nice Quite a contrast to Terry who, like her father, retreated to the living room to sleep and read after gorging himself to the saturation point. And the wonderful walk they had taken after dinner out along the reservoir path! Tom had told Marg all about himself.

"Terry was nice, too," she thought, "but well . Terry didn't say clever things like Tom. And he wasn't gallant. Terry did the right things at the right time, to be sure, but he lacked the dash and charm which the young cleric lent to everything he did Terry was more handsome, but Terry was definitely old shoe. Comfortable, congenial, good quality, but not exciting.

She sat up abruptly on the bed, pulling her knees up to her chin, and cocking her head to one side at her image in the mirror. She said aloud to herself,

"Marg, you're being simple about this man. He doesn't even know you're alive."

From the distant confines of the house, the soft notes of the door chime interrupted her rumination. She listened to see if she could identify the voice of the visitor. Hearing muffled mannish tones, she decided to investigate. Perhaps Terry had returned.

Patting her soft curls into place, she dabbed a bit of powder on her nose before going down to the living room She was quite surprised to see that the caller was the much thought-about Mr Prentiss.

"Why, hello, Marg," he greeted her as she entered the room, "I was just out extending invitations to the choir members for a big steak fry we're planning for Friday evening at the lake. You'll be there, of course?"

"You know you can count on me, Tom," replied Marg, brightening noticeably in the presence of the young minister. "And you'd better add an extra pound of steak, because my appetite's pretty keen in the open air," she added gayly.

"If you're not doing anything important, Marg," continued Tom, "I'd like to have you go along with me to notify the other members."

"Why, sure, I'd love to," replied Marg happily. "Just wait until I get my hat."

A few minutes later, they left the house in a whirl of excitement. Mamie watched them placidly, and then she remarked to Blanche,

"You know, Blanchie, I wouldn't be at all surprised if you were right about Marg and that young preacher."

Marg and Tom chatted noisily as they drove from place to place, but if Tom was aware of Marg's feelings for him, he didn't reveal it.

Marg found Terry quite recovered from his anger when she saw him the following Friday at the steak fry. In fact, he greeted her as though nothing had really happened the previous Sunday.

"Hi, Marg," he shouted to her when she arrived with a group of friends. "Come on over and help me build this fire!"

Marg returned his greeting and sauntered to where Terry and several other young men were building the big fire.

"Where is everyone?" she asked.

"Most of them are meeting at the church," said Terry. "We came out ahead to get the fire ready. Who brought you?"

"Jane Perkins brought four of the girls out from work," replied Marg "We didn't even bother to go home; just met Janey at the square."

"Oh," said Terry. "Well, make yourself useful. You can cut those buns in that big box over there on the table."

"O. K.," replied Marg good-naturedly. While she was cutting the buns, Terry came over to patch things up.

"I'm sorry about last Sunday, Marg," he said. "I guess I was a bit rude "

"Oh, forget it, Terry," she said, "I wasn't very nice either." Their conversation was interrupted by the arrival of the others. The noisy group came tumbling out of the cars. Marg didn't notice the lovely, blonde girl with Tom Prentiss in the bustle of the arrival. But a few minutes later, she was brought face to face with the stranger when Tom introduced them.

"Here's Marg Langley, honey," he said to the young woman at his side. "She's the best alto in the choir. Marg, I want you to meet Louise, my fiancee."

Marg tried to cover her surprised confusion, and she wondered if Louise Collins hadn't seen how surprised she had been when Tom introduced her as his fiancee.

After the group had satiated its appetite on the steaks and other refreshment, they gathered along the shore of the lake to sing the old songs. Marg felt Terry slide into the grass beside her, and wondered if he knew. When they were singing "Love's Old Sweet Song," he gently slid his hand into her own, and a little thrill tingled through her as he whispered:

"Marg, do you know you're really lovely with the moonlight in your hair? How would you like those two bright stars up there for earrings?"

"Why, Terry," Marg answered quietly, "what a beautiful speech. What's got into you?"

"Gee, Marg . . ." he stammered, "Ever since I can remember I've dreamed about you and me . . . how lovely you are, but I'm not very good at making speeches . . . or making love, for that matter . . . but here tonight by the lake, the moonlight, the fire and everything . . . I guess any guy'd want to say something nice to the most wonderful girl in the world, wouldn't he?"

Marg returned the pressure of his hand as she brushed aside the guilty thought that she had doubted her love for Terry. Terry wasn't such a bad stick after all, and maybe she'd ask the Rev. Tom Prentiss to officiate at their wedding in the spring. That would be a nice touch at that!

The voices floated out over the waters of the lake, and Marg turned to look into Terry's earnest eyes.

"Terry," she whispered, "you re so nice—so comfortable!"

Into A Mountain Apart

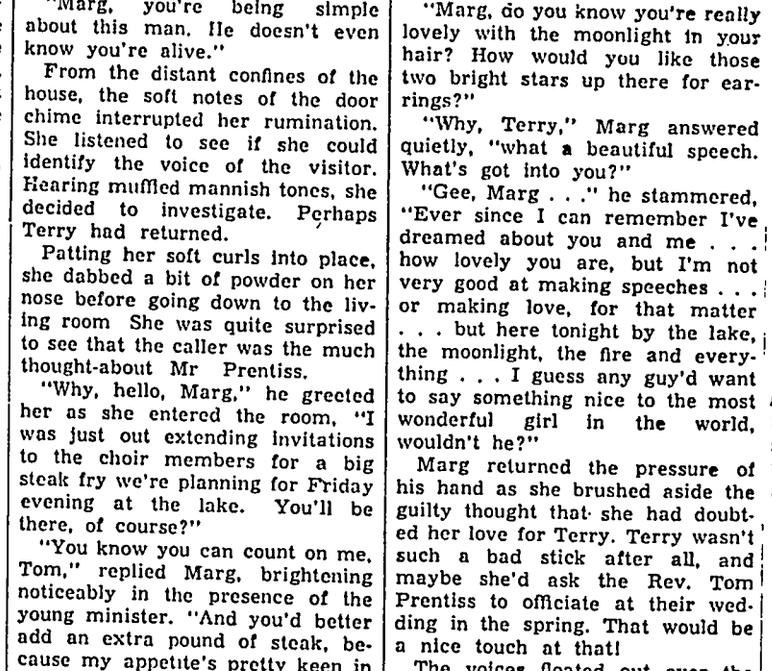
Grace Noll Crowell



WHENEVER the Master could, He stole away
From the great throngs to seek some quiet place
Where He could be alone, where He could pray,
Where God could come to meet Him face to face.
Strange strength is ever born of solitude;
The heart today grows weary of its care
And over-burdened . . . God, it would be good
To seek a mountain side and find Thee there.

Christ stole away at evening to the hills.
So should we go, the press of the day's work done,
To seek some quiet place where the last light spills
The radiant splendor of the setting sun,
And kneel to pray How often we have lost
The way to solitude, and at such cost!

Pies Are Perfect for Dessert!

Favorite Pies

PIES ARE ONE of the favorite choices for dessert all over the country. This is really remarkable because all pies, whether served at home or elsewhere, are not always good. They're soggy and pale and their fillings are tasteless.

However, whether you're making your first, twenty-first or your hundred and first pie, there's no reason for it to be anything but the best. Measure ingredients with standard tools, follow directions for mixing carefully, and bake properly, and you will have a pie that meets the test.

It isn't difficult to make a good crust; neither does it require extensive experience. You'll have to have good ingredients, carefully measured and not over-handled, however.

Regular Pastry
(Makes 2 9-inch crusts)
2 cups all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon salt
⅔ cup lard or shortening
3-4 tablespoons ice water

Cut fat into flour and salt until the mixture resembles coarse meal. It's best to use a blender or two knives so that the heat of the hands does not melt the fat. Add only the amount of water recommended in the recipe. Crust may be chilled before rolling, if desired Do not use too much flour in rolling crust or the pastry will be tough.

Hot Water Pie Crust
(Makes 1 double crust pie)
¼ cup water
½ cup shortening
1½ cups flour
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon baking powder

Bring water to a boil, add the shortening and stir until smooth. Sift measure and sift the flour Add salt and baking powder. Combine the mixtures. Stir until smooth. Set away to chill for 12 hours.

(Makes 1 9-inch pie)
1 tablespoon gelatin
¼ cup cold water
4 eggs
1 cup sugar
6 tablespoons lemon juice
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind

Dissolve gelatin in cold water. Mix egg yolks and sugar in top of double boiler; add lemon juice Beat well and cook over hot water until the mixture thickens. Add gelatin, salt and rind. Stir until gelatin is dissolved. Fold into this the well-beaten egg whites. Pile into a baked pie shell. Place in a cool place until the filling sets.

Banana Prune Pie
(Makes 1 9-inch pie)
¼ cup butter or substitute
⅔ cup honey
Juice of ½ lemon
Grated rind of ½ lemon
2 cups cooked, chopped prunes
4 bananas, sliced
Whipped cream

Blend butter and honey Add lemon juice and rind, then prunes Arrange bananas in baked pastry shell, then cover with prune mixture. Top with whipped cream fluted through a pastry tube.

(Makes 1 9-inch pie)
½ cup sugar
3 tablespoons cornstarch
⅛ teaspoon salt

Working with infra-red photography and other modern devices, science now explains the effectiveness of the "Sloan's Treatment" for combating pains of arthritis and rheumatism, neuralgia and muscular aches.

Is U.S. Going Socialist? It's World-Wide Argument

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WASHINGTON.—As congress sharpens its teeth for the "True-Deal" program (The "true" being for Truman), some of the gentlemen who have watched things going on behind the scenes in Washington for a long time (maybe too long) have a habit of blinking and saying in hushed voice:—

"Say, is America going socialist without knowing it?"

Long before the November election a number of European statesmen, editors, professional politicians and others who are backing the various socialist and socialist-inclined governments, including Britain's, were getting really worried lest a probable Republican victory should make an emphatically capitalistic America less sympathetic toward left-of-center regimes.

The Truman upset caused them to whoop with joy. After they read the President's state of the union message on January 5, and after his appointment of Dean Acheson as secretary of state, they pulled out a chair on the left side of the international table, expecting him to sit right down and join them.

BAUKHAGE

What was probably as much wishful thinking as anything else caused the official Socialist party organ of France to hail the administration program as definitely socialistic. Most of the rest of the French press took about the same view, even to the somewhat lonely, pro-capitalistic Figaro which said the message was "close" to socialism

The same view was taken by the left-wing press in other European countries—(I'm not counting the Communists who merely rang the old propaganda changes). However, the independent Manchester Guardian, long known as the rock of liberalism and likewise as an outstanding voice in British journalism, took a different tone. The Guardian always has been exceedingly well informed concerning the United States and probably understands America as well as any foreign newspaper. It said:

"Mr. Truman's program is an indication that socialism is not the only path for the left. Its goal might be called the insurance state. Its method the deliberate shortening of the odds against the weak. But without abandoning the basically individualist way of life which is accepted as characteristically American."

Comment from the extreme right in this country, in congress and out, chose to see Skipper Truman charting a course for the Ship of State which veered far to the left of center, in fact headed straight for the rocks on which free enterprise, individual initiative, in fact all phases of capitalism, would be sunk without a trace.

That, however, was not the opinion of the majority of the Republican party, and, already signs are showing that it isn't the intention of the majority of the Democrats to let such a catastrophe overtake us, even if they think the Skipper would be willing to risk it, which they don't believe he is.

The alarmists point to the rather startling suggestion on the part of the President that the government study production with a view is offering loans to the steel, and other industries for expansion of plants and increased production.

If the companies refuse to cooperate, it was suggested the government-owned steel plants would be erected. That does sound like a long step toward nationalization of industry. But other observers, both those who consider the idea fatal to free enterprise and those who believe in such government-run ventures as the Tennessee Valley Authority, consider it more of a threat than a promise.

In that connection the recent controversy behind the iron curtain which has finally leaked out in specific and detailed form is interesting. One document consists of reports of a three-day conference of Soviet economists held last May, the other is a study of Russian economy during World War II, by a member of the all-powerful politburo. Both documents attack the theories of Eugene Varga, internationally known Russian economist and former director of the World Institute of Economics in Moscow.

Those 'Anxious' Russian Leaders

This controversy, according to Walter Lippman, may be the real basis of President Truman's Kansas City statement that there were "certain leaders" in Russia who were "exceedingly anxious" to reach an understanding with the United States. Even if the row among the economists wasn't the inspiration for the President's mysterious remarks, it might indicate that there is or was an element in the Soviet leadership which felt it was better to try to get along with us.

The explanation of the controversy among Russian economists is this: Soviet foreign policy, specifically maintenance of the cold war, is supposed to be based on a belief that the United States is headed directly toward another depression. This "bust" will so sap our strength that all the Soviets will have to do is to take us over with little or no real military struggle. (The revolt of the proletariat) We'll be too down and out to help anti-Communist Europe. The anti-communist countries will fall easily into Communist control. Then we can be beaten largely by infiltration, fifth column "action committees" and other methods because there will be general unemployment, discontent and general chaos.

This belief is based on the teachings of Marx and Lenin that capitalism is bound to destroy itself because it produces "boom and bust" cycles which grow increasingly worse, and therefore, it is impossible for a capitalist country to try to do anything permanent for the masses to increase their standard of living.

Now, however, along comes Varga, introducing a new argument. He argues that by adopting measures which he describes as "state socialism" any major depression in the United States can be prevented or at least postponed for 10 or 20 years. If this thesis were accepted by the Soviets it would be wiser to cooperate with the United States and other non-Communist countries, rather than to take for granted that our economic system as well as theirs is going to continue for some time. On that theory it would be to the Soviets' interests, for the present at least, for the Kremlin and the White House to play ball.

What are the measures of "state socialism" Varga is talking about?

The various social and welfare proposals like expanded social security, national health insurance, federal aid to education, undertakings like the Tennessee Valley Authority and the many other reforms which started under the New Deal, and which President Truman now urges should be carried forward or expanded.

In the early part of the President's state of the union message he announced in popular language the underlying theory of his administration. He said:

"We have rejected the discredited theory that the fortunes of the Nation should be in the hands of the privileged few. We have abandoned the 'trickle-down' concept of national prosperity. Instead, we believe that our economic system should rest on a democratic foundation and that wealth should be created for the benefit of all."

Whether or not the majority of the people have rejected that theory remains to be seen. There are still many people who believe that no country can be prosperous unless it is strong at the top and that it cannot be strong at the top, that business and industry cannot prosper, unless free enterprise have the widest liberty possible. That capital should be encouraged by the incentive of profit to take risks and challenge competition. That government interference destroys the initiative which has made the country great. That once business is unshackled by federal bureaucracy, the benefits flow (not trickle) down and spread out to benefit the whole people.

The National Association of State Chambers of Commerce, one of a hundred business organizations testifying against a bill which would would permit the TVA to build a new steam plant at Johnsonville, said:

". . . this government cannot continue much longer to aid in the growth of tax-exempt or government-owned enterprises, thus narrowing the nation's tax base, without throwing greater burdens upon the remainder of the taxpayers and without gradually strangling free enterprise to death."

COUNTY TREASURER EXPLAINS TAX SITUATION IN HANCOCK COUNTY

THIS IS THE TAX SITUATION AS GIVEN BY ROY L. MCMILLIN CO. TREASURER

The tax lists are now in the hands of the County Treasurer and the Soldiers Bonus has been added in one item, it is figured and added to the first half of your taxes.

This soldiers bonus amounts to $1.95 on each thousand dollars of value on all property except money and credit tax.

The average quarter of land in Hancock County will pay about $16.00 soldiers bonus this year.

The State Legislature now in session have not as yet acted upon just how much of this soldiers bonus shall be collected and how much will be taken care of from the surplus on hand in the State Treasurer's office. Until we have definite information as to how this will be handled and how they expect us to collect, it will be impossible for us to write receipts for taxes.

We are glad to give you a statement of taxes either by mail or in the office. Many have sent their checks after they have received the statements, we are holding these until we are sure the amounts are correct and we have the receipts all written.

We received many requests every day and complaints because we are unable to handle the tax collections in the regular way and yet I am sure that you will just bear with us and as soon as we know how they want this handled we will have a notice in the papers.

Another item that is being held up is the Agriculture Land Credit item, in which we were to refund all taxes levied for school purposes above 15 mills. This is up for decision by the Supreme Court, and until they have their answer there is nothing that can be done.

It is our hope that we will be able to start collection of taxes by the first of March, the penalty on taxes does not apply until April 1st.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Truman Begins Busiest Four Years; GOP Wins First Senate Vote Test; Bevin Offers Critics Olive Branch

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

INAUGURATION:
Brief Interlude

President Truman could lay valid claim to the title 'busiest man in the world." The inaugural behind him, the nation's chief executive was up to his neck in problems, both foreign and domestic.

ON THE HOME FRONT, there was a little matter of having congress impliment Democratic campaign pledges and provide funds for the continuing armament expansion. Abroad, with this nation committed to the gargantuan task of saving the world from communism, the problem was equally monumental.

But for awhile, on January 20, Harry Truman, Missouri farm boy who rose to the presidency of the United States, once by succession, currently on his own vote-getting prowess, relaxed, basked in public adulation, may even have forgotten the tremendous pressure under which he labored.

ORIGINALLY PLANNED as a more or less sedate affair, with this atmosphere desired by Truman, the inauguration, instead, was turned into one of the most lavish and spectacular since Andrew Jackson rode into the top spot.

Packed and jammed, Washington gave a hero's welcome to the World War I artillery captain. Truman buttons, Truman pictures, Truman banners were greatly in evidence and the President, seeing these and the vast multitudes, must have wondered if there were anyone at all who voted against him in the November election.

BUT THE INTERMISSION from duty was brief. The parade, the swearing in ceremonies, the round of gala capital affairs that night, and the next day, Harry Truman was again on the job.

Peace has been his rallying cry. Its importance marked all his utterances Now he was buckled down to the job of trying to preserve it. Men of good will everywhere in the world were wishing him success.

MONKEYS:
Up in the Air

For whatever benefit it may be to scientists or anthropologists, two sad-eyed dogs will not calm 300 Rhesus monkeys.

THIS WAS graphically, if somewhat disturbingly demonstrated when 30 crates of the monkeys arrived in New York by plane from the Azores

The trip started sedately enough with all the monkeys locked in their crates. Two large, sad-eyed dogs were along because someone had said their presence would tend to keep tranquil the monkeys' spirits.

Somehow most of the monkeys got out of the crates and suddenly there were monkeys in the cockpit, monkeys through the plane, monkeys peeping out of windows and monkeys even trying to liberate other monkeys.

Capt. Miguel Braganca and his crew, heavily outnumbered, was forced to stay in the forward part of the ship while the monkeys cavorted The monkeys saw to that. Says the captain· "They kept hanging on the cockpit door and watching us all the time"

When the plane reached La Guardia field, about a dozen chattering monkeys were starting to climb out the windows, but eight airline cargomen joined the crew and with brooms and blankets finally snared the truants

The monkeys were consigned for infantile paralysis research.

SIX "NO'S":
Was It Revolt?

Six Democrats joining with senate Republicans gave the GOP victory in the first test of strength since the 81st congress convened. The issue may have been trivial, but the result burned Democratic leaders. Scott Lucas, Illinois, successor to Vice-President Barkley as majority floor leader, "sputtered." Barkley was also put out. For, it appeared, the result was an unexpected as it was "humiliating."

THE ISSUE was exemption of inauguration tickets from federal amusement taxes. The exemption slid through the house 199 to 49, so one can imagine the surprise when it failed in the senate.

Chief target of administration censure was Kentucky's Virgil Chapman.

But those who remembered the Kentucky campaign would recall that Chapman showed no little independence in his drive for votes.

Open Campaign

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and Linda Brown, 4, March of Dimes poster girl, open the annual anti-polio drive in Washington. Linda was cured of polio through the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

He did not completely endorse the Democratic platform, would not be led into enthusiastic "me too" declarations.

Lucas was vehement. "On whose coattails did Chapman come to the senate," he demanded, "the Truman-Barkley coattails or those of Dewey and Warren?" Other angry Democrats rushed to point out that Chapman ran 100,000 votes behind Truman and Barkley in Kentucky.

JOINING CHAPMAN in the "no" votes were Democratic Senators Byrd, Johnson, Maybank, McClellan, Robertson and Russell.

Chapman didn't take criticism lying down. He declared, in effect, that if such taxes are to be removed, it ought to be done in regular legislative process, not by hurried action on the floor.

Republicans were more metaphorical. They argued that since there is a tax on powder used on babies, a woman dressing up for an inauguration ball should regard her powder as more of a luxury than powder applied to a baby. This statement followed an effort to exempt baby powder from federal taxation which failed of approval.

OLIVE BRANCH:
Bevin Recants

British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin apparently was relenting in his stand on the Palestine situation. Gingerly he held out an olive branch: Britain's willingness to release Jewish immigrants of fighting age now held in Cyprus, his personal and strong support of peace negotiations between Israelis and Egyptians at Rhodes.

Observers declared this position a "deliberate and genuine effort on his part . . to seek peace with Israel and his critics in Britain and in the U. S.

WHATEVER MOTIVATED the foreign secretary, there was no overlooking the fact that criticism had been mounting both in England and America. With the pressure continuing, the situation might have resolved itself into one holding the very political future of Bevin.

The foreign minister also indicated that de facto recognition of the government of Israel was being seriously considered. If that step were taken by Great Britain, it would mean the death knell of Arab hopes for continuation of strife or any eventual triumph in the Holy Land controversy.

DIXIECRATS:
Rough Road

The road ahead looked rough for state's righters.

Democratic administration forces were showing little patience with southern old-liners who had bolted the party in the presidential election.

THE PURGE SWORD swung first at the un-American activities committee and two heads tumbled. They were those of Representative John A. Rankin, fiery Mississippian, and F. Edward Herbert, Louisiana, both of whom supported the state's rights ticket against President Truman in November.

Rankin, along with everyone else, knew the blow was coming, accepted it calmly.

BONUS BILL:
Amvets Ready

Amvets, World War II veterans organization, has announced its intention to ask Congress for an immediate veterans bonus which they think might cost as much as 67 billion dollars The organization said it wall carry its proposal to congress soon.

A similar bill prepared by the Veterans of Foreign Wars is in the house hopper, having been offered by Rep. Rankin, Mississippi.

Cupid Curbed

The army is making it tougher for American G.I.'s to marry German frauleins. In the first place, many army authorities and chaplains suspect too many German girls are using marriage as an excuse to escape from the hard life of occupied Germany to the United States. There is also an apparent desire to protect young draftees expected to start arriving soon in Germany.

U. S. BUDGET:
Under Attack

The question whether President Truman's 21 billion dollar budget was excessive was being raised again. This time John Foster Dulles, chairman of the U. S. delegation to the United Nations general assembly in Paris, raised the issue.

The budget, which Dulles questioned, provides 15 billions for military expenditures, six billions for foreign aid during fiscal 1950.

DULLES THOUGHT it too high. He pointed to dwindling war fears and potential menace to U. S. economical health as reasons for curtailment of Truman proposals.

Conceding that there is a "risk" of war, Dulles declared the "risk is not so great that we should seriously jeopardize our own economic health . . . by saddling ourselves with such vast armament."

Dulles suggested cause, implied a remedy. He blamed lack of sufficient unification of U. S. armed forces for administration belief in the need of huge military outlay, and declared that present huge military expenditures cannot go on.

"I think our armament is exaggerated by the fact that there is not sufficient unification between the different branches of our (armed) services," he said. "It seems as though the rivalry were such that each branch wants to be strong enough so that if there is a war it can win it alone, without help from anybody."

Dulles said there is "less fear of war," than there was last year, but commented:

"OF COURSE, there is always a risk. You have a tense situation like a dry autumn in the woods when any fool can start a fire.

"It is entirely possible, however, to have better relations with Russia and I think it is probable."

The problem was up to congress. Could it gamble on the "fool" in the woods, or should it prepare with all possible equipment to stand by for a possible conflagration?

Tourist Queen

This German fraulein, Miss Elli Giovanelli, was chosen "tourist queen" and will tour the U.S. this year in an effort to stimulate attendance at an import exhibition in western Germany.

PERFECT:
Testers Amazed

U. S. air force intelligence testers rubbed their eyes, looked again. Yes, there it was—a perfect I. Q. score by a gangling, bespectacled Kentucky youth seeking a connection with the military.

WILLIAM M. BELEW, 18, of Simpsonville had done what no one before him had been able to achieve, something the army believed impossible. Told he was not expected to answer all the questions correctly, he nevertheless went ahead and, in rapid-fire order, dashed through the test without a single error.

It was the preliminary test given volunteers at the air force recruiting office in Louisville. The testers were amazed. They checked, rechecked the score, found it perfect. They then checked the records. Sure enough, Belew was the first to make a perfect score.

THESE NEW TESTS, much more exacting than the old, have been in use since last May. Questions are divided into three sections, vocabulary, arithmetic, and perception of spatial relationship. There are 45 questions and they must be answered in 40 minutes.

Belew will give the air force a trial. If he likes it, he will make it a career; if he doesn't he will take up accounting.

A Simpsonville high school basketballer and diamond performer, Belew stands six feet tall, weighs 160 pounds, was expected to pass the army physical examination with ease.

Tax Bill Is Rabbit Stew To Congressman Doughton

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Another rabbit stew has been served up to Rep. Robert L. Doughton of North Carolina, and he's all ready for it. Representative Doughton, I might suggest if you don't know it, is not only the oldest member of the house of representatives (85) but likewise the oldest hand at handling tax measures.

He had to step down from the chairmanship of the ways and means committee for the brief Republican interlude. Now he's back at the old stand, sharpening the butcher knife again.

But to get back to rabbit stew.

Last season when President Truman vetoed the second Knutson tax-cutting bill and and fired it back at congress, a reporter asked Doughton how he felt about it. He leaned back and told a story, for he's fond of answering in parables.

BAUKHAGE

A Tarheel housewife, it seems, served her husband rabbit stew every night for a week. When the second Saturday night came around and the same old dish with it, the husband bowed his head as usual, but instead of saying grace he was heard to mutter:

"Rabbit's rough. Rabbit's tough. Oh, Lord, I've had rabbit enough"

That, opined Mr. Doughton, was the way he felt about the tax bills.

But he has to help meet the biggest peacetime budget ever submitted to a congress and he's ready for it.

In the 38 years that he has represented the state of North Carolina in the congress, the habits of the dean of the octogenarian's club in the lower house have changed very little since the last time. I explored them in some detail more than a score of years ago.

He has earned a tremendous respect from the men who work on fiscal matters in the house of representatives where the money bills have to originate. And because he has a theory of his own about collecting and spending the people's money, no bill comes out of his committee looking very different than he wants it to look, though it may not always suit, all the other members. Doughton doesn't go so far as to say that fiscal legislation should be non-partisan, but he does say it ought to be as non-provincial and as pro-national as possible.

His experience in collecting money that ought to be collected goes back a long way.

One story involves a man he went to see about a horse—two horses, to be exact. This man had bought a team from Doughton (the congressman is still a farmer in his own right, though he has to spend more time away from home than he used to). Later on the man wrote that he didn't think the span was worth the $800 he had agreed to pay and wouldn't pay it. The deal had been negotiated at a distance and the principals had never met. So one day Doughton dropped in at the farm and said he wanted to look over a good team. The man showed several, but none seemed to suit Mr. Doughton.

"All right," said the man, "I'll show you the best pair you ever saw in you life."

He brought out the horses recently acquired from Mr. Doughton, but still unpaid for. And what might they be worth? Well considerably over $800.

Mr. Doughton introduced himself and didn't have much trouble in collecting.

There is another reason why Doughton is a good man to have on the collecting end of a bargain—if you aren't the debtor He's a farmer, true, but he is also a banker, and he works at both when he isn't in Washington. He doesn't keep banker's hours, however. He goes to his office at 6:30 a.m., works throughout the day, and he's often back in the office after dinner. He lives right across the plaza from the Capital.

For the first 45 years or so of his life, Mr. Doughton held no elective office, but he managed to find time for an active interest in his community which is deep in the Carolina hills. Laurel Spring, N. C., is still his home. He was born on his parent's farm near there. His father, wounded in the war between the states, died when he was a grown boy. His mother was keenly active to her last hours, interested in the day's mail and the daily newspaper to the last.

Inheriting some land from his father, the boy started off for himself, gradually acquiring more until he became a livestock raiser and farmer. Then he entered business, finally becoming president of a bank.

He has described himself as a horse trader. There are many tales that have grown up about his astuteness that, if embellished by repetition, are not doubted by those who have watched his steady advancement in congress

He entered under a Republican regime—President Taft's—accepted minor committee appointments, but rose rapidly to the position he holds today—chairman of the powerful ways and means committee

One of the horse-trader stories he tells is this: after disposing of some animals he had meant to sell, he was made a very attractive offer for the horse he was riding—his own saddle horse. Done, he took the money, turned over the bridle, put the saddle under his arm and walked back home, 70 miles, says tradition, under his own power.

There doesn't seem to have been any deep-laid plan for a political career in the farmer boy's mind when he began life among the ox-carts and hand looms of those early days in the South following the war Nor yet when he had acquired his own acres and entered into the business life of the community He was chosen a member of the state board of agriculture and served on the prison board

Then one day it was decided to run him for the state senate He was elected and served for a term. Congress was next, but there was a sort of unwritten law in his district that one term was all a man could expect, for Republicans and Democrats had always swapped terms

But Doughton changed all that. Or at least his constituents did. When he had served his term in the 62nd congress, instead of retiring him, as had been the custom, the voters sent him right back again, and they have been doing it ever since.

There isn't any question that Robert L. Doughton likes his job in Washington. But it's equally true that when the session is over, he likes to hie himself back to his Carolina hills and enjoy life there.

Around the capital he has the reputation as being as good a judge of men as he is of horses

This year President Truman's request for six billion dollars more in taxes, including some social security withholding levies, will get very careful scrutiny before it becomes law. Meanwhile, Doughton's committee has to take care of the bill to extend reciprocal trade treaties. Also, studies will begin on the subject of extending social security benefits. There is in addition the matter of certain revisions in the basic tax code.

But Representative Doughton is used to rabbit stew.

The biggest peacetime budget ever submitted to a congress ($48,858,000,000) has its opponents, too. Rep. Charles Halleck (R., Ind.), former GOP majority leader, and Rep. John Taber (R., N. Y.), former chairman of the house appropriations committee, look grimly at the voluminous budget, promise a fierce fight to slash all spending proposals.

The Gentle Extortionist

By CHARLES STUART

Things have a way of working out for the best and giving you renewed faith in people—people like Marty Stone, who fancied himself a pretty hard-headed business man, and Doc Howell, who found that Marty's heart was softer than his head, but who couldn't cure the lump in his own throat.

FROM my small office I can see anyone who passes through the wide front doorway before he can see me. In that brief period I can size up a prospective customer, and that's how it was with Fred Miller.

He was small and frail-appearing. There was nothing spectacular about him except his tie, but it was an eye-catcher. Like a nervous monkey, he batted his eyes rapidly to adjust them to the semi-gloom of the garage. I had time to catalog him as a cinch for a lot of extras.

Seeing me in the office, he came over, hesitating at the door until I said, "Come on in." I stood to shake his thin hand.

He had blue eyes that were deep-set in their orbits; they hung on mine like those of a dog that isn't sure of a kick or a caress. The flesh beneath them sagged into pouches, and his face was deeply lined. He had the unwholesome pallor of a man who spends a great deal of time in-doors.

"What can I do for you?" I asked.

"Why," he said, "I want to buy a car."

"So do a thousand other people in this town," I reminded him.

"I know. That's why I'm here now. I want to get on your list for a future delivery."

Even as I told him it would be at least two years before he'd get his car, the way things were moving, I was remembering things that I had heard about him—how his home had been broken, how his wife had taken their boy and gone out to the coast. It was said that Miller had agreed to some fantastic alimony if only she would let the boy come to him for at least a part of the year. He had some sort of minor post in one of the government agencies in town; I knew it couldn't pay very much. I didn't see how he would be able to pay me for the price of a new auto, but two years is a long time and much could happen in the interim. Anyway, I could always sell a new car. So I felt around in my desk and finally came up with the list. "What kind do you want? Coupe? Sedan?"

"A coupe, please."

"With or without wheels?"

Fred smiled, tentatively. He wasn't sure whether or not he was supposed to laugh.

"I'd like wheels, of course," he answered.

"Want to put something down?"

"Yes, I'd like to. How much do you require?"

"Suit yourself. Even if you give me the full purchase price, it won't bring your car any sooner."

He nodded. "Fair enough. I'll leave you two hundred."

I took the bills and gave him a receipt. Then I asked if he had a trade-in.

He looked startled. "No, Mr. Stone, I haven't. Is it necessary to have one?"

"Oh, no. Not absolutely necessary." A trade-in is still nice to have, though, for there is money in those used cars.

"I don't really have a car at all," he explained. "That's why I want this one. My boy will be coming to visit me every summer and he's getting pretty big now." His eyes lit up, talking about the kid. "In two years he'll be eighteen and he'll want a car. This is no town for a boy if he has to walk everywhere or depend on others for transportation. I plan to have a nice auto for him when he's ready for it."

"Yeah, yeah. That'll be fine." There was something holding back in him when he talked about that kid, and it made me uncomfortable. As though he might talk about him the rest of the day if he had any encouragement. But I wasn't giving him any.

"We'll see what we can do," I said, and stood up.

He arose immediately. "You're busy," he was apologetic, "and I've taken so much of your time."

"Not at all," I said, "come in and see me again."

"Oh, I will," he answered, "you'll get so tired of seeing me around you'll want to throw me out. By the way, Mr. Stone, how much will the car cost?"

"Hard to say, Fred, right now it sells for eighteen hundred. But you guess with me as to what it will cost two years from now."

I'm sure he only half-heard me. He said, like he was almost talking to himself, "Eighteen hundred. About what I figured. I'll have it."

He wasn't like most of my customers; he didn't keep harping on me for the new car. Until summer came, at any rate. Then one day he brought the boy in. He was lots taller than the old man, already, and devoted to him. From then on until the boy went back to the coast, they were in the garage at least once each day, poring over pictures of the new auto, questioning my mechanics, and discussing it between themselves. Even after the boy had gone back to the coast, Fred would come in and pick up any new literature I might have on the car I knew what he'd do with it, too; make notes in the margins, write letters about the auto, and send them all on to that boy.

Time went along. The wife and my boys went off on a vacation. I never liked going home to an empty house, so I would put it off to the last minute, and hang around the club till bedtime. That's how I found out that Fred liked the social life and late hours. I sort of figured that accounted for the bags under his eyes.

But Doc Howell set me right. He and I got away for a few days hunting, and somehow on the way to the mountains, Fred Miller crept into our conversation.

"Here's something Fred wanted you to have," I told him. His eyes were so full he could hardly find the door handle.

Doc thought it a shame the way his wife treated him. "That woman milks him for every cent he can get. He owes everyone, including me."

I thought about all the times I had seen Fred down at the club. Now it costs money to belong, and if one gets into the games very often, that's expensive, too. Fred didn't stack very high with me right then, because I couldn't see how he could be broke and keep up the activities I had observed. I guess Doc read my thoughts.

"Don't be too hard on Fred, Marty," he said. "You may not know it, but he isn't down there at that club every night just for fun. He has a sort of job; assistant to the steward. I rather suspect he lives on what he makes there, and sends his regular salary check out to the wife, for that boy." He watched the road for a few moments before continuing. "Fred is not at all well. If he would take it easy, get a lot of rest and stop drinking, he might last a long time, but—" his voice trailed off into silence. He rarely talked about his patients, I figured he thought he had said too much already.

I forgot about Fred after that until one fine summer day I found that the next car on my list was for him. But I was dubious about the deal. After all, I was in business to make money; there was a lot of names after his that would be a great deal better business. It looked like Fred Miller was about to get the go-by, at least for a little while.

Then that same day I twisted my knee and had to go to Doc's office to get it wrapped. Climbing the well-worn stairs, I met Fred coming down. He looked just about all in, and very sad. I thought to myself: "Oh well, what can I lose?" and told him about the car.

His face broke into a million wrinkles as he smiled. "That's fine," he said, "that's good. The boy will like that." He went on down the steps with a lot more life to his tread. I went on up to Doc's.

Just to make conversation, I asked him what was wrong with Fred. His answer was vague, as I might have known it would be.

"Can't understand the little fellow; he goes right on doing all the things I tell him are bad, yet he keeps coming in here to have me check him over. All I can do is shake my head, tell him to get more rest and stop burning the candle from both ends." He adjusted a couple of pads around my leg, plugged some wires into a machine, and flicked a switch. "Doesn't seem to worry him. Can you tell me why?"

Neither of us knew then, but we got the answer later.

When his car was being unloaded at the railway dock, I called him. Most of my customers like to be on hand to get a first glimpse of the car for which they have waited so long. After awhile, he showed up, and I was shocked at his appearance. He was walking slow and easy, like the old man he looked to be. His cheeks were hollow, his sunken eyes deeper than ever. The pouches below them hung away down.

But he was surely happy about the car. I told him it would take a couple of days to get it into shape for delivery.

"Good enough," he said, "I expect the boy over about then."

I never saw Fred again.

Doc let me know. He called me. "Come on over, will you, Marty?" I knew from his tone it was important, so I hung up and went right away. He was sitting in his private office.

When I came in, he pushed a bulky envelope across the desk to me. It was addressed to me in an unfamiliar hand. Opening it, I found a two-thousand-dollar insurance policy with me as the beneficiary. The name of the policy holder?

Fred A. Miller!

I showed it to Doc. "Yeah," he said, "Fred died last night. Natural causes, yet he could have lived a lot longer. Only eventually he would become an invalid, and his son would want to take care of him. On the other hand, he could duck out now and leave the lad something. I guess he chose to have the boy remember him as something other than a sick old man."

I could see the picture. But you just don't know what to say in such cases. So I guess I sounded a little irrelevant when I said, "Cars have gone up, Doc. This two thousand won't cover it now."

Doc looked as though he were disappointed in me. He pulled out his check book and picked up a pen. "Well, I want that boy to have that car, Martin. How much is the difference?"

"Put that stuff back, Doc," I said, "you don't have a corner on soft hearts and softer heads."

He grinned then. "I want to share it, at least."

After old Fred had been decently tucked away—and it was amazing how many friends the old boy had—I called the kid over to the garage. Doc and I led him to the car.

"Here's something Fred wanted you to have," I told him. His eyes were so full he could hardly find the door handle. "And here's another thing he told us to give you." He took the slip of paper I handed him, and I was glad he couldn't read it right then. He only nodded; he couldn't talk, although twice he tried. He put the car in gear and backed out.

Doc and I stood on the sidewalk to watch him drive down the street. About a block away, he pulled over to the curb and stopped. My guess was that he couldn't see through the tears that must have been tumbling down his cheeks. After all, he was only a kid.

I shoved my hands into my pockets and looked at my feet, not talking. For a minute, Doc didn't say anything, either. Then: "What was that you gave him?"

My tone was defensive. Hadn't Doc treated Fred for nothing? "You really didn't think I could keep that policy, did you?"

Doc's voice was sort of soft and strange when he finally answered. "Fred sure knew a soft-hearted sucker when he saw one didn't he?" He turned and started off. "Now I'm going down to the office and see if modern medicine provides anything for a lump in the throat."

tricks for teens

CLASS CONSCIOUS

We like to report your kindness to less fortunate teens in foreign countries—because it proves that you teens think with your hearts as well as your heads. Most of you have been making collections for "Care" packages in your home rooms, but, as an extra activity, foreign language classes in lots of high schools are sending packages and letters to teens in the countries whose language they're studying. Of course, you must write the letters in the foreign language, which is good practice for you and good reading for the grateful teens who receive and answer them in their native tongues. It's lucky for you that Latin is now a dead language, because after you'd written that "all Gaul was divided into three parts," there would be nothing else to say.

MIRROR of your MIND ● ● ● All Work, No Play . . .

By Lawrence Gould

Can you take your job too seriously?

Answer: Yes, if you attempt to make it take the place in your life that belongs to things which mean more to your natural instincts—to your need to be loved and admired, for instance. Healthy-minded men and women find their deepest satisfaction in relationships with other human beings; they enjoy wealth or success, but do not feel their "lives depend" upon them. And only a person who makes his career a "compensation" for his failure to love and be loved will take it so seriously that he'll "break down" worrying about it.

Are women responsible for the spread of neurosis?

Answer: The change in their status is, says Dr. Richard H. Hutchings, former President of the American Psychiatric Association. The uncertainty of the average woman as to whether she should be content to be a wife and mother or have a "career" of her own and be relatively independent undermines her children's feeling of security and paves the way for them to become neurotic. There are two sides to the question, and a woman whose ambitions are frustrated cannot be or make her children happy, but children still want a mother who will "stay put."

Should a child be punished for bed-wetting?

Answer: Never—that's the best way to make him unable to out-grow the habit. Once a child has learned to control himself when awake—especially if the lesson was not forced on him too early—a relapse at night is usually an expression of resentment which he did not dare show in his waking hours but which is too strong to resist when he is relaxed in slumber. This may grow out of a feeling that a younger baby has usurped his place in your affections, or that you have ceased to love him, and the more he's punished, the stronger the feeling.

KEEPING HEALTHY

Cancer 'Detectives'

By Dr. James W. Barton

ALL OVER the world today groups of men and women are organizing to fight the ills that interfere with the health and happiness of mankind. Thus, there are diabetes, arthritis, epilepsy, heart, tuberculosis and, most important, cancer organizations.

It now is know that cancer can be cured in its early stages. Cancer organizations, while continuing to spend money to try to find the cause of cancer, are spending more time and money to supply citizens with detection depots or centers These centers are under the supervision of cancer specialists and equipped to detect cancer—early.

An editorial in the Journal of American Medical Association some weeks ago stated that the medical attack on cancer includes: (1) prevention, (2) early detection and (3) adequate treatment.

Because early detection is the only way life can be saved, the best method of preventing cancer getting beyond the curable stage would be to have every man and woman, especially those over 40, examined—even if perfectly well.

To make an examination of every well man and woman would cost much money, but would save valuable lives as the middle-aged man and woman is a valuable asset to the community. As this universal examination may be some time in coming, what can and should be done to check cancer before it is too late?

The suggestion that can be followed at present is that every physician, busy as most of them are these days, should see more cancers, study their early appearance and be on the watch for the disease in all his middle-aged patients, men and women.

Diagnostic examinations are of two general types: (a) The relatively brief examination of apparently well persons over 40, in a search for tumors that are easy to see and treat (especially skin, lips, breast, uterus and rectum) and (b) the more detailed examination of persons with early suspicious signs and symptoms of cancer.

★ HEALTH NOTES ★

Overweight is not only a forerunner but an actual cause of high blood pressure.

If you're pale and you tire easily, avoid pernicious anemia by eating more meat and green vegetables to supply more iron to the blood. Be sure to include plenty of liver in your diet. Also plenty of egg yolk and whole grains.

Two conditions which cause breathlessness, often mistaken as a symptom of heart disease, are eating too much acid food—meat, eggs, fish—and having a blocked nose, which does not allow enough oxygen to reach the lungs and purify the blood.

Eating less food, almost to the point of starvation for certain periods, will lower blood pressure.

OBITUARY OF MRS. VELONA PAVEY

VELONA P. RIDENOUR was born May 11th, 1862 in Preston County, West Virginia. She was one of a family of five daughters and seven sons born to her parents, John and Elizabeth (Frush) Ridenour.

When Velona was three years old, the family purchased a farm and moved to near Garrison, Benton County, Iowa.

Here Velona was reared to womanhood, attended the rural schools, and became a member of the Brethern Church. Her father was the pastor of this Church.

In 1883, at the age of 21, Velona P. Ridenour and Eli Martin Pavey were married and they began housekeeping on the husband's farm in Benton County. And then for sixty-one years this family moved many times—in fact they lived on seven different farms, which included 4 years in Kansas, 14 years in Hancock County, and the other years in and around Benton County, namely: at Tama, Garrison, Van Horn and Mt. Auborn.

And then, in 1944, after sixty-one years, the home was saddened by the death of the husband, Eli Pavey.

Two years later Mrs. Pavey discontinued housekeeping and lived with her son James and family in Garrison, Iowa.

In September 1947, Mrs. Pavey came to Klemme, Iowa, and was given loving care in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Pavey, where she was bedfast most of the time.

Mrs. Pavey was always willing to extend a helping hand to a neighbor who was ill or in distress. She was never idle, never complained, always optomistic, ever cheerful and smiling.

But the infirmities of age gradually lowered her vitality, and the end came Wednesday morning, February 2nd, 1949.

She reached the age of 86 years, 8 months and 22 days, and leaves to mourn her passing:

Two Sons:
Wallace F. Pavey, Klemme, Iowa.
James C. Pavey, Garrison, Iowa.
A third son, Lester, preceded her in death.
Six Grandchildren.
Eight Great Grandchildren.
Four Sisters:
Mrs. Bessie Walker, Chapin, Iowa.
Mrs. Sadie Brollier, Portland, Oregon.
Mrs. Molly Carlis, McPherson, Kansas.
Mrs. Seville Trego, Wausau, Wisconsin.
Two Brothers:
Jesse Ridenour, Garrison, Iowa.
Joseph E. Ridenour, Waterloo, Iowa.

FRESHMAN DISPLAY

The Freshman girls wish to thank Thada's store for letting them use their window to display their Home Economics projects. Due to weather and road conditions Pauline Kramer, Mary Pannhoff, and Judith Brede were unable to put their projects in the window.

SENIOR INTERVIEW

Our topic for discussion this week is hazel-eyed Madelyn Lundy. Her hair is brown and her age is 17. She was born in 1931 on December 5 Ice cream tops the list as her favorite food. The subject which she considers her best is bookkeeping and she spends quite a lot of time on it. "Lavender Blue is her favorite song, but other music must appeal to her as her favorite pastime is dancing Sewing seems to be her hobby that occupies most of her spare time Last, but not least her pet peeve is Garner boys (at least that is what she says)

FRESHMAN NEWS

In literature we have been reading stories about famous people, such as George Washington Carver and we find them very interesting

Solving equations with two unknown numbers has kept us quite busy in algebra The equations are worked out on graphs.

Travel On Air, is the name of the chapter we have been studying in general science.

In home economics we have been studying about breakfasts The boys are still busy on their projects in manual training also.

SOPHOMORE NEWS

In geometry for the past few weeks we've been studying circles. Thursday Mr Andreae gave us a quiz and now we think we should have studied a little harder

How Organisms Meet the Food Problem, has been the title of the chapter we have been studying in biology Today we finished it and so Mrs Andreae gave us a test.

In history we had a test too, and everyone realized that they must have forgotten their thinking caps at home but who could remember after our long vacation.

GRADE NEWS

Fifth nd Sixth Grades

The fifth graders have completed a unit in History called "The Machine Age" We have made note books with all the modern machines in and some have included old fashioned cars and machines in them. They also have made riddles and poems about the machines invented. David Waddingham wrote: "It is quite big, but nimble and quick. And it can cut grain quite click." Ione Rosendhl's poem is:

"A little machine was the cotton gin, that could do the work of ten men, it took the seed from the lint, without men using their hands in it."

The fifth grade boys played the third and fourth grade boys in a basket ball game last Thursday morning. The fifth grade won with a score of 11 to 0.

The sixth grade have started their Iowa history note books. We will all have to work hard to keep them up to date.

Both fifth and sixth grades have started in their Health books for this last semester. We have an Honor Roll up for a clean hands campaign. Every boy and girl must wash their hands before every meal. If this is done for a week a gold star will be placed after their names. After four gold stars they will receive a silver star.

Seventh and Eighth Grades

Most of the people are back to school after a long weekend. Some of the country people who live quite a ways out of town are absent yet.

We were all dissappointed because our skating party was postponed because of the roads.

Wednesday, the 12th, we played the Garner Junior High on our floor. The first team lost by a score of 29 to 27. The second team did better and won 21 to 17 We also had a game with them played on their own floor, Wednesday, the 19th. The first team lost again by the score of 22-16, but as usual our second team come out on top this time 23-17. We want to thank those who drove for them when they played them the 27th at Garner.

Wednesday we had Arithmatic drills all day. Some of us found we weren't as smart as we thought we were.

FROM TIME TO TIME

there will be little quips, jokes stories, bits of philosphy and jems of harmless gossip appearing in this most obscure corner of the "Screamer." If we think you need a rest this space will be blank.

Some of the stories will be like this one.

It is about the friend of our who needed a field cultivator. He bought a used one at a farm sale. Then he found out that we had a new one here of the same make and size that was priced for almost forty dollars less money than what he paid for the used one.

Don't ask for particulars about a yarn like this, because we won't tell even to prove the story.

SERVE CHERRIES IN DESSERTS THIS MONTH!

CHERRY FAVORITES

FOR A MONTH which is short, February has more than its quota of holidays. Just in case you're entertaining for even one of these, I've planned a number of popular desserts from which you can take your choice.

Youngsters and oldsters alike will enjoy colorful desserts whether they're for family dinner or a party. You may serve them ice cream, cake or pudding, or pie, if that's your favorite dessert, and it's bound to be a hit.

Here are a number of top-notch cherry dessert recipes which may be used during this month or any other. Starting with a cherry pie filling, you'll find that several other desserts can be made from it. Filled cup cakes, cherry sundae topping or a cherry frozen pudding, all are made using the same, easy basic cherry sauce that is used for pie filling. The sauce may be stored in the refrigerator for later use or for quick snacks when company drops in to call.

YOU'LL FIND that canned cherries are convenient to use and somewhat lower in price than last year. The following recipes call for water-packed cherries. If you use those packed in syrup, reduce the sugar in the recipe to ¼ cup.

All-Purpose Cherry Sauce
(Makes 2½ cups)

- 1 No. 2 can red sour pitted cherries
- ⅔ cup sugar
- 2 tablespoons cornstarch
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 2 tablespoons butter

Heat the drained liquid from the cherries. Combine sugar, cornstarch and salt. Sift into the boiling liquid and cook until thick and clear, stirring constantly. Remove from heat; add butter and cherries.

Cherry Pie

Fil an 8-inch baked pie shell with 2½ cups of the all-purpose cherry sauce. Garnish with 3 tablespoons shredded coconut mixed with 1 tablespoon grated sharp cheese.

Cherry Sundae
(Serves 4)

- 1 cup all-purpose cherry sauce
- 1 pint ice cream

Prepare the cherry sauce. Divide the ice cream into 4 servings. Top each with cherry sauce. Serve sauce hot or cold.

Cherry Filled Cup Cakes

- 2½ cups all-purpose cherry sauce
- 10 cakes

Prepare the cherry sauce. Cut off tops of cup cakes and scoop out centers. Fill with cherry sauce. Serve with vanilla-flavored whipped cream.

Frozen Cherry Pudding
(Serves 6)

- ½ pint whipping cream
- 2½ cups all-purpose cherry sauce
- 3 drops almond flavoring

Whip cream until stiff; fold in cold cherry sauce and flavoring. Pour into freezing tray of mechanical refrigerator and freeze until firm but not hard.

IF YOU'R looking for other cherry recipes with which to celebrate any event, you'll like the following selection. The first is a delicious cookie:

Cherry Dainties

- 1 cup sifted flour
- ⅛ teaspoon salt
- Chopped nuts
- Candied cherries

Cream butter, add sugar and cream thoroughly. Add egg yolk, rind and lemon juice. Mix well, add flour and salt. Mix to a smooth paste. Roll into small balls, the size of marbles. Dip each in slightly beaten egg white and roll in chopped nuts. Arrange on greased baking sheet and press a piece of candied cherry in each cookie. Bake in a moderate (350°F.) oven until golden brown, about 12-15 minutes.

George Washington Cake
(Makes 2 9-inch layers)

- ⅔ cup shortening
- 1½ cups sugar
- 2⅔ cups cake flour
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- ½ teaspoon soda
- 1 cup sour milk or buttermilk
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 4 stiffly-beaten egg whites

Thoroughly cream sugar and shortening. Add sifted dry ingredients alternately with sour milk and vanilla. Fold in egg whites. Bake in 2 waxed-paper lined 9-inch pans in a moderate (350°F.) oven for 30 minutes. Put layers together and frost with the folowing frosting and garnish with maraschino cherries

Twice-Cooked Frosting

- 2 cups sugar
- ½ cup water
- ⅛ teaspoon cream of tartar
- ⅛ teaspoon salt
- 2 egg whites
- 1 teaspoon vanilla

Cook sugar, water and cream of tartar to soft ball stage (236°F.) Add salt to egg whites; beat until frothy. Place over hot water and gradually add sugar syrup, beating constantly. Continue beating until mixture forms peaks.

Cherry Pudding
(Serves 6 - 8)

- 1 quart hot milk
- 2 cups dry bread crumbs
- 3 tablespoons butter
- 4 eggs, slightly beaten
- 1½ cups sugar
- 2½ cups red, sour canned cherries, drained

Pour the scalded milk over the bread crumbs and mix with remaining ingredients in the order given. Pour into a greased casserole and bake in a moderate (350°F.) oven for 45 minutes or until set.

If you desire a sauce for the above pudding, use the cherry juice from the canned cherries, sweeten it to taste and thicken with 2 teaspoons of cornstarch mixed with the sugar. Cook until clear and serve warm or cold.

LYNN SAYS:

Food Tricks Make Dishes Appealing

Did you know that a bit of curry powder in corned beef hash will put it in the elegant class? You can stuff green peppers with the mixture for a meal in one dish.

Use the tough portions of broccoli cooked and pured, mixed with cream sauce and hard cooked eggs for a nice vegetable dish.

Sliced stuffed olives with creamed veal or veal stew add both color and flavor to it.

Simple supper dish can be made from shreds of leftover roast and diced cooked potatoes folded into white sauce, then baked in a buttered casserole with a topping of grated cheese or buttered bread crumbs.

Pork sausage patties combine well with macaroni and sauerkraut for a warming one-dish meal. Bake thoroughly.

Aspic salad made with deviled ham and hard-cooked eggs, seasoned with chili sauce, takes on real distinction.

WEEKLY PICTURE STORY

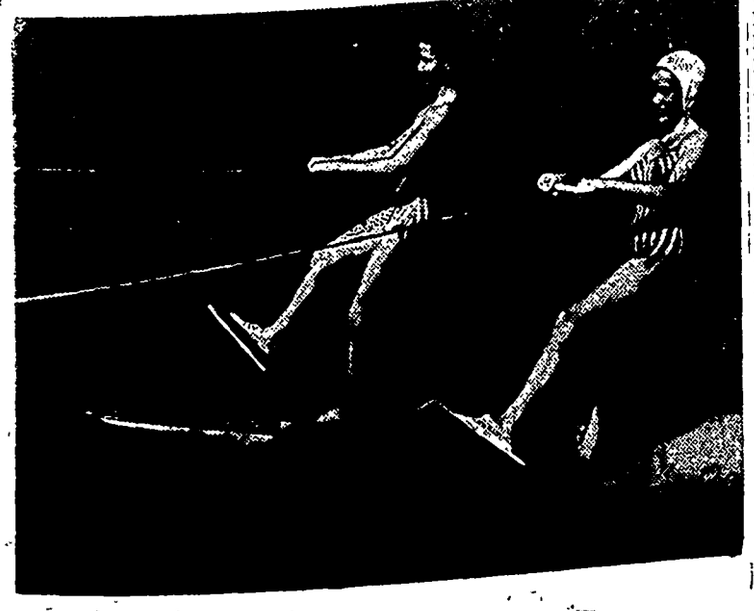
THESE are the people who go down to the seas on skis—or spank the waves with barrel staves. Florida's youngsters, who never know the childhood thrill of coasting down a snowy hill on a sled, make up for it by taking to surf skis almost before they take to hard-soled shoes. The sport is a lot of fun, and it takes a lot of nerve and skill in about equal proportions.

The kids cavorting through this series of pictures are Dick Pope, Jr., and Sammie Stilley, two of the many ski enthusiasts at the Winter Haven, Fla., high school. Last summer both came away with top honors in the junior division of the National Water Ski championships at Holland, Mich. Dick holds the national junior boys' title; Sammie is National girls' champion.



"Tandem riding" (above) is one of the tricks required of contestants in the water ski tournaments. Try it the next time you get up out of your rocking chair. At the right is the start of another stunt which involves kicking off one recreation ski and continuing the trip on just a shoe ski. It's all a part of tournament fun and they love it in Florida.

Inevitable Critics

Lesson for February 13, 1949

ONCE UPON a time, so the old story goes, there was a chameleon, a lizard that can change its color to match whatever it stands on. They put him on a black cloth and he turned black; on a red tablecloth and he turned red; on a green billiard table and he turned green. Then some mean person set him down on a Christmas necktie —and the poor little thing exploded. This is a parable of the person who tries to please everybody. It can't be done—and it ought not to be tried. "Woe unto you," said Jesus, "when all men speak well of you."

Dr. Foreman

Jesus Christ himself did not please every one. Not even a perfect personality can be 100 per cent popular. Not that Jesus enjoyed rubbing people the wrong way. There was nothing perverse about him He was deeply, sincerely friendly, and to lose any friendships must have been more painful for him than for us who are so selfish. Nevertheless he did make enemies, he had his critics; and his followers may expect no better.

Misunderstanding Motives

ONE POINT on which Jesus met terrific opposition was his attitude toward the Sabbath. Repeatedly he or his disciples would do things on the Sabbath which (as Jews then understood the law) were quite wrong.

It was just that sort of thing that Jesus ran into, more than once. His enemies misunderstood, or at least misrepresented, his motives.

They claimed that he was "blasphemous," that is, that he was deliberately making light of God's law. The truth was that he was acting by God's highest law—the law of love. Helping people in need was more important than keeping the letter of the Sabbath law. Jesus' example may help us here. If our best motives are misunderstood, we have a right to explain ourselves, as Jesus did; but we are not obliged to change our ways to please those who persist in misunderstanding us.

Stepping Out of Bounds

WHEN Jesus healed the man with the palsy, it was not the cure his critics found fault with, it was his first saying "Your sins are forgiven." "Who can forgive sins but God alone?" they said. In short, the Pharisees thought — some of them perhaps sincerely—that Jesus was stepping out of bounds, pretending to do something that he had no right to attempt and no power to accomplish.

Now Jesus did have both the right and the power to say what he said to that sick and sinful man. And he made no apologies for going beyond the limits his critics set for him.

So we too may sometimes be accused of "biting off too much," of going beyond our powers or capacities. Our critics may be right, you know, though Jesus' critics never were. But how often they are wrong! If Lincoln had listened to his critics he never would have left his backwoods law office; they did not think him fit to be president. If the Wright boys had listened to their neighbors, they never would have flown an airplane, for who would have thought a couple of bicycle mechanics could do what so many scientists said was impossible?

Are you sure you are right? Then go ahead, in God's name!

The Company You Keep

JESUS' friends got him into trouble, as Mark shows us. For one thing, some were the "wrong sort" like Matthew the tax-collector. Then his friends had an unconventional kind of religion, they actually seemed happy about it instead of gloomy like some of John's disciples. And to make matters worse, his friends "broke" the Sabbath laws much as Jesus did. All in all, Jesus' critics complained that Jsus' friends were a bad lot, and they judged him by the company he kept. But Jesus knew his friends better than his enemies did.

He never gave up or loosened a single friendship on his critics' account. Some of his friends gave him up, but he never gave them up.

War Devise to Aid Polio Victims

A simple valve developed during World War II to give oxygen to wounded flyers at high altitudes is now being used to treat polio patients.

The Mine Safety Appliance company, which originated the mask-like devise, said research and experimentation has been underway since the war's end to adopt the valve to respiratory ailments.

The Council on Physical Medicine of the American Medical association has accepted the devise —which is called a pneaphore— as an adjunct to the "iron lung" and for use in breathing in drugs.

VITAL NEWS FOR RHEUMATIC SUFFERERS

Now modern science reveals why Sloan's is "the greatest name in pain-relieving liniments". . . why so many users get such amazing relief from rheumatic aches, neuralgia, stiff-neck and sore muscles, with either Sloan's Liniment or Balm. Working with infra-red rays, scientists have photographed the blood vessels below the skin surface. These photos show that after the application of Sloan's on the skin, there is a noticeable expansion of the sub-surface veins . . . evidence that an extra supply of blood has been brought to the pain area. This extra blood revitalizes the painful tissues and also carries away waste matter and poisons. (See drawings above, made by a physician, based on photos.)

Scientists have proved further that this beneficial action penetrates deep down below the surface and lasts for hours. You not only feel the welcome comfort, you also know that the all-important increased flow of blood is getting at the spot where the pain is.

Always see your doctor about rheumatism. Meanwhile, to help relieve rheumatic pains, use Sloan's Liniment or the new Sloan's Balm regularly, every morning and evening. Ask for "the greatest name in pain-relieving liniments"—

Lightning Can Strike Twice In The Same Place, Or Can It?

It is said that lightning can strike twice in the same place. Perhaps for the same reason the Klemme city water supply tanks can also go dry At least the tanks were empty of water Sunday morning again. This time a fuse had blown out on the water pump motor

At any rate Klemme residents would not have slept very well if they know they were without fire protection during the night The dryness of the tanks was not noticed until about 7 30 o'clock Sunday morning

The $64 question seems to be "Why do both tanks have to go bone-dry before this condition is noticed?"

FARM BUREAU MEN ASK MORE MONEY FOR SECONDARY ROADS

Five members of the Hancock County Farm Bureau legislative committee this week visited with Senator Herman Knutson and Representative Penn Eckles in Des Moines, where they discussed the Farm Bureau program regarding reads, schools nd other local problems with the county's legislators

The committee. headed by the chairman, Vic Loebig, included the following Farm Bureau members from the county: Clark Lackore, Gilbert Guenther, C. A Bird, Sanford Rogeness and Paul G. Shurts, county Farm Bureau fieldman.

The committee discussed road, tax and school problems with the local legislators, and outlined the Farm Bureau's recommendations with regard to each item.

The Farm Bureau proposes that equal emphasis be placed on secondary roads and highways, and is attempting to head off a move that would give primary roads and highways a major portion of the additional road money which was recommended by the raod study committee appointed by the former Governor Blue.

Also under discussion was the matter of rural schools. Farm Bureau in its resolutions asked additional state aid to schools, amounting to at least 25 per cent of the school costs. This program would bring relief to farm and property owners who have been paying most of the schools costs in the past, and would help to equalize the expenses of education over all classes of taxpayers. The Hancock County committee suggested legislative support for the appropriation of sufficient funds to carry out the provisions of the agricultural land tax credit act, which Farm Bureau sponsored and which also provides certain tax relief to farm owners.

KLEMME COUPLE CELEBRATED 25TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

FARM BUREAU OPPOSES BILL TO LICENSE TRACTORS

County Farm Bureau President, Jack Dethmers, this week said that his organization will oppose any bill in the Iowa Legislature that is designed to impose a license on farm tractors.

He pointed out that tractors are already being taxed as property, but that cars and trucks are not. Furthermore, farmers pay a cent and a half Federal tax on every gallon of gas they use in their tractors, and this money is not refunded even though they may never use their tractor on the highway.

The Federal gas tax money goes first to the Federal Treasury, and then is turned back to the states to be used for highway and road improvement, Mr. Dethmers said.

In addition to the Federal tax on gasoline and oil, the farmer pays taxes to the middle of the road which passes his farm, Thus, he is entitled to some use of it without having to pay even more for the privilege of using it.

The County Farm Bureau president also suggested that it would be next to impossible to establish a pattern for licensing tractors that would be fair to everyone.

Some tractors are never used, even so much as to cross a highway. Others are used to cross the road occasionally, and in some cases it is necessary for a farmer to drive his tractor short distances on the road to go from one of his fields to another.

"Where could you draw the line between the farmer who uses his tractor to haul things to and from town, and the farmer who puts his tractor on the road just now and then?" Mr. Dethmers asked.

A bill to license farm tractors has been introduced in the Iowa House of Representatives, and is expected to come up for action one way or the other before the end of the current session of the Iowa Legislature.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Landlords Rebel Over Rent Curbs; Russians Set up Anti-ERP Program; Israel, Egypt Sign End to Fighting

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

REBELLION:
Among Landlords

Chest out, muscles flexed, truculent of attitude, members of the American Property Owners association in 20 cities threatened wholesale eviction of tenants in protest against rental control bills now in congress.

AN OFFICIAL of the organization, composed chiefly of owners of small property, said in Tulsa, Okla., 600 to 1,000 eviction notices would be mailed to Tulsa tenants advising them to vacate within 60 days. Similar action, he said, was expected in Chicago, Houston, Kansas City, Detroit, St. Louis, Fort Wayne, Grand Rapids, Danville, Ill., and other cities.

The eviction notices affected rent-controlled housing and included houses and apartments. Business units are not under rent control.

SPEAR-HEADING the Tulsa movement was a retired Baptist minister, the Rev. Wallace J. Murphy, executive-secretary of the 200-member Tulsa property owners organization, and an honorary president of the national association.

The Rev. Murphy termed two rent control bills now before congress "intolerable," and said, "we refuse to operate so long as rental controls are on." Owner of considerable property in Tulsa, the retired clergyman asserted, "we don't intend to serve under slavery which would take away the right to control our property. It is not enough that we must rent our property at a loss—now they want to fine us and put us in jail

Landlords appeared mainly incensed because pending rent curb measures would be giving the federal housing expediter right to control evictions, extend rent control periods, provide triple damages for overcharges on rent, and permit fines up to $5,000 and a year in jail for convicted violators.

OBSERVERS WONDERED if landlords weren't letting their wrath becloud their judgment. For, under existing law, which doesn't expire until late March, landlords are prohibited from doing exactly what the Rev Murphy and his associates plan to do.

The Tulsa incident was merely fuel to the flame of belief that if rent curbs are not maintained, the question of housing for those who cannot afford to buy homes would become even more difficult than it is at present.

RUSSIANS:
Coming to Taw?

Messers Joe Stalin and the politburo, so long and so vocally derisive of everything the western world has or offers, were subconsciously paying that world the sincerest form of flattery—imitation.

The Russians had come forth with their own version of ERP, alphabetical symbol of the Marshall plan for aid to Europe.

AS THE EAST'S answer to the European recovery plan, Russia had organized the economic council of mutual assistance for cooperation with five of her neighbors, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Poland and Romania.

The purpose, as outlined from Moscow, was "the exchange of experience in the economic field, the rendering of technical assistance to each other, and the rendering of mutual assistance in regard to raw materials, foodstuffs, equipment, etc." Russia, with her vast resources, obviously was to be the key nation in the council.

The Kremlin held the door open to other nations. The announcement said, "other countries of Europe that share the principles of the council and wish to participate in broad economic cooperation with the aforementioned countries," may join.

THAT MOSCOW was considering the Marshall plan when its six-nation council was formed was evident in a Russian charge that the ERP interfered with the sovereignty of nations, and that the U. S., Britain, and "certain other countries of western Europe" were boycotting the six nations in trade.

The Russian action may prove to be the vital error in the Soviets' program of expansion. If the system fails to function, it will serve only to spotlight the efficacy of the Marshall plan and the superiority of the western nations in equipment and ability to keep European commitments.

New Leader

Li Tsing-jen, China's nationalist vice-president was holding the reins of organized government following Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's departure from Nanking to clear the way for a Communist-directed peace.

PEACE DOVE:
Hovers in East

Hovering wings of the dove of peace were becoming faintly audible in the Holy Land dispute.

Israil and Egypt signed a permanent cease-fire order and armistice talks were still going on after recent difficulties.

THERE WERE even more significant developments looking toward final peace in the long controversy stemming from the partition of the Holy Land to make the area available as a place of settlement and nationalization of Jews.

Great Britain had capitulated, and with the British lion on its side, the new nation of Israel had the two most powerful nations in the world committed to its support.

Other nations were falling in line to recognize the Jewish state. Indications were that with the trend apparently fully in motion, Arab opponents to the Israeli state would soon be standing completely alone in their opposition.

SHOULD THAT condition eventuate, Israeli seemingly would have nothing to fear, inasmuch as its armies already have proven a match for Arab forces.

Bible students and others religiously inclined would be quick to see in the developments the beginning of fulfillment of the old prophecy that the Holy Land would one day be returned to the Jews, that they would one day become a nation again, with their own flag, their own land, their own government.

SURPLUSES:
Curbs Are Sought

Fearful of large surpluses of wheat and cotton, the government was studying moves to prevent this contingency.

Secretary of Agriculture Charles Brannan outlined to a senate agriculture committee plans to hold down this year's cotton and wheat crops.

Brannon's plan called for serving notice on wheat and cotton farmers that the 1949 crops they plant will not be considered part of their average production in figuring any future acreage allotments. This means growers could plant fewer acres without being penalized later by proportionate acreage chrbs on their crops.

Under present law, if acreage controls are renewed, the average acreage planted by a farmer in the five previous years is the amount he is entitled to plant.

Many officials felt that might induce many farmers to plant as much as they can in order to have the maximum possible acreage when and if controls are clamped on.

Brannan's plan, assuring the farmer of no restrictive penalties through curtailment of acreage, was seen as a possible curb on any excessive planting.

About as large a winter wheat crop as possible already has been planted and a committee member declared cotton farmers are preparing to plant an "extra large crop" to get benefit of present high support prices.

Chairman Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.) of the committee which heard Brannan, said legislation to back up Brannan's proposal would be offered in congress.

HURRY-UP MEASURE

Priority Ordered for Rent Curb Bill

Speed was of the essence. Rent controls had to be safeguarded swiftly. So, into the senate hopper fell an administration bill calling for broader and tougher rent controls for another two years.

The bill, authored by Senator Maybank, (D., S.C.) and, in the house by Representative Spence (D., Ky.) would continue controls through March 31, 1951, and would give the federal housing expediter powers he does not have now. These would include authority to re-impose rent ceilings on previously-decontrolled areas and on other specified types of living quarters Restored also would be right to control evictions, to sue for triple damages following overcharges, and to take criminal action against willful violators

JACKSON DAY:
Million Or More

"Happy Harry" Truman had pulled himself up by his own bootstraps, grasped the dark cloud of Democratic gloom and ripped it aside to disclose a satisfying silver lining.

And now, party big-wigs and adherents are smiling expansively in anticipation of hacking the million-dollar mark when the traditional, $100-a-plate Jackson Day dinners are held in February.

NOTHING SUCCEEDS like success, Truman might have reminded his followers—and because of his personal success, money, which was woefully lacking in Democratic party coffers before the election, is now expected to come rolling in.

Normally, anywhere from $600,000 to $700,000 is raised for the party at the dinners, but this year the national committee thinks it can surpass that figure and come nearer the million-dollar mark.

And they well may do it, for many people who wanted no part of Harry Truman during the campaign, and who kept their hands in their pockets, now are willing to give and give generously.

However, careful planning is going into this year's Jackson Day dinner project. One such dinner will be held in every congressional district of the larger states, and at least one dinner in each of the smaller ones.

Plans already have been mapped to seat an all-time high record of 3,000 at the Washington dinner.

"Of course there are still some lukewarm 'Wednesday Democrats'," a committee said, "but the financial return this year should be terrific."

Chief Killer

Once again the nation's attention would be called to the fact that diseases of the heart and blood vessels are the leading cause of death in the United States.

The occasion: The American Heart association's 1949 national campaign. Hard to dramatize, because its victims seldom die spectacularly, heart disease is a major concern of those who deal with a people's health. The malady is responsible for one of every three deaths in the nation each year. Rheumatic fever and rheumatic heart disease take a heavier toll from youngsters five to 19 than any other disease Even in the years from 35 to 54, heart disease causes far greater mortality than the other leading killers, including cancer, accidents, tuberculosis, pneumonia and nephritis.

The dates of the national campaign of the American Heart association are February 7 to 28. The dates of National Heart Week are February 14 to 21.

THE FUND-RAISING goal of the campaign is five million dollars. Of this, three and one-half million dollars will be used by local heart associations to maintain and expand their community cardiac programs. The remainder will be used by the American Heart association for expansion of its national programs.

The 1949 campaign slogan is apt and compelling. It is: "Open your heart—fight heart disease."

COAL SUPPLY:
Everyone Relax

The American male who must wrestle with the furnace, worry about keeping a fireplace full of fuel, concern himself with the possibility of a heatless future could sit back and relax.

There is enough coal under the surface of the United States to last a thousand years.

After that, somebody else could worry.

AUTHORITY for the extent of the nation's coal resources was Dr. Edward R. Weidlein, director of the Mellon institute of industrial research.

Pointing out that half the world's known coal reserve is possessed by the United States, he asserted many industrial leaders and technical experts believe "that a large industrial development based on coal is in the making and that a considerable expansion in coal production is imminent."

PSYCHIATRISTS:
Who's Next?

Americans had something else to worry about besides prices and possible war. It seemed the nation's chief need, despite any suppositions to the contrary, was more psychiatrists.

According to a subcommittee of the Hoover commission, nothing could be done about the nation's deplorable mental health condition until the present 4,500 psychiatrists were increased to 10,000

Politicians Settling Down To Practical Things Again

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WASHINGTON. — With the mighty fanfare of the Democrats on inauguration day a fading memory and even the brave words of the Republicans on Lincoln Day less than a whisper out of the past, the pracical politicians on both sides of the aisles in the house and senate are hard at their practical politicking.

The sudden re-entrance of Governor Dewey on the political scene was something that took many of his fellow Republicans by surprise. Nevertheless, it would seem that many who don't like him because he lost last November and others who didn't like him enough to help him win last November, are willing to change their minds and really work for his election to the senate in 1950. They think he has a chance for the seat which Senator Wagner has held so long.

There is a tendency on the part of Democrats to shrug off this dis-

BAUKHAGE

To take on Senator Wagner in his prime would have been no small venture. But since the aging Senator from New York has been ill for such a long period it is taken for granted that he will not run again in 1950. It is suggested that perhaps his son, an up and coming young tant possibility with "Dewey can't do that either!"

man in his own right, might attempt to fill his fathers shoes.

That is always good political practice, for more than one candidate with a former hero's name, has been swept into office by voters who either didn't know their idol had departed or else thought a candidate by any other name couldn't smell as sweet. It was often declared that a number of old-timers had a vague feeling that FDR and TR were, if not the the same, at least approximately the same person.

Meanwhile the Republicans are rapidly solidifying their forces for a concentrated battle over the repeal of the Taft-Hartley bill, and the way the atmosphere feels at this writing, Republican senators are offering the nearest thing to a fillibuster that can be offered without actually being labelled one

April is contract day for a good many unions and the race is to get the Taft-Hartley act off the books before then If the Republicans can keep on amending and arguing past that date, it will be a distinct, if only temporary, victory for them.

It must have been quite a shock for the labor leaders to learn that the administration didn't think that labor won the election. Labor did a tremendous job for Truman, put in a lot of hard, fast cooperative work, dovetailing their programs with the efforts of the regular party workers.

But one Harry Truman did a lot of work, all by himself. When the A. F. of L. and CIO heads came down to Washington early in January laying their demands on the line they were somewhat annoyed to find a number of top Democrats polite, grateful and gracious, but also just a little coy.

INAUGURAL COLOR FADES

Newsmen outside the office door when an A. F. of L. delegation was waiting for members of Senator Thomas' labor and public welfare committee, heard much desk-pounding and one voice was strong enough to penetrate the thick panelling:

"We went up and down the country ballyhooing for the repeal of the Taft-Hartley act. And that's what we want now."

But the practical politicians in the house and the senate knew they were facing the fight of their lives. They knew they could count on some Republican support, but only if they sent down a bill which had something in it beside straight repeal. That is why the administration ordered a "one-package" measure, one that contained certain positive provisions The unions were willing to let the old Wagner act come back into force, but the administration knew that was the wrong approach since there was considerable popular sentiment against undoing all that had been done in the way of scotching strikes.

Shake-Up Hits Probe Committee

One of the interesting changes wrought by the election was the reorganization of the un-American activities committee. This strange child, born of a desire of one Democratic congressman to check Nazi and anti-Jewish activity in this country back in the days of Hitler had become a problem child for the administration.

The father of the idea (it was a New York congressman) saw his offspring kidnapped at birth It was seized by Republican Hamilton Fish of New York and later by Rep. Martin Dies of Texas and brought up in quite a different manner from what was intended

The Democrats were pretty embarrased with the committee before Dies was through with it, and when he decided to withdraw from the Washington scene they tried to squelch it but failed. It had proved too good a headline-getter for its members. Then along came the Republicans in 1946 and grabbed it, making it one of the administration's number one headaches.

As soon as Democrats returned to power they saw to it that the committee, now an accepted institution, was cleaned up By one twist and another they managed to eliminate all of the old members but one, Representative Wood, who is chairman Membership was limited to lawyers, which was logical enough, for its faults were those which no honest lawyer would condone and it was reformed to recognize civil rights and to conform to some of the fundamental principles of justice and civil rights with which the original organization scorned to bother. Witnesses are now permitted to give their side of the case, be represented by counsel if they desire

Nothing has been done to hamper its effectiveness, and it should be able to render a real service from now on. As Rep. John McSweeny (D., Ohio) one of the new members, said: "The spy hunt should be carried to a logical conclusion, but I will not permit innocent men and women to have their names and characters besmirched by unfounded and unsupported accusations."

The un-American activities committee, as it was run before it was cleaned up was an institution which simply could not continue to exist in America. It used methods which Americans will not tolerate, because if there is one thing an American demands, it is the right to be considered innocent until he is proved guilty "Who steals my purse steals my trash. . . . but he that filches my good name robs me of that which not enriches him and makes me poor indeed."

Commies at Work In Ivied Halls

One of the jobs which the committee under J. Parnell Thomas, was preparing to do was to investigate communism in American colleges. That sent the universities and colleges into jitters for fear academic freedom would be throttled as other freedoms had been by the fanatical members of the old group. However, there is no reason at all why a judicial investigation of this particular subject shouldn't be undertaken

Canada received a distinct shock recently from Dr. Watson Kirkconnell, president of Acadia university. He made an analysis of the report of the Labor Progressive Party university students conference at Toronto last fall which was published by the SATURDAY NIGHT, a weekly magazine published in Toronto.

The report is a 14,000 word document which presents the Communists' own views on their position, in Canadian universities. It reveals, according to Dr. Kirkconnell, that there are militant Communist "nuclei" on the campuses at McGill, Toronto, Winnepeg, Saskatoon, Edmonton, and Vancouver, all under rigid party discipline.

There are known to be a number of similiar groups, doubtless working with the same party techniques in this country. In some places they are considerably weaker than they used to be.

Yanks Well Equipped

CASEY STENGEL, the Professor, was caught in what looked to be deep thought. Naturally, he was thinking about the Yankees, since Casey and the Yankees will be all rolled up together this season.

"Our outfield," he remarked, "is well set. The best. DiMaggio, Henrich, Lindell, Keller and others. We have a chance for good pitching with Raschi, Porterfield, Reynolds, Shea, Page and a few more.

Grantland Rice

"Catching — uncertain. Infield — can't hit. We've got to find greater infield offense—more runs batted in. We were far in back of the Indians and Red Red Sox in that department last year. Far back, as far as the infields are compared."

This led to a comparison of the five leading teams. It figured up like this:

Cleveland Indians—Fine outfield; better infield; best pitching in baseball plus good catching. Stars such as Boudreau, Gordon, Doby, Mitchell, Bearden, Lemon and Feller. Plenty of power.

"The Indians shape up as a very tough club to handle," we said. "Is this about right, Professor?"

"That is entirely right," Casey said. "A very tough outfit to handle, offensively or defensively. The team to beat—if you can."

This took us to the Red Sox. High-class outfield headed by Williams and Dom DiMaggio. Even better infield with Goodman, Doerr, Stephens and Pesky. Ragged, uncertain pitching. Below Indians, Yankees and Athletics in this respect.

What about the Athletics? Fair outfield—fair infield. Both below Indians and Red Sox. Pitching high class. Might be better than last year — with catching, close to Yankees.

What is the Tigers' ranking? Red Rolfe has a good outfield, terrible infield and first-class pitching. He must improve the infield, just as the Yankees must. Kell is a fine ballplayer. Should be better than he was last year. Red Rolfe is due to become a smart, hustling leader and will get more life and fire into his squad which has been a dead outfit.

Professor Stengel looked over this report. "I guess it's about right," he said "From what I've read and heard, we've got a job ahead in handling the Indians and Red Sox. Especially the Indians. They are strong everywhere.

"If Bob Feller should happen to have one of his big years—one of his 20-game years—it might be discouraging. It will be a tough league this summer. Can you imagine a world-series winner being strengthened—improved? And quite a bit?"

Help from Bill Dickey

"We've got plenty to do," Stengel continued. "We may need two or three infield improvements. This has been a good infield, defensively, but a poor one offensively.

"I'm counting a lot on Bill Dickey Bill can help our catching a lot. He is a fine teacher—a very patient type. He can also help our pitching. Our pitching will need a lot of thought and work. Vic Raschi can be a 20-game winner. He has the makings of a star. So has young Bob Porterfield.

"Now about Shea. I know a lot about him. I had him in Portland. He did a great job for us—and a big job for New York in 1947. I think he'll do a big job again this season.

"Dickey will be a big help to all our pitchers. In his old days with the Yankees he was a marvel with young pitchers. He knew how to keep them calm and cool. Pitchers like Atley Donald who could win 10 or 12 straight.

"We'll have to get the best from every pitcher we've got. If we do, it will make a killing difference. I know they've got plenty."

Dickey should be able to bring quick aid to a valuable piece of baseball property known as Yogi Berra. Yogi is a natural hitter—better than .300, and long range to boot. He has a good arm but doesn't know how to throw to second. He can be made into a better outfielder than he is. The Yogi is a fine competitor, more than willing to learn.

Stengel has another badly-underrated ballplayer in Johnny Lindell. He is better than a .300 hitter who can also hit the big one—the long one. He is a good outfielder with a good arm. He can play first. And he could be a useful pitcher, which he once was.

Lindell is one of the best all-around athletes in the game. He is also one of the best all-around ballplayers—a ballplayer the Yankees, for some reason, have never given his full due.

WEEKLY PICTURE STORY

A is for Andy, simian star of the Bronx zoo, who made his film debut recently when the zoo decided to produce a motion picture based on an "animal alphabet." Since then, with all the precocity of a human being five times his age, Andy has become victim of the grand delusion that he is the favorite first-born of Thespis herself.

In the zoo's original casting of the film, the chimp was chosen to represent one letter—O for orang-utan. But that didn't stop the little genius from ranging uninhibitedly through the whole alphabet, starting with A for Andy, naturally.

Although Andy was mostly cooperative, he staged temperamental flare-ups, just like any other starlet (left). Then it would take all the coaxing of his keeper, Mickey Quinn, plus a little something in the way of a bribe to get him back to work. One of Andy's assignments was to pose for the zoo staff artist. This he did with great alacrity (right).

That glow in Andy's eyes is from vest-busting pride. Imagine! A simian starlet with his name in colored blocks. It isn't on Broadway yet, of course, but that's only a short leap for an orang-utan. Andy probably is thinking that if they only would let him out of the cage and give him the name of a good agent he'd make it in no time.

ElevenImmortals

Lesson for February 20, 1949

JESUS believed in prayer, but he did not usually spend all night at it. When he did, we may be sure he had something of the greatest importance on his mind. One of these occasions was the night before he selected the twelve men he called Apostles. He had thousands of disciples, crowds followed him wherever he went. But it was important to have a few with whom he could live as an intimate friend. So from the immense number of followers, Jesus selected twelve closest friends. Before that fateful morning no one outside their villages had ever heard of them. But now their names are known—and eleven of them are honored—around the world.

Jesus Multiplies Himself

A GOOD executive, Jesus multiplied his own personality. A recent book has shown how Harry Hopkins during World War II lived in the White House as Roosevelt's personal companion, having given up his own ambitions and living only to carry out the ideas of his chief. Without Roosevelt, Hopkins would have been little more than an inferior politician; and without Hopkins, many of Roosevelt's plans could not have been carried out. He enabled the president to be in two places at once. So it was with Jesus, as Mark tells us. Jesus wanted those twelve to be with him, and then to send them out.

He wanted these friends to know him as the crowds, and his enemies, never could know him. He wanted these men to absorb his ideas and ideals.

The word Jesus used for them was not his own invention; "apostle" was the word used all over the civilized world in those days for an ambassador, a personal representative of royalty. All Christians are in the "apostolic succession." If a Christian can truly say, "I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me," then he is, as these men were, Christ's personal representative.

Raw Material

THE ASTONISHING thing about Jesus' choice of these twelve is his faith in them. Of course they had faith in him—who would not? But who would have faith in them? There was not a single "outstanding" man in the lot. Not one had what we would call a college education, not a man of them had held public office or was rich or famous for anything at all.

There was Peter, an ordinary fisherman, much given to profanity; there was Matthew, a crooked business man if ever there was one, for no publican could be honest and keep from starving; there was Philip, as stupid a man as ever asked a foolish question; there were James and John, loud-mouthed (Jesus nicknamed them the Thunder Boys — "Sons of Thunder"), greedy fellows who could not be satisfied till they had elbowed their way ahead of everybody else; there was Thomas the born pessimist, the defeatist . . . What could have got into Jesus' mind to select such men?

—and Judas Iscariot

THE SECRET of Jesus' choice was this: He selected his men not for what they were or had been, but for what they could become, filled with his spirit, transformed by his friendship. It is so today, as always. The Kingdom of God needs men and women, but the raw human material found in or out of the churches is too shabby and weak to build anything like the kingdom of God.

Yet after all, it was never human weakness that has built the Kingdom. It is men re-born, re-made by contact and companionship with Jesus the Lord of men . . . Now as then, Judas is among the Twelve. Jesus must have seen good in Judas, otherwise it would have been mockery to choose him. But though that man was with Christ for just as long as the others, heard what they heard and saw what they saw, he ended by being a traitor. "Twelve immortals"—? Nay, but one is the immortal betrayer and suicide. Why? The reason was in Judas, not in Jesus.

But he wants volunteers, never forced labor. The Christ of Glory can be served by the humble; but the free Christ can be served only by free men with open hearts. Judas may keep his heart shut if he will, Christ never forces his way in.

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.

Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

SENIOR PICTURES

The Seniors have chosen Russels this year as the place to have their pictures taken. The day has been set for the 21st of March. It seems a long way off, especially when they've been waiting so long already...

DEBATE

The Junior and Senior English class has been having a debate on Labor Unions Everyone seems to think everything was going along splendidly with a few of the brains taking possession of the class period. That is, until Mr. Randall informed the class that all those who weren't taking part were mugwumps. I hope by calling them that he stirs up the desire to join in and share the load.

SENIOR INTERVIEW

The Senior we interviewed this week is Mildred Meinders. She is a light brunette and has hazel eyes. She was born on November 8, in 1931 nd is now 17 years old. Being a schoolgirl is her only occupation now but her main ambition is to be married. Home Economics is her favorite subject and white cake is the food she likes best. Maybe she can bake good cakes as well as eat them. The driver of a black '41' Ford is her only pet peeve (Is it really that bad, Mildred?) She collects silver dollars as a hobby and sewing is her best liked pastime.

SEVENTH AND EIGHTH GRADE NEWS
(By Janice Swanson)

Last week Wednesday the Junior High boys played Ventura. We got beat. Last week Thursday we left the school house at 3:30 to play a Juniof High game with Forest City, the score was 31-27 in favor of Forest City.

Friday night Sharon Bridges, Miriam Priebe, Janice Swanson, and Lois Jacobs played with the high school girls at Fertile, the score was 61-22 in favor of Fertile.

Monday the band was held from 2:00 to 3:00 so, the grades could have their Valentine parties.

We had our party from 3:00 to 4:00. Some of the boys and girls had to say some poems. Then Mr. Juhl treated us all with frost sticks and cake. The Valentines were then passed out. We all received many nice valentines and all had a nice time.

Russians Oil Guns for Winter Hunting Season

The Soviet Union, stretching from Europe to the Pacific and from the Arctic to the Black sea and China, is one of the greatest hunting and fur trapping regions of the world It is the home of the sable, ermine and other precious fur animals which hunters now are trailing for American and other foreign purchasers with hard currency.

In Siberia, Kamchatka, the Arctic, Central Asia, the Urals and the Caucasus, hunters are setting their traps and fixing their gunsights for sables, ermine, minks, muskrats, rabbits, otters, beavers, raccoons, silver foxes, wolves, lynxes, wildcats, panthers, tigers and bears.

Sportsmen, too, are oiling their guns for the hunting season. In the Moscow region alone the Moscow hunting club has 1,500,000 or about 3,705,000 acres of hunting grounds and 50 cabins for its 6,800 members.

TAKE MY WORD FOR IT!

By FRANK COLBY

Bell Syndicate.—WNU Features.

URBAN, URBANE

Matin, Ohio: Is there any connection between "urban" and "urbane"?—F. G.

Answer: Yes. Let us start with the Latin word urbs, which meant originally "a city enclosed by walls or palisades." From urbs came urbanus 'of or pertaining to a city"; hence refined, polished, cultured.

Urbanus entered English as "urban," meaning "pertaining to or characteristic of a city." This is the source of the word "urbane," meaning "polished, suave, citified," pronounced: ur-BAIN. The noun "urbanity," meaning "politeness, suavity," is pronounced ur-BAN-i-tee.

Now let us return to the word urban, from our original stem urbs. Combined with the prefix sub, "under, inferior, subordinate to," we find urban in the word suburban, "the suburbs" (sub- plus urbs).

The prefix inter- means "between." Therefore, an electric railway system operating between two or more cities is called an interurban.

Now let us use the suffix -ite, "a native of or dweller in," and form two more words with urban: The first is urbanite, "one who lives in a city"; the second is suburbanite, "one who lives in the suburbs."

There is another suffix which we can use: -ist, "one who is skilled in." Combined with urban it gives us the word urbanist, "a specialist in city planning."

A similar word stem is the Greek polis, "it city." We find it in such words as metropolis (metro means "mother"), acropolis (from akros, "highest"), police, policy, politics, and cosmopolis (from cosmo-, "world").

Interesting. Not "IN-trist-ing" in the British manner. Use the traditionally correct American pronunciation in which all four syllables are clearly sounded, thus: IN-terest-ing.

Column. Do not rhyme with volume. Avoid "yum" in the second syllable. Say: KOL-um. (And sound the "n" in the third syllable of columnist, thus: KOL-um-nist.)

Anti-. There is no "eye" in anti-multi-, semi. The "i" is either short "i" or "ee." The latter is customary in Standard American: AN-tee.

Washington. Do not Drew-Pearsonize this revered name as "Worshin'dun." We certainly owe it to ourselves as Americans to say: WAHSH-ing-tun.

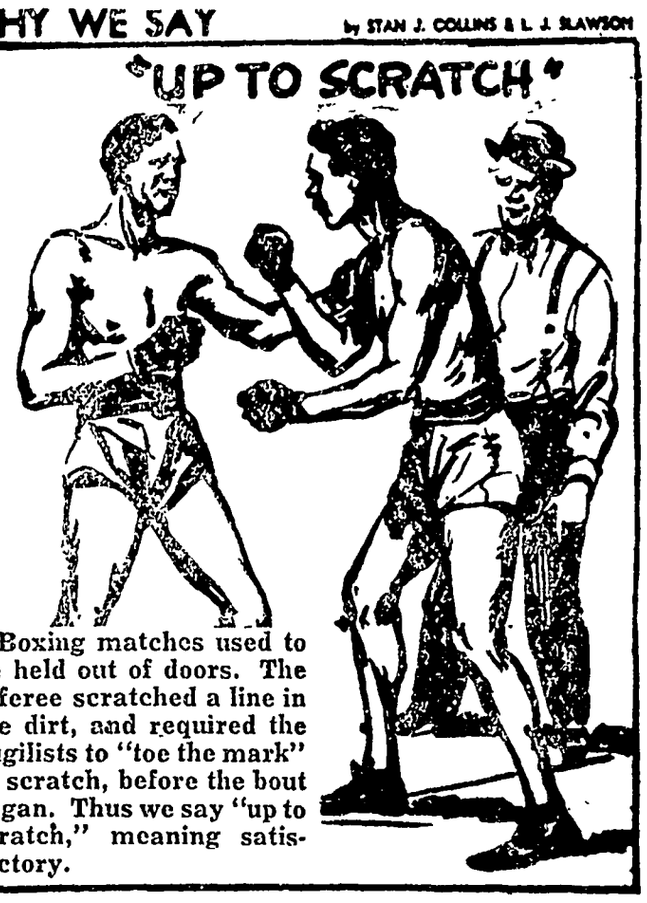
by STAN J. COLLINS & L. J. SLAWSON



Boxing matches used to be held out of doors. The referee scratched a line in the dirt, and required the pugilists to "toe the mark" or scratch, before the bout began. Thus we say "up to scratch," meaning satisfactory.

MIRROR of your MIND • • • Humor—a Saving Grace

By Lawrence Gould

Is a sense of humor a mark of intelligence?

Answer: Not in itself. There have been outstanding geniuses who had very little sense of the ridiculous and were quite incapable of laugh- ing at themselves, however childish- ly they behaved. But a sense of hu- mor usually indicates emotional ma- turity because it keeps you from childish exaggeration of your own importance and makes you less apt to get "all steamed up" over trifles. And there's nothing more charac- teristic of a person who has never grown up than to feel his momen- tary joys and sorrows matter des- perately to him and to others.

Is "blood thicker than water?"

Answer: Not because of any au- tomatic or instinctive feeling. We like or dislike our relatives, as we do anything else, on the basis of the way they treat us. But because most of us felt more secure with our families as children than we have since, and the stronger our need of security is as adults, the more likely we are to cling to our "blood kin" and feel ill at ease with "strangers." A mature and self-re- liant person, on the other hand, will feel closest to the people with whom he has most in common, whether they are relatives or not.

Is it normal for a co-ed to be homesick?

Answer: Not for long, at any rate, writes Annalies A. Rose of Smith College in the Journal of Social Psychology. On the basis of a study of 66 women freshmen in their first five weeks at college, Dr. Rose con- cludes that "well adjusted" girls, particularly those who have no trou- ble making contacts with the oppo- site sex, are not homesick at all. Those who have one attack of home- sickness after another are emotion- ally weak and childish, while the personalities of girls who are home- sick only once show comparative- ly "minor deviations" from the nor- mal.

Stomach Trouble?

By Dr. James W. Barton

IT IS known that nervousness and emotional disturbances are the early causes of stomach and in- testinal ulcer, and also inflamma- tion of the lining of the stomach. Overcoming the nervousness or reaching a final decision on some disturbing conflict often brings re- lief from symptoms.

It is also known that infec- tion—of the teeth, gums, ton- sils, sinuses, gall bladder or large intestine—also can cause stomach disturbances, including ulcer.

What was not suspected of caus- ing stomach ulcer is allergy to cer- tain foods, despite the fact that stomach disturbances and hives (urticaria) frequently are caused by foods to which the individual is al- lergic.

Foods causing allergic skin re- action in order of decreasing fre- quency include meat, milk, egg yolk, barley, oats, vegetables, egg white, rye, fish and wheat. This means that our most nourishing foods—meat, milk, egg yolk—are the commonest causes of stomach disturbances due to food allergy. Only 29, or 17 per cent, of 170 pa- tients without stomach disturbances gave positive reaction to the food substances.

The fact, then, that 60 per cent of the patients gave a posi- tive reaction to one or several foods, and only 17 per cent of those without stomach disturb- ances gave a food reaction, shows a definite relationship be- tween stomach disturbances and food allergy.

Leaving out the foods causing al- lergic reaction for two weeks, to- gether with a rest cure, usually did away with the symptoms of which the patient complained.

To remove the tendency to al- lergy, small amounts of the food causing the symptoms were in- jected under the skin twice a week and the strength of food substances gradually increased. Then the pa- tient was given a cup of broth by mouth beginning with one spoon- ful. This finally enabled the patient to eat this formerly allergic food without causing any symptoms.

★ HEALTH NOTES ★

Meat (protein) for breakfast helps prevent mid-morning fatigue on the job and enables you to work more efficiently. Where heavy work is being done, meat or other pro- tein should be eaten not less than twice a day. Hard physical work- ers really require twice as much food of all kinds—proteins, starches and fats—as do white collar workers and housewives.

Plenty of bed rest supplemented by exercise of the affected joints is the best prescription for rheuma- tism. With the patient resting in bed—which prevents the weight of the body from setting up further irritation or inflammation—motion in joints and muscles can be kept up by heat, light or passive move- ment.

Children Will Love This Wagon

HERE is a gift idea that appeals to everyone. It's a circus wagon plant holder that makes a delightful center piece for the table. Ivy and other small potted plants thrive in this gaily decorated circus wagon. If there is a child in the family, forget its use as a center piece and make several wagons to form a circus. Youngsters love to cage their wild animals and move them about.

The full size pattern offered be- low offers a quick and easy method of building. No special tools or skill are required. User merely traces the pattern on the wood pat- tern specifies, saws and assembles. To insure painting with a profes- sional touch, full size decorating outlines are provided. These are traced on the wood and painted the colors pattern suggests. Pattern specifies using small pieces of wood that can be purchased at any lum- ber yard.

This Home-Mixed Cough Syrup Is Most Effective

Cough medicines usually contain a large quantity of plain syrup—a good ingredient, but one which you can easily make at home. Take 2 cups of granulated sugar and 1 cup of water, and stir a few moments until dis- solved. Or use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Then get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle, and fill up with your syrup. This gives you a full pint of wonderful medicine for coughs due to colds. It makes a real saving because it gives you about four times as much for your money. Never spoils. Tastes fine.

This is actually a surprisingly ef- fective, quick-acting cough relief. Swiftly, you feel it taking hold. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irri- tated membranes and makes breath- ing easy. You've never seen anything better for quick and pleasing results.

Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, a most reliable soothing agent for throat and bronchial irritations. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

SHAMROCKS DOWN GARNER TO CLOSE B. B. SEASON HERE FRIDAY EVE

The Klemme Shamrocks last week avenged an early season defeat by drubbing the Garner Cardinals here Friday evening to close the basket ball season

In the opening game it was a red-hot race between the Little Shamrocks and the Garner Reserves. With 1 second left to play the count was all tied up 27-27 when a Garner player was fouled and made the free toss good to put the game on ice for the visitors 28-27.

The main feature was a different story as the Shamrocks took a commanding 10-2 first quarter lead. The Cardinals had their best quarter in the second frame as they rang up 6 counters while the Shamrocks racked up 8.

The Cardinals came back strong in the third quarter and caught the Shamrocks flat-footed when they cut the lead back with two quick buckets. From there on out it was all Shamrocks and the Cards never again threatened. Klemme lead at the 3rd quarter 31 to 15 and with most of the Little Shamrocks back in the last quarter the Shamrocks went racing to a 57 to 24 lead to end the fracas.

REORGANIZATION OF SCHOOL DISTRICTS, A DEMOCRATIC PROCESS

(By Chas. Whitney, Co. Supt.)

If there is any reorganization of school district in Iowa under the present statutes, it will be because the people in the affected territory want it. School district reorganization as provided by the Acts of the 51st and 52nd General Assemblies is subject to the will of the people and cannot be imposed upon any territory by an outside agency.

The 52nd General Assembly passed legislation creating a new county board of education, elected by the people of the county. This board is empowered with many responsibilities, one of the most important of which has to do with furnishing the leadership in connection with reorganization of school districts. The Acts provide that "The county board of education in each county of the state shall initiate detailed studies and surveys of the school districts within the county and territory adjacent thereto for the purpose of promoting such reorganization of districts by unions, mergers, reorganization, or centralization as will effect more economical operation and the attainment of higher standards of education in the schools"

There is also provision that. "The scope of such studies and surveys shall include the following matters in the various districts in the county the adequacy of the educational program, average daily attendance of pupils, property valuations, existing buildings and equipment, natural community areas, road conditions, transportation, economic factors, and such other matters that may bear on educational programs meeting minimum standards required by law." These studies and surveys are under way in most counties of the state at the present time.

Quoting from 275.3 of chapter 275, code 1946 as amended by Senate File 392, Acts of the 52nd General Assembly "In making such studies and surveys the board in each county shall consult with the officials of affected districts and other citizens. In the development of such reorganization plans and surveys the county boards shall call upon the department of public instruction for advice and council in order to keep such reorganization plans in conformity to the state wide plan of education and to state laws."

The county board of education has a further responsibility after this careful study is conducted, to ultimately devise a plan of organization for the county and territory adjacent, which plan must be approved by the department of public instruction as meeting the standards suggested bove Then reorganization propositions shall be submitted to the voters in line with these plans, and new districts will be formed or not according to the wishes of the voters in the affected territory

The 52nd General Assembly also passed a moratorium upon the forming of any new district up until June 30, 1953, except through the procedure outlined above.

KLEMME CREAMERY BUTTER IN BRIGHT NEW CARTON

Perhaps you have noticed that "new look" the past few weeks when you purchased a pound of Klemme Creamery Butter.

The local creamery has met specifications required to use the Iowa State Brand label and as a result Klemme Butter is now being packed in the new Iowa State Brand carton, which means that there is no better butter in the world; Grade A Certified. The local butter plant was greatly helped in producing this high grade butter through the dairy improvement which has been carried out for several months. It is a great step forward and speaks highly for the efficiency of manager Kenneth Medin and his crew of able assistants.

The plant recently discarded a vat which had been in service for many years and in its place now stands a gleaming new stainless steel milk vat used in pasteurizing.

THAT IS ESTIMATED COST FOR REPAIRING WALLS

School District Voters Will Be Given Special Ballot

When you go to the polls on Monday, March 14th for the annual school election, you will be handed a yellow ballot which is the special bond issue ballot asking the taxpayers of the Klemme Independent School District for a $15,000 bond issue.

The school board is faced with the problem of what to do about needed repairs on the building. For some time the walls have been leaking and if this is not remedied soon considerable damage may result. The estimated cost of putting the walls back into good condition will be about $15,000.

Whether or not we like to spend the above amount does not alter the picture. This is a "must" proposition It's either spend the necessary money now for repairs that must be done or pay heavier at a later date The school is public property and it must be kept in good condition.

There is but one way open to the taxpayers of the district and that seems to be: Vote "yes" on the special ballot.

Notice of the Special Proposition is published in The Times this week.

Rice and the People of Japan...

In Japan rice equals life, and during the months following the atomic end of World War II both factors of that equation had been dangerously reduced. Realizing that the vanquished must be fed, the U. S. army of occupation stepped into the fields to improve Japan's badly depleted rice production. As a result, even with the sub-technical methods used in the islands, rice crops have soared beyond the pre-war peak reached in 1941 and the Japanese are calling again.

An elemental food, rice is grown and harvested in Japan in an elemental manner. The harvester (above) carries on his back the heavy bundles of rice tied with rice straw from the paddy to the drying racks. Occupation personnel inspect the grain (left, tion personnel inspect the grain (left) for dryness and maturity. The soldier here is Sgt. Charles Callahan of the Yamagata government team.

Drying of the rice is all-important. The grain-heavy bundles are hung from straw ropes on hedgerow trees, on bamboo racks or even on the eaves of houses. Rice must be dry when stored.

In Niigata, where the photo at right was taken, the drying racks must be high enough to protect the grain from rapidly rising flood waters.

Pigskin Previews

THE MONTHS of September, October and November still lie some distance to windward. But things are happening now that will affect the coming autumn such as arranging football schedules. Especially the schedule that Notre Dame will face.

It might be mentioned here that Notre Dame, after all the hullabaloo, did slightly better than all right. Southern Methodist, Tulane and North Carolina offer three of the better games of the year.

Grantland Rice

Dr. Foreman

Southern Methodist was Southwestern champion last fall, and probably will be again this year with Doak Walker and Kyle Rote back in action. Tulane has one of the best teams in the South. Tulane and Vanderbilt look to be two southern leaders next fall. North Carolina will have the brilliant Justice and the able Art Weiner back, but there will be many gaps to fill. Carl Snavely will fill them well. He usually does.

These three additions to the Irish slate are hooked up with a far stronger Navy team, Southern California, Purdue, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan State and Washington—no easy march. This is better than the average schedule. It has no deliberate soft spots that so many others have. It will certainly be a total of eight hard games.

Notre Dame, like Michigan, North Carolina and others, will lose good men and return good men. But you can gamble—if you like to gamble—that Frank Leahy will have a first-class squad with fast, hard-hitting runners and at least two good passers. You can also be fairly sure he will have a good line.

What about Army's schedule? It has a number of soft spots, but it also has some rough-and-rocky bridges to cross. One of them is Michigan. That's a sure thing. Others can be Stanford, Pennsylvania and Navy.

But outside of Michigan, there is no trouble ahead. This forces too much pressure on the Michigan game. A defeat here can play havoc with either team's final ranking—more with Army than with Michigan.

Army will have a fine backfield and uncertain line strength with such stars as Yeoman, Henry, etc., missing. Her ends will be her strongest point.

Navy, again, has no chance to beat her schedule, the toughest in football. The 1949 menu includes Southern California, Notre Dame, Army, Pennsylvania, Duke, Princeton and others of heavy calibre. But the 1949 Navy squad should move well up in the year's ranking.

Oklahoma will be strong again. Bud Wilkinson has a winning grip on the situation with a team that can exchange class with anyone around.

Ivy League Returns

There has been a tendency in recent years for other sectors to look with a certain amount of scorn on Ivy league teams. Part of this was justified, although scholarship requirements in the league are well above the average, no matter what you hear.

As far as 1949 is concerned, the Ivy-covered colleges and universities will have no apoligies to offer any section in the matter of football ranking. Last fall, Cornell and Darthmouth would have been an even match for most of the leading teams of the Midwest, South, Southwest or Far West.

This will be true again this year. Few of the better teams in any section will have backs to match the Big Red or the Big Green. I mean such backs as Johnny Clayton of Dartmouth, a passer of the Bertelli type—or Frank Miller and Jerry Fleischmann of Cornell.

Lefty James and Tuss McLaughry had two fine teams last fall. They would have been even bets against any team in the Big Nine except Michigan—which is favored over many. This new season they can be joined by Princeton and Harvard.

Princeton's outlook is good. So is Harvard's. Both can be first class. Brown can also move up. Pennslyvania is never weak. George Munger loses Chuck Bednarik and a few other good men, but if you keep track, year after year, you'll find the Red and Blue a rather rugged barrier.

Columbia is definitely below 1948 form, even with the redoubtable Lou Little in charge. Columbia is never flooded with material, and no team can lose 12 of its best men from a small squad—such men as Kusserow, Rossides, etc.—and hope to have much left. It will take the full genius of Lou Little to win a game here and there.

Ideal World

Lesson for February 27, 1949

ANY MAN with a revolutionary new idea has to try to explain it. Jesus was no exception. As a young teacher of religion, he had to answer the question which older teachers were bound to put to him: If your teaching is new, how can it be true? And if it is true, what can be new about it? This was a fair question. The Sermon on the Mount is Jesus' answer to it. The main theme of that sermon is the kingdom of God, an ancient phrase but with new meanings as Jesus used it. We can say "The Ideal World" and mean just the same thing.

The Right People

JESUS EMPHASIZES, above all, the kind of people who belong to God's Ideal World. This would be surprising to some modern planners. Communists think that if you can once get a world in which every one has enough to eat and drink and wear, a world where nobody is poor (or everybody is as poor as everybody else, which is all the same thing), you will have the perfect world. Jesus would know this is nonsense.

But the fact is that even after you got your perfect social system, with perfect politics and perfect distribution of wealth, even a perfect climate and soil, you would still be nowhere near the Ideal World unless you improved your people.

The wrong kind of people will spoil the best kind of system. So we find Jesus talking not about systems but about people.

Is This You?

WHAT WE call the "beatitudes" (Matt 5:7-12) is Jesus' eight point program for the citizens of the Ideal World. The right people are happy people to begin with. (The word translated "Blessed" is a regular Greek word for "happy.") But the main difference between different kinds of people is not that some want to be happy while others do not; rather it is that they are made happy by different kinds of things.

Jesus' ideal people are humble, not proud; they see their sins and are sorry for them; they are "meek"—that is, they are not in a hurry to demand their own rights; they do not merely admire goodness, they are positively hungry for it, they are merciful, not careless or cruel; they are pure in heart and not only in speech and act; they are not mere peace-wishers or peace-lovers (who isn't?) but peacemakers; they are people who are brave enough to do what is right not only when it is comfortable and popular but even when it brings them slander and suffering.

Salt

DO YOU really want an ideal world? The best way to begin is to learn how to be a citizen of such a world. Jesus used two interesting simple words to describe the kind of people he means. You are salt, he said, — you are light. Salt and light are old-fashioned things but they have never gone out of date. No one has invented a good substitute for either one.

So there is no substitute for a really good Christian. Living, here and now, like citizens of the ideal world to come, Christians are both salt and light.

Salt because they give a taste to otherwise flat or bitter life. Salt because they keep human society from going rotten. This world is in a bad enough mess as it is; but what it would be if all the Christians were removed from it at once, one hates to think.

Light

AND LIGHT! Like salt, light ought not to be too noticeable. A glaring light is bad on the eyes, as too much salt is bad on the tongue. So a Christian is not supposed to rub his goodness in on other people, so to speak. He is as indispensable as salt in bread—and should be as inconspicuous. But light, like salt, if it is any good has to be applied directly. A strong light concealed in a steel tube does no good. Swishing the glass end of the salt-cellar around in the soup gives it no flavor. The salt must get into the soup, the light must touch what we see.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

U. S. Rejects Stalin Peace Talks; Norway Prefers Western Alliance, Spurns Russian Council Suggestion

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

SOVIET "BARKIS" . . . Like the Dickens character, Russia's Premier Josef Stalin was "willing" to meet with President Truman to talk peace. But the question was: how willing? He is shown above with President Truman when the two met at Potsdam.

WANTS OPEN DISCUSSION

Truman Won't Talk Behind Iron Curtain

It was beginning to look like "Uncle Joe" Stalin and Harry S. Truman never would get together for a talk looking toward settlement of U. S. and other western powers' differences with the Soviets

"Meet Stalin behind the iron curtain?" Secretary of State Dean Acheson snorted in disdain, declared in effect that the idea was preposterous.

Acheson went further. He asserted indirectly that the Russian leader was playing politics with peace hopes of millions of people.

Anyway, Acheson went on, what might be gained? Hadn't the Russians consistently blocked all efforts in the United Nations looking toward disarmament, control of the atom bomb and creation of a U.N. police force?

BUT THE U.S. couldn't be put in the position of appearing disinclined even to talk about peace, so Acheson left the door open for a parley; but there were some American conditions this time. The White House, it appeared, would be willing to see Stalin—in Washington. Stalin had said he'd be willing to see Truman—behind the iron curtain. And there the matter stood.

Acheson made a further point. The U.S., in any event, would not discuss with Russia alone any points having a direct interest to other nations.

As for a "peace" declaration, Acheson declared he found this puzzling inasmuch as Russia, the U S., and all other U. N. members are already pledged "by most solemn treaty commitments not to engage in war with one another."

HE ADDED that the hopes of the world's peoples for peace are considered by this nation to be fundamental, and that the United States would not play politics with these hopes.

While it might appear an oversimplification of the problem, many might raise the question that if Acheson is relying on Russia's U.N. pledge to keep the peace, why should there be any official U.S. concern over the entire Russian relations puzzle?

The fact there is grave concern over the puzzle indicates Mr. Acheson may have been talking when he should have been thinking.

U. N. Facilities Offered If Truman, Stalin Meet

The United Nations stands ready to aid in any way it can in any East-West talks, according to a statement by Trygve Lie, secretary-general of the organization.

Lie declared he would be "most happy" to have U. N. facilities used for a conference between Josef Stalin and President Truman if the two leaders were to suggest it.

Beyond that he would not go in commenting on the interview in which Stalin said he would be glad to confer directly with President Truman on a possible Soviet-American peace pact.

He added that the U. N. has several facilities which might be used advantageously in the event of such a conference.

NORWAY:

Standing Pat

Norway was drawing no cards. Standing pat, she would play the ones she had.

IN OTHER WORDS, the Norwegians wanted nothing but friendship with the Soviets, but if it were all the same, they would rather depend upon security in regional pacts such as the proposed north Atlantic alliance, than upon an alignment with the Soviet union.

The position stated by Norway was in answer to a Soviet note asking the nation's clarification of its view on the proposed north Atlantic setup.

Norway said the United Nations had failed to provide the world with peace and security, and her own people's "serious concern" for their liberty had convinced the government that it was necessary to seek increased security through regional cooperation in the defense field.

BUT THE NORWEGIAN government assured the Russians that it would never agree to foreign bases on its soil "as long as Norway is not attacked or the subject of threats of attack." And the government pledged itself to support a policy of non-aggression.

The decision could be interpreted in no other way than as a definite setback for Soviet expansion-by-intimidation policies. Norway is a small country and vulnerable to Soviet attack. Nevertheless, it has chosen to stand with the western nations—a decision certain to impair Russian prestige and to show the way, in some measure, at least, how other Soviet-threatened nations may find the way out of a seeming impasse.

MORE CLOTHES:

British Ration Eased

Great Britain has ended eight years of clothes rationing—practically, that is.

Effective now, any Briton with the money may go into any store and buy a suit of clothes, his wife a dress. And for the first time since January 1, 1940, he won't have to give 26 clothing coupons for the suit, 18 for his wife's dress. Coupons, however, will still be required for many articles of clothing.

PRESS FREEDOM:

Losing Ground?

Newspapermen and radiocasters from Sauk Center to Gotham would shout "foul!," claim the opposition was hitting below the belt.

A Baltimore criminal court judge held three local radio stations and the news editor of one were guilty of contempt of court because they violated a court rule that restricts publication of crime news.

THE JUDGE, John B. Gray, Jr., held, in a two-hour verbal opinion that broadcasts of information about a convicted murderer, before his trial last summer, constituted not only a clear and present danger to the fair administration of justice, but "an obstruction to justice" in the accused's right to a fair trial.

The court agreed with a defense contention that the nine-year old rule was an "abridgement of the freedom of the press," but asserted such an abridgement "is justified because it conflicts with an equally potent constitutional right of an accused to a fair trial."

NEW SHUTTER:

Powerfully Fast

A new fluid eyelid for a camera can blink and take a picture in 1-25 of a millionth of a second. This eyelid is an electrical shutter with no moving parts. It's fast enough to see any one of 25 things happening within a millionth of a second.

THE SHUTTER is a murky fluid that blocks light. Two electrical contants are immersed in it. When a current is passed through, the liquid becomes transparent for an instant—as if a bottle of ink became water clear.

The photographic plate is exposed to the action in front of the shutter for only the fraction of time when the liquid is clear. The length of exposure is governed by the voltage applied. The shutter offers a new way of slowing the action.

The shutter was announced at the winter meeting of the American institute of electrical engineers by A. M. Zaren, Stanford research institute, Los Angeles, and F. R. Marshall and F. L. Poole, U. S. naval ordinance test station.

AMONG OTHER war-inspired devices being used in industry, the "snooper-scope," which could "see" a man in the dark a quarter of a mile away, now is being used to find faults in power transmission lines. It spotted the enemy by his body heat as it was supersensible.

PENSION BILL:

Vets Must Wait

Little possibility was seen by congressional leaders for enactment of a veterans' pension bill during the current session.

The administration is openly opposed to any such measure, being quoted as saying a program already offered "could not be considered in accord with the program of the President."

THE PROPOSAL to which the refence was made is a veterans' pension bill to give servicemen of the last two wars a $60 monthly pension when they reach age 60, plus disability payments. It is estimated this would cost almost two billion dollars the first year, with later outlays reaching multi-billion dollar levels.

Under this measure, sponsored by Mississippi's Rankin, a veteran need only to have served 90 days in either world war to qualify for a pension. The extra disability pay would range from $20 to $120 a month, with no proviso that the disability must have been incurred in service.

Veterans administrator Carl R. Gray, Jr, said that while he was neither opposing nor favoring the legislation in his capacity as veterans' administrator, its magnitude must be weighed closely now to prevent unwarranted financial outlays in the future. He pointed out the cost burden might be so great as to endanger the entire veteran-compensation program.

PRESIDENT TRUMAN was on record with this statement: "The necessity for new or extended benefits for veterans without service disabilities should be judged not solely from the standpoint of service in our armed forces, but in the light of existing social welfare programs available to all veterans and non-veterans alike."

Mr Truman also said in his budget message: "The program of veterans' services and benefits should reflect the fundamental fact that our primary long-run obligation is to dependents of veterans deceased from service causes, and to veterans disabled in the service At the same time, we should preserve and stress our basic objective of assisting the recipients of these benefits to be as nearly as possible self-reliant and self-supporting members of our society "

All of which indicates that veterans of both world wars expecting pensions and disability allowances had best be prepared to wait awhile.

SATURATION:

Claimed for Taxes

Millions of Americans would agree with the premise Taxes in America have reached the saturation point.

Former President Herbert Hoover made the assertion to congress. As a remedy, he suggested unsnarling a century of government red tape, a slash in federal spending.

FOR ALL HIS earnestness and the force of his figures, Herbert Hoover, "great engineer" of the depression, was a voice crying in the wilderness.

While President Truman outlined the need for vast federal expenditures for world social and economic improvement, as well as for defense measures, he had said nothing about reduction of government expenditures. There was nothing in his announced program relating to any such action.

True, there have always been one or two individuals in every congress who have sought to stick a finger in the hole in the dike of federal outlay, but to date the stopper has never approximated the cirmumference of the orifice. Indications were that it would be thus in the 81st congress.

HOOVER RECOMMENDED consolidation of 1,800 bureaus, commissions and divisions, but lurking in the background, ready to raise its awesome head at any moment, was patronage. Patronage means votes and votes mean legislative tenure, and with the one fattening off the other, Mr Hoover's recommendations commanded respect more for their temerity than for any hope of their adoption.

ATOM RAYS:

No Deformities

Are victims of atomic bombings likely to product grotesquely deformed offspring?

Many scientists believe that is one of the terrible effects of atomic radiation. There are as many more who disagree.

But the U. S. army atomic energy commission has said no evidence of abnormal offspring had yet been found among the Japanese exposed to radiation at Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

Army, Navy, Marines Join In Big Caribbean Maneuver

By BAUKHAGE

...ws Analyst and Commentator.

WASHINGTON.—About the time these lines are in print, 35,000 American soldiers, sailors, fliers and marines and a hundred ships will be shoving off for the greatest peacetime maneuvers in our history. Providence permitting, your correspondent will be on the scene.

A strange and sinister "aggressive force" which will have seized and fortified the island of Vieques in the Caribbean will be bombarded by sea and air, attacked, and (we trust) captured by a joint marine corps and army expeditionary force landed by navy ships and planes which have fought their way past enemy planes, and submarines.

The purpose of this undertaking is officially described as "to advance and ensure combat readiness for Fleet Marine Force Atlantic units, and to provide amphibious training for Army and Marine Corps units."

BAUKHAGE

Admiral W. H. P. Blandy, commander-in chief of the Atlantic fleet will be in over-all command. Lieut. Gen. Keller E Rockey, USMC, will command the joint marine corps and army expeditionary troops which will be composed of the second marine division and the 65th infantry, Caribbean command.

Many of these men are veterans of Pacific landings and the North African operations, but, the experts tell me, there are many things to be learned for great progress has been made in amphibious training since the war.

This is the first operation of its kind since the merger of the armed services has been in effect, and nothing approaching it in size has ever been attempted in peacetime.

Of course the marine corps was virtually born amphibious and for the past 28 years has perfected the methods which were used in the late war. Now they serve as the instructors in this particular field of activity for the other branches of the service.

Maneuvers which get comparatively little notice in the press are largely regarded by laymen as a spectacle or as a series of highly technical military problems which are too complicated to follow As a matter of fact, the actual maneuvers are a small part of the operation compared to the planning which dates back to the days when Caesar took his famous tenth legion from small boats onto the soil of ancient Britain, or before.

Perhaps the earliest important invasion from the sea in modern times was one of the most unsuccessful - - - the ill-fated Gallipoli battle when the British troops were almost annihilated in their first attempt to invade Turkey in World War I.

Intensive study of this debacle was made in this country, and the marines had made great strides long before World War II made such training necessary. Very few people realized this. In fact, many people probably think that the Japs had a special patent on amphibious tactics.

As one officer expressed it to me, there is nothing secret about this method of fighting It is simply a question of "know-how" A vast conglomeration of minute detail which is not used at all in ordinary land fighting. For example, an infantryman takes for granted that he and his rifle are more or less one piece. But the first time he has to go over the side of a ship and into a small craft, he suddenly finds he is faced with a major problem in assuring not only his own arrival on the beach but, what is equally important, the simultaneous arrival of his gun. If you have ever tried to crawl down a net with no equipment whatever, you realize it requires all the hands you have

But long before D-day, thousands of details have been worked out hundreds of miles from the scene of action. As one officer put it, the stack of charts that have to be drawn are a mile high. Beans, bullets, shoelaces—all are part of the picture quite as much as radar and range-finders.

The little island of Vieques will be pounded with tons of shells, hauled, mauled, captured, and deserted, and then go back to a subtropical siesta. But what happens there on and before March 2 and 3, 1949, may be of vital importance a decade hence..

A New Truman Going to Work

As the Ides of March approach, the new administration swings into its stride with a good deal of honeymoon fervor still in the air. From the day of the first White House press and radio conference after the inauguration, it was clear that we had a new President.

Washington reporters had become used to several Harry Trumans. There was the very grave and not very certain man who was called in 1945 to a job which he didn't want and never expected to have with the shadow of tragedy over him. A man who was at first so anxious to reassure the country that there would be no break in the continuity of leadership that he sometimes rushed in where a more experienced man might have feared to tread.

There were many "off-the-cuff" remarks with some disastrous results. Then came a period when he leaned over backward with caution; after that, the period when his own party seemed to be falling apart and it was no secret that the man in the White House was disappointed and unhappy.

Then came a gradual change which even many of his intimates did not realize, a change that gradually culminated in the combative confidence which most of his supporters failed to share. Washington watched his election campaign with considerable admiration for his fighting spirit but without being convinced that even he, himself actually had the confidence he displayed.

Then came the election upset and two months later, the tremendous turnout at the inauguration. There was evidence for those who could recognize it, in the manner of delivery of his inauguration speech, that here was still another Truman. At that first press and radio conference, it was plain enough. At last he was his own man. He felt he had earned his office. He probably had felt all along that he was fully competent to carry on its responsibilities But now something had been added: a controlled self-assurance.

I think Mr. Truman was sincere when he told a luncheon meeting of the Democratic party's finance committee that there were a million men in the United States who would make a better President, but it was his job and he would carry it out. He was simply saying that he realized there were men in the country with greater ability than he had. He didn't say, nor did he think, that he didn't have enough ability. If events prove that he hasn't, he probably will be the first to admit it.

That is my own interpretation and is offered for what it is worth. It is an impression based not only on what Harry Truman has said and done, but largely on the way he has said and done it. If he continues to handle himself in the way he has since the election, the men in government and out, in his own party and out of it, will find him a lot easier to deal with. Likewise, he is going to be proportionately more successful with those with whom he has to deal.

Press Conferences Have Changed, Too

At a recent White House news conference, an old timer came up to me and remarked that the last few times he had attended these gatherings, all of which had been especially well attended (well over 100 reporters) he couldn't help thinking back to the days of Taft when, as he put it, Robert Small of the Associated Press and perhaps one of two others who used to be sneaked into the back door of the White House for confidential talks with the President, but no other newsmen or women had any access whatever to the Chief Executive.

I was not in Washington then but later I came to know Small very well and I know he was known as "the fair haired boy" of the Taft administration. It was the first time I had ever heard the expression. Small was a brilliant newsman and Taft was very fond of him. I well recall the ex-President (Taft was then chief justice) comforting Small's father at Bob's funeral. The former White House reporter was comparatively young when he died.

I do not know how the press corps felt about Small's intimate relationship with the White House—or the other fortunate ones who were given these exclusive privileges but I doubt if it occurred to anyone to suggest the possibility of having regular open press conferences. Teddy Roosevelt, however, did call in press association men on occasion.

And yet such a situation (no regular conference) seems incredible today. No President would dare refuse to see newsfolk and stand up to questions which sometimes are more impertinent that pertinent.

SET 1949 FISHING SEASON OPEN CRAPPIE TO YEAR-AROUND FISHING

The State Conservation Commission has, by administrative order, set the 1949 fishing seasons. Except for setting a continous open season on crappies and minnows, and reducing the bag and possession limit on all frogs to 12, no changes were made in the regulations.

The season on crappies was opened as a result of fisheries investigations showing that the crappie populations were dominating many lakes and that earlier opening when crappies feed voraciouslyy would aid in reducing crappie dominance. The minnow season was opend continuously except in state-owned lakes and trout streams, to allow crappie fisherman to secure bait.

Commission authorities cautioned all fisherman to go easy on use of bait minnows and to remove no more of these bait fishes than are needed.

The frog catch and possession limit was reduced to one dozen of all species, because of a serious shortage in most areas of the state.

The continous open season on crappies and minnows becomes effective on publication, Feb. 24th.

The accompanying table of fishing seasons, catch and possession limits, is subject to change by the state legislature now in session. Watch your local newspapers for any possible legislative changes.

Who Gets The Cream?

Occasionally, people unfamiliar with cooperative business, ask: "Who gets the profits, or the cream of the business?"

We don't operate for profit, but for service to our membership. That is why people join co-ops, to provide themselves with goods and services, at the lowest possible cost.

Members make worthwhile savings when they join and patronize their own co-op. These savings are the "cream," and it all comes back to individual members on the basis of patronage.

We invite your membership and patronage. You help yourself, your family and community when you pool your efforts with others through co-ops.

FIVE RULES TO FOLLOW TO HELP PREVENT REJECT CREAM

Rule 1: Brush flanks and wash udders before milking. It not only insures clean milk but it also stimulates the milk flow for more rapid milking.

Rule 2: Strain milk through filter strainer (using 6½ inch pads) into clean can, then wash strainer, put in new pad, and filter cream as it comes from separator into setter can.

Rule 3: Wash all utensils immediately after using, and rinse well before using again.

Rule 4: Allow cream to cool before mixing with the cream. Be careful when pouring cream from one can to the other so feed, hair, or just dust does not blow in or fall off clothing.

Rule 5: Be sure you wash delivery can just before using. This can should be washed every time, not just once in a while, because it sets around a day or so before using, and it will pick up sidment.

Nick Venechuk, Dairy Fieldman for Hancock County, states that if all these suggestions were followed, we would not have any reject cream and that is what we are striving for.

"Bearcat" Mills - - -

In demonstrating "Bearcat" mills some time ago at a county fair over around Nashua some place, the man and mill made quite a commotion by grinding white pine four-by-fours. Everything went well until some wise (?) guy slipped a piece of white oak in the pile The company repaired the mill at no expense to the dealer, but it wasn't until years later that anyone found out what really happened. "Chet" Renner just bought one of these mills from us. Hope he doesn't have any oak wood laying around.

START THE DAY WITH A GOOD BREAKFAST

BRIGHT BEGINNING

ONE OF THE biggest services that any homemaker can give her family is to feed them a good, essential breakfast to get them off to work and school with proper speed. This is the best way—at least to my knowledge—of preventing that mid-morning lag in energy as well as having the mind razor sharp whether you apply yourself at a school desk, sit in an office or work in the barn, fields or your own kitchen.

A good breakfast need not be elaborate to serve its purpose. Start with a simple pattern including hot cereal and milk and you can feel well fed.

Naturally if you want more, there are any number of foods to be added. Too, there's no need to feel that breakfasts can't have variety. You can very fruit and cereal dish, while eggs, breakfast meats and hot breads have infinite variety. Mother will start fragrant odors from the kitchen when the family is scheduled to hear the alarm clock, and will help keep them interested in completing the process and get them down to a good breakfast.

FOR THOSE of you who depend on the oven to take the chill out of the house in the morning, here are some splendid quick-to-mix hot breads for breakfast or any other meal:

Honey Nut Bran Muffins
(Makes 16 large muffins)

½ cup honey
1 cup flour
½ teaspoon soda
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon baking powder
2 cups bran
1 tablespoon melted butter
1½ cups milk
½ cup walnuts, chopped fine

Sift together flour, soda, salt and baking powder. Mix with bran and all other ingredients. Place in greased muffin pans and bake in a hot (425°F.) oven for 25 to 30 minutes.

Raisin Bran Muffins
(Makes 6 Muffins)

1 cup sifted flour
2 teaspoons double-acting baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons sugar
1 egg, well beaten
1 cup milk
2 tablespoons melted shortening
1 cup raisin bran

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, salt and sugar; sift again. Combine egg and milk and add to flour mixture. Add shortening then mix only enough to dampen flour. Fold in raisin bran. Turn into greased muffin pans, filling them ⅔ full. Bake in a hot (425°F.) oven 25 minutes.

Flake Gems
(Makes 12 muffins)

1 cup sifted flour
2 tablespoons sugar
½ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 egg
½ cup milk
2 tablespoons melted fat
1 cups corn flakes or wheat flakes

LYNN SAYS:

Breakfast

Dried fruits, cut and added to any of the cooked cereals, then served with brown sugar and rich milk will provide an interesting dish.

Cinnamon toast made this way is delicious: toast and butter bread, then sprinkle with brown sugar and cinnamon and broil until bubbly.

For maple toast, make as cinnamon toast, substituting shavings of maple sugar for cinnamon-sugar mixture; broil.

Recipe Given

Sift together flour, sugar, salt and baking powder. Beat egg until light, add milk then stir in dry ingredients, being careful not to overmix. Add slightly cooled fat and stir just enough to mix ingredients. Carefully fold in corn flakes. Fill greased muffin pans, 2 inches in diameter, ⅔ full. Bake in a moderately hot (400°F.) oven about 20 to 25 minutes.

Honey Kuchen
(Makes 1 square)

Topping:
¼ cup brown sugar
½ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
2 tablespoons butter
½ cup bran or wheat flakes

Kuchen:
¾ cup sifted flour
2½ teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup milk
¼ cup honey
1 egg
3 tablespoons melted fat
1½ cups bran or wheat flakes

Sift together flour, baking powder salt. Combine milk, honey well-beaten egg and add to flour mixture. Add fat mixing only enough to combine. Fold in flakes. Place into a greased pan 8 x 8 x 2 inches. Sprinkle topping over batter. Bake in a moderately hot (400°F.) oven 25 minutes.

ANOTHER WAY to include cereal in the menu is to cook, chill and fry it. This may be served with fruit or breakfast meat or with syrup. It's a hearty, tasty dish.

Fried Wheat-Meal
(Serves 6)
½ teaspoon salt
2¾ cup boiling water
¾ cup wheat meal

Add salt to boiling water in the saucepan. Add cereal slowly, stirring constantly. Bring to a boil and cook 3 minutes, stirring constantly. Pour into cold, wet mold. Let stand overnight, or until cold and firm. Turn from pan. Slice into ⅜-inch slices and saute in a small amount of fat, turning to brown both sides. Serve with maple-flavored syrup. (Leftover cooked wheat-meal may be used in this way.)

Fried Wheat-Meal with Fruit: Add ½ cup seedless raisins, chopped dates or chopped figs to the cooked cereal before turning into mold.

Fried Wheat-Meal with Apples: Add ½ cup apples, peeled and cut in ½-inch pieces to cooked wheat-meal before turning into mold.

Either of the above are excellent when served with sausages, prepared this way: lay pork patties or links in a cold frying pan and fry slowly for 12-15 minutes, turning occasionally with 2 forks or a spatula, being careful not to puncture the casing. Pour off fat as it accumulates. Serve the fat for seasoning vegetables, frying eggs, potatoes, French toast or for making sauces of gravies.

Released by WNU Features.

Orange toast is a delightful variation to serve for breakfast. To make it, toast and butter bread, then spread with a mixture of sugar and grated orange rind which has been moistened with orange juice.

Never stack toast as it will become soggy and lose its fresh, crisp texture. Make toast as needed and cut in triangles or fingers to make it more interesting.

Adding several teaspoons of honey or molasses to the cereal while it is cooking will make the flavor more interesting.

MIRROR of your MIND
Work Can Cure Insomnia
By Lawrence Gould

Can you "work yourself to sleep"?

Answer: Yes—I do it regularly. For whatever gives you a sense of security will help you to sleep once you are tired, and if you get this sense from the knowledge that you've done a good job—or made progress at one—you may find that working the last thing before you go to bed puts you to sleep as nothing else will. But if your job is distasteful, or if you're inclined to worry over how well you have done it, some form of "escape" like reading a detective story will be likely to prove more effective in making you sleepy.

Do Indians ever stutter?

Answer: Practically never, reports John C. Snedicor of the University of California in the Quarterly Journal of Speech. He interviewed 800 American Indians and got reports on 1,000 others, but could find only two half-breeds with speech difficulties—in fact, he learned that two Indian dialects have no word meaning "to stutter." He says one possible reason is that Indians don't try to make left-handed children use their right hands, while another is that children who are injured at birth don't have much chance of surviving.

Can mankind be freed from superstition?

Answer: I very much doubt it. For it's not by chance that people adopt superstitious ideas; it's because they cannot get along without them. There are many men and women who would be unable to face life's uncertainties without some sort of guarantee of getting through them safely, and whether this guarantee comes from a lucky penny or a rabbit's foot makes little difference because if they did not have one "charm" they would invent another. Superstition will survive until men become more self-reliant than seems probable for centuries to come.

KEEPING HEALTHY

Snorers Are Unfair to Others
By Dr. James W. Barton

THERE are many who are allergic to noise. When on a train or in a hotel room an individual occupies a berth or room close to a snorer he may lose much sleep. Of course, by knocking on the side of the berth or on the door, he may waken the snorer temporarily; but the latter soon returns to his snoring.

Most individuals are told about snoring by their family or friends, and it is only fair that they should make an effort, at least, to break the habit.

Dr. Ian G. Robinson, in "Proceedings, Royal Society of Medicine (England)," states that snoring may be treated by:

1. Removal or prevention of obstruction of the nose which causes mouth breathing, as by the use of a solution for the nose before retiring. This solution may be one of the various preparations that shrink the lining of the nose; it is the swelling of this lining tissue that causes the blocking of the nose and consequent mouth breathing. The use of the new drug, benadryl, is also recommended for this purpose. Some keep the nostrils open by the use of a simple salt solution, a half teaspoonful to a glass of warm water.

2. Preventing the patient from sleeping on his back by sewing a cotton padding in the back of his pajamas.

3. Keeping the mouth closed during sleep by a strip of adhesive tape across the corner of the mouth.

4. Removal of infected tonsils, which produce irritations at the back of the throat, causing vibrating.

5. Cutting a part of the uvula away and preventing it from vibrating lowers the degree and the pitch (sound) of the snore, but does not prevent it entirely.

It is not too much to ask those who snore to do this much for those who cannot sleep because of this bad habit.

★ HEALTH NOTES ★

Workers with heart disease can be employed and should be employed for their own well being. Recently it was reported that of 2,081 heart patients—the entire enrollment of 10 heart clinics in New York City—65 per cent were doing some work, and of 543 who were under 35 years of age, 80 per cent were employed in productive work.

The Montefiore hospital in New York City, as an experiment, is supervising the care of 50 patients in their homes who cannot afford the services of a private physician. An analysis shows that the cost involved in the home care for one patient is approximately one-fourth the cost of maintaining the same patient in a hospital.

FIRST AID to the AILING HOUSE
by Roger C. Whitman

QUESTION: "When we moved into our apartment, we purchased from the previous tenant the inlaid linoleum on the kitchen floor. The quality is excellent, but the color is a dirty gray-green in a marbleized pattern. Is there any product which will stain or dye the linoleum (not paint) so that we can get a deep blue tone and still retain the marbleized effect?"

ANSWER: I do not know of any stain or dye for that purpose. But you may be able to get the effect that you want by stippling in two colors, or else by applying a "spatter-dash" finish. For the stippling, first cut a large sponge in half. Apply an oil floor paint of the background color that you wish on the floor. When this has dried, paint a section of clean board with a second color that you will use for stippling, press the flat, cut side of the sponge on this fresh paint, and then press this on the linoleum. The pattern of the cut sponge thus will be transferred to the floor.

For a spatter-dash effect, use a stick and a brush with a rather long bristle. Dip the brush into the paint and wipe off the excess. Strike the brush ferrule against the stick so that the paint will come off in drops on the floor. (The floor should already be painted with the background color.) Try these methods first on pieces of boards to get the knack. See that the linoleum is absolutely clean and dry before you start to paint, no grease or wax.

NEED FOR REORGANIZATION OF SCHOOL DISTRICTS

By Chas. S. Whitney, Co. Supt.

School district reorganization is imperative, not only in Iowa, but in a good many of the states of the union. It is imperative for the simple reason that a large majority of the school districts now operating in this country cannot give people the kind of educational programs they need to deal with the complex problems of present day life or adequately prepare youth to cope with the problems of the future

There are too many small inefficient districts in Iowa, there being 5,706 districts in the state for the 1946-47 school year. Of these only 861 were attempting to provide any type of program beyond the 8th grade and a large number of these 861 just weren't getting a good job done Of the 861 high schools, 51 had 25 or fewer pupils, 286 had 50 or fewer pupils, 494 had 75 or fewer pupils, 606 or 70 per cent of them had 100 or fewer pupils In these small high schools, a very narrow program of studies is offered, with most every pupil being required to take the same course of study as every other pupil irrespective of his needs, aptitudes and special interests.

Approximately 30 per cent of the boys and girls attending high schools in Iowa are doing so on tuition bases, also a good many one room rural schools have closed during the past few years, sending their pupils to the near-by towns on a tuition bases. In situations of this sort, the parents of the pupils in the sending district have no control over the type of educational program which is provided for their boys and girls. This exists when it would seem that every boy and girl is entitled to live in a district which provides complete, adequate, comprehensive, educational opportunities for him from the time he starts to school until he completes at least the 12 grade.

During the 1946-47 school year one out of every five elementary pupils attended a one room rural school in which the typical enrollment was 11.3 pupils Literally thousands of these pupils pass through the eight grades of their elementary school experience without a classmate. In one Iowa county, during the present school year, 181 of the 700 pupils attending one room rural schools are in a class by themselves. In schools of this type if a pupil isn't in a class by himself, he will be in one with very few other pupils, and in either case can't have the challenging experience he would have if he were in a group with others on much the same level of accomplishment as himself. Equipment, for the most part, isn't as adequate as it might be and these schools in the main, are taught by our poorest trained people

The one room rural school is not the only place where elementary pupils are being shorted. We have a good many graded schools with teachers handling two, three, or four grades. Whenever a teacher attempts to handle more than one grade per room, she has a more difficult type of teaching situation than she otherwise would have and the pupils don't get the attention which they deserve. Also, we have a good many situations where there are no special teachers for the elementary grades in the fields of physical education, music, art, etc.

If an adequate, comprehensive, rich, program is to be provided for every boy and girl from the time he starts to school until he completes at least the 12th grade, it will be necessary to have enough pupils within each administrative unit so that well qualified teachers can be employed in each field needed at a reasonable cost. This will require districts with much larger enrollments than we have at present.

BLUE CROSS-BLUE SHIELD ENROLLMENTS ENDS MARCH 5TH

V. A. Cook, President of the Hancock County Health Improvement Association which is conducting a Blue Cross-Blue Shield membership enrollment, emphasized today that families who wish to participate in the plan will have only until March 5th to enroll. Further opportunity to enroll through this group will not be extended for some time, he said. Last year (1948) members of the Des Moines Blue Cross Plan had 63,667 hospital cases for which the Plan allowed $4,244,485.75

With the development of new drugs in the progress of medical science, more scientific care can be given in the hospital than in the home. These have added to the costs of hospital care. Statistics of the American Hospital Association show that one person out of eight and one family out of four on the average does have hospital care each year. For these reasons, more and more people are feeling the need for Blue Cross-Blue Shield protection, Mr. Cook said.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Church Raps Mindszenty Verdict; Dewey Dons Attire of Liberalism; People Checked Inflation Threat

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

MINDSZENTY:
Gets Life Term

The trial of Cardinal Mindszenty, primate of Hungary, was over and the verdict came as no surprise. The Cardinal was sentenced to life imprisonment on charges of treason and black marketing If there were an unexpected element in the outcome it was that the primate's life had been spared

But at trial's end even that hung in the balance. Cardinal Mindszenty still could lose his life Under Hungarian law, while his sentence of life could be appealed, the supreme peoples tribunal, last court of appeal, could increase the severity of the sentence which, in this case, could mean only death.

THE CARDINAL was doomed from the outset. His plight had so stirred the Christian world that denunciations of the Hungarian government's actions were almost universal Powerful western nations, through their leading churchmen, had attacked the trial procedure and this, in turn, had incensed the Communist-dominated Hungarian court to a point where the issue was never in doubt.

It was generally believed that it was only reluctance to make a martyr out of the Cardinal that averted the death penalty.

Hungary lost no time in assailing American representatives who actually, or purportedly, sided with the cardinal Among targets of these attacks were Cardinal Spellman, of New York, who delivered a scathing sermon against prosecution of Mindszenty, and Selden Chapin, U S. envoy to Hungary.

AMONG OTHER THINGS, Cardinal Mindszenty was accused of gathering information for Chapin in a scheme to overthrow the Hungarian government. Chapin immediately branded this charge as "pure fantasy"

General opinion was that in the prosecution of the Cardinal Russian communism had made its first great blunder For in the move was discerned the fact that religion and religious concepts — whether Catholic or Protestant — would not be permitted to stand in the way of Soviet aims of expansion and domination.

The Russians had resurrected a policy which once before had so alarmed them that they had forsworn it. But now they were publicly and dramatically recommitted to it—a policy of the Kremlin versus Christ, and this time the Soviet Union was up against an adversary for whom there can be no defeat.

GOP'S DEWEY:
New Liberalism

For a man who was strangely reticent about plans while seeking the presidency of the United States, New York's Thomas E. Dewey turned vocal and voluble in his Lincoln Day address in Washington.

In the diminutive governor's remarks there was no apology for defeat and no supine bid for favor. Instead, he lashed out vigorously against party policy and advocated a purge of "anti-liberals" from GOP ranks.

That there was a noticeable paradox in his position apparently disturbed him not at all. While crying for those who oppose "liberal progressive" policies to get out of the party, he struck, out also at New Dealish elements inside the organization

Urging his party to stop bemoaning the past, he recommended that it dedicate itself anew to forward-looking programs of social progress but without "trying to outbid the Democrats with the public money"

It was Dewey's first public address since his defeat last November, and in it he reminded his listeners that the last GOP platform expressed wholehearted belief in unemployment insurance, increased old age assistance, broader social security generally, slum clearance and public housing, public development of water power, and farm price supports

These words must have left some of his hearers stunned Surely, they must have asked themselves, why weren't some of these things mentioned during the multiple appearances of their presidential candidate last year?

But, Dewey, ever the realist in facing a situation, however he may react to it, conceded that the party was split wide open in a fight between two extremes of thought. And then he uttered a remark which must have brought some sly smiles. He said: "What we ought to do is to make it everlastingly clear to the country where we stand and why."

INCOME:
Average $3,000

The average annual income of the American family was climbing.

In 1947 the average was $3,000, highest ever recorded up to that time.

The federal census bureau, which issued the report, found that income was distributed among the country's 37 million families in this manner:

FOUR MILLION had under $1,000; six million had $1,000 to $2,000; eight million, $2,000 to $3,000, eight million, $3,000 to $4,000; four million, $4,000 to $5,000; three million, $5,000 to $6,000; three million $6,000 to $10,000, and one million, $10,000 or more.

Thus only four million families—or slightly fewer than one out of each nine families in the country—had in that year the $6,000 which President Truman has suggested as the starting point for the income tax increase he asked Congress to consider.

An interesting factor is that in one fourth of the families, women earned 25 per cent or more of the family income, and more than two million families were supported entirely be female breadwinners.

Who fared best in the average-income increase?

Farm wage-workers came out best. The income of this class had jumped from an average of $300 in 1939 to $900 in 1947.

INFLATION:
People Curbed It

The people, themselves, can claim major credit for the recent check to national inflation

That is the conclusion of the family economics bureau of the Northwestern National Life Insurance Company which conducted a study of the subject.

THE STUDY developed that a slowdown, halt, or reverse of six main factors in the 76 per cent rise from pre-war price levels had been brought about.

It found that as late as last September, the public still was bidding frantically against each other for more goods than were being produced in many lines. But in the final two months of 1948, consumers suddenly quit trying to outbid each other.

With industrial production in high gear and comparatively free from interruptions, output and available supplies of most consumer goods were gaining steadily.

Government bidding for grain in Europe, which ran grain prices up to record heights last year, slowed down as world grain production recovered

THE LONG RISE in wage-costs-per-unit of goods was slowing down, the study said.

Continuing its listing of the six factors, the study reported that rapid expansion in money supply, both cash and credit, due to vast government borrowing, had also slowed down.

Borrowing by business for expansion was listed as the sixth factor which was slowed down because of tightened restrictions.

But the first and foremost cause of the current price deflation, the study concludes, has been the halt in the public's scramble for goods. By trimming their demands to fit within available supplies, the people have recaptured some of their normal control over prices.

HELP GIVEN NAVAJOS

Government Feeding Snowbound Indians

Operating overland and by air, the federal government was engaged in the business of caring for its snowbound Navajo wards.

Caught almost as helplessly as cattle in the worst blizzard to strike the plains states in years, Indians on the vast Navajo reservation were being fed by a 300-mile lifeline maintained by the government.

With sheep and cattle starving and freezing, with horse transportation impossible, the Navajos were in actual distress

The government's Indian service doctors reported the health situation was fairly good among the 60,000 Indians living within the reservation area.

Workers toiled with all kinds of mobile equipment to get through to families cut off for six weeks

GREEN LIGHT:
Waits Faithfully

Harry S. Truman, of Independence, Mo., is getting into a habit of popping up as a poll topper in this or that department.

"Man of the year . . . most popular, etc., etc . . ." are some of the poll winning titles he already possesses.

Now, he has come up with another.

Mr. Truman is the nation's No. 1 pedestrian.

No less an authority than that National Safety Council has so designated Mr. Truman.

THE ASSOCIATION'S magazine, Public Safety, pictured Mr. Truman on its cover and commended him for his interest in safety.

The traffic advisory board of the District of Columbia hailed the President's "firm decision to wait faithfully for the green light before crossing Pennsylvania avenue."

Mr. Truman turned down a suggestion that a special traffic control be established for his daily walks between his temporary residence at Blair House and the White House.

Mr. Truman said he preferred to obey the traffic signals "like any other citizen."

A-BOMB DATA:
Reds Demand It

The Russians just couldn't stay out of the news.

But in an utterance which commanded American headlines, they revealed themselves as almost childishly naive.

With the cold war as hot as it could be, short of the bullet stage, the Soviets had the gall to demand that the United States tell them how many A-bombs this country has and provide full data on armed forces and armaments.

Never modest in demands, the Soviets set a deadline for receipt of this information. It was March 31, 1949

HOWEVER, they wouldn't be completely selfish about the matter. They demanded that the report on these matters be made to the United Nations, of which Russia is a member.

Warren R. Austin, U. S. delegate to the U. N., dubbed the Soviet resolution a "succotash of all the beans and different constituents" Russia has put to the U. N. on the arms and atomic questions since the world peace organization was formed.

Even a non-betting citizen might be excused for risking a sawbuck that the Russians would have nothing but their pains in proposing that the U S bare its atomic war potentials to the Kremlin

B-29'S:
Direct Hits

The army air force was making a point for its contention of its importance as an effective arm in itself Four air force B-29's scored direct hits on nine fighting ships attacking Kodiak island in the navy's north Pacific war games

An airman aboard one of the bombers said the formation spotted the nine ships 250 miles southeast of Kodiak and registered bombing hits in three runs at 20,000 feet.

THE SHIPS were part of a navy task force attempting to retake the island from a theoretical enemy

The report was significant from two standpoints. First, because the air force termed it important enough to report. Since that was done, it was motivated, probably, by the fact that the air force wanted to show that it had demonstrated the efficacy of the power of land-based planes in an offshore attack.

ALLIGATOR:
Nothing Fatal

In Alencon, France, Santos Dumot, circus performer, stuck his head into the mouth of a 300-pound alligator—his regular act. As usual, the audience oohed and aahed.

But this time, the alligator snapped his big jaws shut.

The actor's father rushed to the rescue with an iron bar and forced the jaws open.

The younger Dumot suffered deep head wounds, but will live.

American 'Know How' Aids In Development of Nations

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WASHINGTON—When the various departments of the government began to gather data for the President to be used as the basis for preliminary legislation for his "bold new program" of establishing the machinery of world cooperation for the development of undeveloped countries, it was a surprise to many to learn than many of these agencies are by no means starting from scratch.

The department of agriculture of course, has had the longest and most successful record in this line—a good 10 years. In 1939 it had become all too evident that in a world where the free flow of trade was threatened by rising anti-democratic hegemonies, we had to look to our nearer neighbors for many things which we did not produce at home, and which they could, but did not, produce themselves.

Congess was quite willing to authorize the department of agriculture to lend some of its technicians to other countries and to help such countries as were willing to cooperate to set up agricultural stations for the purpose of putting American techniques into action.

BAUKHAGE

For those who may have questioned the expenditure in this connection, there is some satisfaction in noting that the experiment paid, from the standpoint of all concerned including the peoples of the countries involved. On the average the United States puts out one dollar for each three dollars spent by the other countries. In 1943 Latin American countries were expending $500,000. In 1948 they invested $1,178,000.

The countries in which the stations are located, an official of the department explained, supplies "land, buildings, associate technicians, office and service personnel, equipment and supplies available within the country, and funds for operating expenses." The United States supplies the "know-how" and the specialized equipment necessary.

The plan pays out, the department explains, this way. Assistance in raising crops such as cocoa, coffee, certain fibres, medical plants, tea and rubber, has increased the revenue from them. They are products in demand in this country, we don't or can't raise. The dollars they earn are turned into many manufactured products which these countries purchase from us.

In the last special report issued by the American military government on the Licensed Press of Germany, we have an example of another type of experience which the United States has had in attempting to provide the "know-how" for a foreign nation

Some of the seeds which have been planted and which it is hoped will grow, thanks to the application of American techniques, are those which should produce a free and democratic press in Germany.

It would be somewhat rash to try to teach the Germans all about the publishing business. After all Gutenburg, who invented printing, was a German, and ever since his time the Germans have taken the lead in many of the mechanical processes connected with the publishing business. But when the American occupation forces moved in, there was nothing that resembled a free press in Germany, and if there had been it hardly could have flourished under the conditions which then existed. Even today the best we can expect is a "nearly free press" and that is what it admittedly is.

In the United States zone and in Berlin there are now 56 newspapers licensed by the United States. These papers own a cooperatively-operated news agency. These publications are not, and never have been, "pre-censored." They are carefully read by the military government officials, and some have been suspended, after warning But these occasions have been few.

The mission of the military government in the field of the press, as planned and applied to date, has for its first point:

"To help democratically-minded and trustworthy German publishers and editors to build an objective, free, democratic press in the U. S. Zone in Germany and to prevent the resurgence of Nazism, militarism, racism, pan-Germanism, or nationalism in the newspaper and news agency field."

The special report explains that controls which were imposed when the papers were first established in order to conserve scarce materials, supplies, and equipment and in order to train editors, publishers, and journalists in the tradition of a democratic, free press have been progressively lifted so that for two years at least the U. S. zone has had a "nearly" free press. The eventual goal has been from the start an absolutely free press to the extent that this condition obtains in the United States and Great Britain or other democratic countries

What have been the results? In the view of the military government

"Democratically-minded and trustworthy German editors and publishers have established a solid core of independent and democratic newspapers in the U. S. area of occupation. They have been encouraged to maintain their independence and objectivity against all attacks and to resist the encroachment of government or of other special interest groups and protect their right to bring the news of Germany and the world to the people of Germany and to comment upon it."

The question that remains, however, is this when the controls and the existing regulations are removed, will the Germans graduate from a "nearly free press" which the Americans have encouraged to a genuinely free press which Americans consider an essential of democracy? Will the Germans, who for centuries have accepted control and regimentation from above, be able to start out afresh and make use of the democratic techniques to which we have attempted to expose them?

That is one kind of "know-how" It is hard to pass on.

Haylift Whips Winter Blizzards

The winter storms which attacked the range country and presented what looked for awhile like a major tragedy to the cattle industry didn't turn out to be as bad as some people feared, but it might have been considerably worse if it hadn't been for what happened in the Pacific islands in World War II, The Japs used to say that the American's most terible weapon was the bulldozer and, of course, the Sea-Bees wrote epic history on a clean slate.

The same might be said of the air force, so far as the snowbound ranchers, especially those in Nevada were concerned. There the haylift took them over the first, worst hump of the storms.

The Great Plains always have furnished hazards unknown to other parts of the North American continent.

As C. Warren Thornwaite, soil conservation expert of the department of agriculture says of the Great Plains: "In a desert, you know what to expect of the climate and plan accordingly. The same is true of humid regions. Men have been badly fooled by the semi-arid regions because they are sometimes humid, sometimes arid, and sometimes a cross between the two. Yet it is possible to make allowances for this, too, once the climate is understood."

One of the worst blows in the winter storms was struck in the southwestern part of the area affected, southern Nevada and northern Arizona, where ordinarily there is all-winter feeding. There are low altitude ranges there which make it unnecessary, under normal conditions, to provide winter feed. When these were cut off there just wasn't any feed available.

The early settlers who struck west were suspicious of the plains. They didn't realize that the gama and the buffalo grass which covered those plains and provided plenty of sustenance for the millions of buffalo which roamed them unmolested, could resist drought as efficiently as it does. For miles there would be no water in sight to the men in the prairie schooners, so they took for granted the land was not liveable and pushed on to the coast. The grass, as long as it was there—and the buffalo were good conservationists and didn't overgraze it—reduced the run-off after rains and prevented erosion.

But the first adventurers had westward-ho written in their hats anyhow, and they headed toward the coast.

Then came the farmers. The cattlemen were driven further west, the plow broke the plains and dug the dust bowl.

But agriculture is a closer-knit industry now and it had many means of assistance besides the army upon which to draw to help combat the recent blizzards—help which the early plainsmen didn't have; the department of agriculture had its organization; the foresters had equipment easily pressed into service

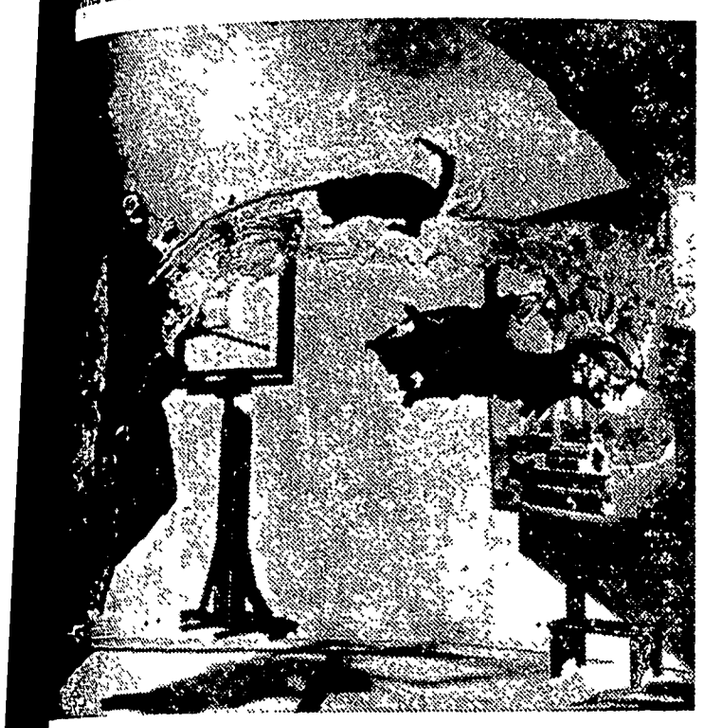
Where They Stood With Their Cameras . . .

The picture at the top, composed of a flower, a yo-yo and a plethora of human adipose produces the male animal to a remarkable degree of absurdity. It probably will strike you as screamingly hilarious. Or it might foster in your mind a sense of vague, unidentifiable embarrassment with the race of man. That's what makes it a good picture. The photo is entitled it "Just Playing" and it won him first prize in the non-professional feature class of the 1948 Graflex photo contest. The following camera studies are other prize-winning entries in the contest.



The fissionable photo at the left, "Dali Atomicus," took first prize in the professional action class. It is a surrealistic treatment of a surrealistic subject, Salvador Dali, in a surrealistic setting. Just what obscure symbolism is embodied in this connection of the leaping Dali, two flung cats and a flying tongue of water may not be clear to you. Don't worry about this. It probably wasn't clear to the photographer—or to Dali either, for that matter.

"Oh, My Deah," the picture of the supercilious baby, was awarded second prize in the professional feature class. Photographing young children, although it generally produces an abrasive effect on the patience, nevertheless is amply rewarding when it results in a delightful study like this. Sure, it's more heart-warming than a hot brick. .

In contrast to the soft charm of the infant, this photo, "Jumping the Waves," is unique for its elemental grace and the rough, hardy rhythm implicit in the figure of the girl. Basically, the picture is a variation of the "muscles on the beach" theme which usually is represented by snapshots of people standing on their heads or holding themselves out at arm's length on top of a sand dune.

Top sports shot in the Graflex contest was "Pardon My Gloves." The action, arrested at the moment one man's glove crunched against the other fighter's face amounts to an excellent representation of suspended brutality. The impact of the gloves becomes almost a tangible thing to the vicarious beholder. Second prize in the professional action class was the award the picture earned.

Wild Oats Harvest

Lesson for March 6, 1949

ALL RELIGIOUS teachers of Jesus' time used parables. But the great difference between Jesus' parables and those of his contemporaries, as Rabbi Klausner says, is that his were remembered and theirs were not. People will remember a story who cannot take in a lecture. Jesus almost never told "wonder-tales." His parables are not in the least like Grimm's fairy tales or Alice in Wonderland. Mostly they are about simple ordinary happenings, and practically always about living people or things.

Dr. Foreman

If you said "Kingdom of God" to the average religious person of Jesus' time, he would have replied, "Oh, yes, that wonderful time! The time when these Roman soldiers will be blasted off the earth by the terrible breath of God, the time when every grape will yield barrels of wine and a single grain of wheat can be ground into bushels of flour—the Miracle Age!" The Kingdom of God as Jesus proclaimed it — God's Ideal World — was something quite different from that. Jesus illustrated it not with fanciful wild pictures, but with stories from real life, from the field or the farmhouse.

The Kingdom of God is a kingdom of law, not of happen-so or of magic wands. Jesus was fond of comparing God's Kingdom to growing plants. Every plant is a miracle, it is evidence of God's creative power; but plants do not grow overnight, they grow by the laws which the creator made in them.

Wild Sowing

AS WE SAW last week, the most important feature of the Ideal World, or of any world, is the quality of the people in it. So most of Jesus' parables were about people, one of the most famous being this one of the "prodigal son." ("Prodigal" of course does not mean wicked or repentant, but wasteful, reckless with money or other things.) You could find many faults in that young man. One of them — the fault that nearly killed him — was that if he had a calendar he never looked at it. If you take a good look at a calendar you will always notice that there is another day after this one—another month, another year. But the prodigal never thinks about tomorrow, only about today. He sows his wild oats because he has fun doing it. He can say "So what?" fast enough but he has never asked the question, "—and then what?" Childish, isn't it?

Some people even argue that it is a good thing to sow wild oats, on the theory that the prodigal gets it out of his system and is afterwards a better man.

Nonsense! Is it better for your education to spend several years learning things wrong? Is it better for a garden to let it grow up in weeds for the first three weeks? Is it better for a man's health to spend his childhood years on a sickbed? That's no more silly than to say that a man is morally better for having been immoral for a while first.

Prodigal Nation

IT HAS EVEN been said that we have a prodigal-son civilization. Our generation is pretty busy sowing wild oats. We waste the natural resources of the earth. Drinking has become encouraged by law and made glamorous by the movies. We spend more on liquor than on schools. More money is spent on a single day's horse-racing at a big track than a whole state or province spends on education in a year. The ties of marriage have grown so weak, especially outside the Christian church, that it has not been long since one American city was boasting that its marriage rate had "caught up with" its divorce rate!

Wild Harvest

THE PRODIGAL son in Jesus' story went home—but he had to reap his wild harvest first. The modern prodigal, whether individual or nation, seems to misunderstand Jesus' meaning. If God is thought of at all, he is pictured as a benevolent Being who after all doesn't mind our enjoying our little fling. "He will forgive," said Voltaire, "that's his business." That is a total misunderstanding of God.

BUTTER VS. IMITATIONS

(This is the first of several articles which will be published by The Times to give you the story of how the "butter imitations" interests are trying to kill the dairy industry.)

Butter—real butter—can be identified at sight only by its natural yellow color. For this reason dairy farmers have always sought to protect their livelihood and the consumers pocketbook against butter imitations colored yellow in semblance of butter.

Our national production of meat and dairy products depends, in large part, on butter outlets for surplus milk. Cows produce more milk in summer than in winter. If we are to have enough milk during the winter season, 3,500 creameries throughout the nation must be butter markets for the summer surplus. Moreover, 40 per cent or more of our beef and veal comes from dairy herds, which must be maintained and increased to supply our growing population.

Unfair competition for butter markets results—and has resulted—in a decline in dairy cow numbers. We have lost two million dairy cows since 1942, and the decline last year was the sharpest ever recorded The results have been scarcities and higher price in milk and meat, which have cost consumers millions.

Butterlegging—the passing off of yellow oleomargarine for butter at butter prices—is all too easy The temptation of huge profits is ever present, since oleomargarine costs only half as much as butter The volume concerned is enormous and—with yellow oleomargarine readily available — fraudulent substitution in stores and public eating places is relatively easy.

Moreover, the problem of butterlegging is unique. There are no similar substitutes for other basic food products. There is no such thing as an imitation potato, for instance. or an imitation egg, or an imitation loaf of bread

Butterlegging has been a threat to the dairy industry—and to the consumer— for more than 60 years With some states now letting down their bars against yellow oleomargarine that threat is increasing. Its effects have already been felt in our milk and meat supplies, as every housewife knows.

P. T.

P T periods have taken on a new interest in the girls' class tournaments In the first one of these rough and tough ballgames, the Jr high, who was very sure of winning, lost to the inexperienced Seniors The score was 9 to 7 in an overtime Roger Terhufen, Richard Baack and Dennis Ridder proved their limberness and ability to cheer, by leading the Jr High section

The second game was the Sophomore vs. Freshmen and the Freshmen beat the Sophomores 7 to 3

JUNIOR HIGH TOURNAMENT

FRESMAN NEWS

In General Science we have been studying the earth and its beginning. We recently saw a movie "Unfinished Rainbows." This movie was the most interesting of all the movies we have seen.

Literature has been about the same, although we have been reading some poetry.

We find that the boys are still working on the wooden projects in Manual Training, while the girls are still cooking on different kinds of breakfast cereals.

We have been solving equations in Algebra with the two unknowns by substitution. At first we found them rather hard but after Mr. Andreae explained them to us a few more times, we found it easier.

SOPHOMORE NEWS

There's quite an air of studying in K. H. S. this week as all classes are preparing for the six weeks tests. Almost everyone, senior or freshman, have their nose buried in a book of some sort. Much to the temporary delight of the teachers. The teachers only complaint is, "Too bad this studious atmosphere can't continue."

The test that has the most worried is the biology, which will be about the complete digestion and circulation of the human body. Of course the history test will cover everything in which the class has forgotten. Now, the best luck to all of you on your test grades.

THIRD AND FOURTH GRADE NEWS

There are two new third graders They are Roger Olsen and Dorothy Kroehnke. The third graders lost two, Venadeen Ter Hark and Merle Marshall.

The fourth graders in their study of the Sahara Desert decided they would much rather live in the Nile Delta than the desert.

It's hard to believe, but the third graders had a garden of vegetables growing in the middle of February. In their unit on vegetables they made studys of Carol Ann Carrot, Tomino Tomato, Silas Squash and many others.

In Art last week we tore pictures from newspapers and then mounted them. We have some very good ones. On one of them a dog is pulling a dress from a clothesline. They were fun to make.

Returned Home From South

Mr. and Mrs. Ted Dutheridge returned to Klemme Tuesday morning after spending the winter months in the south. They spent some time in Texas and then went to Florida. Both agreed that Florida was the best place as the weather was ideal there. They had nice weather coming home and enjoyed their trip both ways. Monday night they visited their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Shoafstall of Mason City.

TODAY'S PARENTS KNOW—
KEYS TO WISE GUIDANCE

Bringing up the youngsters presents many problems. There are no ready-made rules for child discipline, but there are some keys to wise guidance, say child development authorities.

If youngsters could be turned off the assembly line at age 18 all properly reared and ready to go, most parents would want to know the recipe.

But usually the children, who are often inclined to be "chips off the old block," with every one different, are a handful to rear. Many a parent has wondered whether to "lay down the law" or go to the other extreme and let "everything take its course." Even in a modern age, child rearing can't be a machanized process based on a single rule.

No Extremes

Child development specialists, Iowa State College, say that neither extreme will work if you really want the younsters to grow up to be happy, able, self-reliant and cooperative men and women.

The youngsters who live under strict parental control may get a bad break. The child who always obeys the commands of others without making reply or knowing the reason why may learn to do as he is told. Furthermore, he may never want or acquire the ability to do anything without being told.

The folks who get along in the world of today are those who have gained judgment, initiative and responsibility, say child development experts, and thus the young person who grows up without these good traits is handicapped right at the start.

Another fault of absolute parental control and blind obedience on Junior's part is that he may become a shy person who shuns other folks, or he may go to the other extreme and disregard other people's rights in order to make up for his lack of normal confidence.

If he doesn't get a chance to make some plans for himself, or to have a voice in his own and family affairs, he may become secretly resentful and use underhanded methods to deceive and thus evade control.

Today's Children

But while there are homes in which Mom and Dad hold joint command, there are many more today in which the children seem to "run the show,"

What happens to the youngster who always goes his own way while adults sit humbly by wondering how to handle the situation? Child development expert say the youngster doesn't really have freedom as his parents mistakenly think he does. Instead he is saddled with a lot of decisions which he doesn't have the wisdom or experience to make. Often he isn't ready to accept the responsibility for his mistakes. He becomes a victim of his own whims, unhappy and confused, and he often disregards the rights of others.

Chances are, they say, he'll retain these same tendencies when he grows up, which is poor preparation for living in a give-and-take society.

Happy Medium

Halfway in between is the democratic, cooperative way of helping the children get a good start toward maturity. Parents and children share the planning. As the youngsters show they can take more and more responsibility, the parents give it to them.

There are no ready-made keys to child guidance, add child development specialists. But they do counsel to keep those parent-child relationships close, know how much responsibility your child can take, help him to assume more as he is able, and figure out his problems with him. Above all, they say, be a firm, fair, friendly nd foresighted parent. Anticipate maturity, or ability to go it alone, in your growing children. However, do not anticipate that they will find their way best unless you give them helpful guidance.

WANTS ICE CREAM

Jimmy Stiefel of Independence woke up in the Iowa City hospital last week and asked for some ice cream. He had been unconscious 46 days, after being struck by an automobile. His condition is still serious.

FREE PARKING

At Decorah, Phil Kolegraph has found a new use for parking meters; he hitched a horse-and-sleigh to them. The city ordinance covers only "motor vehicles" and Mr. Kolegraph parks his "hay-burner" free.

Use of Cotton on Upgrade

Tremendous increases in cotton usage in hospitals, clinics and the family medicine chest during the period 1939-46 are reported. During the eight-year period, use of cotton in medical supplies increased almost 52 per cent. A total of 112,000 bales of lint cotton went into medical markets in 1946 compared with only 73,930 bales in 1939. Market researchers broke down major medical supply outlets for cotton as follows: Bandages, gauze and sponges, 49,850 bales in 1946 compared with 39,330 bales in 1939; adhesive tape, 6,450 bales in 1946 and 5,090 bales in 1939; sanitary napkins, 55,230 bales in 1946 and 29,020 bales in 1939.

Familiarity Breeds Contempt

National Safety council figures show that three-fourths of the drivers involved in fatal accidents lived within 25 miles of where the accident took place. It is pointed out that when a person travels the same streets every day and sees the same trees and buildings, in time the familiar things may become a blur and he does not actually look at them. The same thing is true of traffic signs. It is natural for people to fall into daily habit patterns, but when they walk or drive on the street they should pay just as much attention to the familiar traffic devices as they would to those in a strange city.

Canning Tips for Housewife

Commercial jars, such as coffee, peanut butter and pickle jars, are not recommended for canning when a steam pressure canner is used. Such jars are not made strong enough to stand high pressure. Another tip is to remove screw bands that have a glass or metal disk underneath to prevent rusting. Remove bands after jars have cooled to room temperature. Warm water run on top will help remove sticky syrup and release band. Never open jar to replace lost liquid. Replacing liquid may cause an accident or lead to spoilage.

Experts and amateurs alike acclaim LOWE BROTHERS PLAX, the universal beauty gloss for all enameling. And no wonder! PLAX makes it easy to obtain expert results. Adaptable to any surface PLAX hides effectively, covers solidly and flows freely. What's more, PLAX resists wear and weather and many stains and acids—as dramatic "abuse tests" prove. ## HOW OLD?

Pete Kramer, who left Harlan back in 1892, was back there recently trying to locate other members of his family. He had two brothers and two sisters but has had no trace of them for 57 years. Among other things, Mr. Kramer wants to find out how old he is. A check of the Harlan newspaper files reveal no trace of any member of the family since 1906, at which time the family farm was sold.

UNIVERSAL BIRTH NUMBERING SYSTEM 114-40-000001

While most states are just getting under way, Iowa has begun its second year of numbering new-born babies under a universal birth numbering system.

Effective January 1, 1949, all states in the union were to begin using a system under which every baby born would be assigned a permanent number.

Under the uniform system the number is in three sections and it designates the county of birth, the state in which the child is born, the year of birth and the sequence.

States are indicated according to their alphebetical placing in the roll call of states. Thus "14" designates Iowa.

The first Iowa number to be assigned for 1949 will be 114-49-000001.

The "1" in the first section of the number stands for U S A. The "14" shows the child was born in Iowa. The second section of the number "49" designates the year of birth. The third section of the number consists of six digits and is actually the number assigned to a certificate as the numbering is done in sequence each month by the Vital Statistics office after certificates are sorted into county order then sorted by size of cities and rural areas within the county. A five digit number would be sufficient for Iowa, but since this is a universal number and some states exceed 100,000 birth a year the six digit number is necessary for uniformity.

When 1950 comes along the process will begin all over again and the first number will be "114-50-000001", and the 2nd "114-50-000002" and son on

Since each baby's number will be different, no matter in what state or what year the child is born, the aim is to develop the number into a permanently useful set of digits for each citizen.

It is hoped that eventually it will be possible to use this number on all of the individual's records such as marriage, divorce and death It would then be possible to set up in the state of birth a register showing when and where all of these events occurred.

FRAUD ALREADY INCREASING

The butterlegger is not a bogeman dreamed up by the dairy farmer He has existed ever since oleo was invented, and operates with increasing cleverness today

In Boston an ex-convict named Albert Haddard represented himself to an Illinois oleomargarine manufacturer as a reputable New England distributor With the aid of two accomplices he reported big oleo sales to twenty or more Boston bakeries Actually the oleomargarine was routed to a pig farm at Stoneham, where workman colored as much as 10,000 pounds a day, 5 tons, in imitation of butter Some 375,000 pounds of this fraudulent product flooded New England before Haddard was caught in 1935.

In New Orleans a man named C. J Jones took advantage of the wartime butter shortage to color oleomargarine in imitation of butter He mixed his fake product in washing machines and sold it as fresh country butter In ten months Jones made $15,000 on 72,000 pounds of fraudulently colored oleomargarine.

Chicago butterleggers counted their business in millions of pounds and hawked their products from coast to coast—even overseas. During their heyday the Chicago rings distributed heavily to the thousands of frauds detected by revenue agents across the nation, year after year.

In May 1948 a spot check of 159 good restaurants chosen at random in eight cities showed that 53 served oleomargarine colored yellow to imitate butter, even when butter was specifically ordered. This deception was practiced in 15 out of 19 restaurants in Louisville, Kentucky, and in 18 out of 20 restaurants in San Antonio, Texas.

Since 65 million resturants meals are served every day in this country, this proportion of fraud was serious concern to the consumer and the dairy farmer alike.

Mrs. Katy Levine of Chicago received a copy of the paper and read where a cousin, Mrs. Della White of Reading, Penn., was visiting in Numa. She wrote to Mrs. White, her cousin and invited her to "stop in" on her way back to Pennsylvania. They hadn't seen each other for 30 years.

REGULAR MEETING OF THE TOWN COUNCIL

June 14, 1948

Meeting called to order by Mayor Stille, with Lau, Etchen, Kluckhohn and Larsen, members of the council, present.

Mr. Murray, Engineer, Belmond, Iowa, informs the council that he has found that the Sanitary Sewer on East Main Street where proposed paving is under consideration falls short by about 200 feet from the end of the street and he advises that this Sewer should be extended as far as the proposed paving. He also finds that there is insufficient drainage in existing storm sewers to take care of surface water on this part of main street where paving is proposed.

Mayor Stille requests that Mr Murray determine if "Farm to Market" funds would be available to assist in financing additional construction for storm sewers.

Minutes of previous meeting read and approved.

Mayor Stille calls for report from Street and Alley Committee on proposed purchase of one-half acre of land from Clarence Neuberger to be used for Town dumping purposes. Committee has no report to file.

Motion by Etchen, seconded by Sherwood, that A. R. Arnold be appointed Town Clerk to fill vacancy existing by reason of the resignation of A. J. Kudje, motion carried.

YES . . . Reddy Kilowatt, your dependable electric servant, is ready to play nursemaid to your new-born pigs again this Spring. Heat from an R-40 Mazda Heat Lamp reduces chilling and keeps baby pigs from crowding during their first hours. Successful Iowa Hog Raisers have already proved that electric brooders, built around an R-40 Infra-Red Heat Lamp, reduce baby pig losses as much as 50%. Electric Brooding requires little special equipment. You can have Reddy on the job in your brooding houses in a few minutes. This is just another of the many ways you can farm electrically — and enjoy the extra profits

YOU CAN MAKE A BROODER YOURSELF—IT'S EASY!

Provide protection for the pigs. Brooder may be boards or rail nailed across the corner of the pen, or a hover with a top. Hovers give extra protection from drafts, and help save body heat. Place the R-40 Mazda Heat Lamp in position 24 inches above the floor, where it will do the most good . . . out of reach of the sow. Remember, these lamps heat by radiant energy. They do not necessarily heat the air of the house.

Anna Ausborne had charge of the Bingo game and also gave some prizes to the winners.

Our club sent $1.00 to the March of Dimes. Jenny Nelson heard from our Holland family that they received our Christmas box and were enjoying the gifts we sent them.

Nettie Roths joined our club. We had a follow up lesson on "Setting the Table for a Buffet Luncheon." A lovely lunch was served by Lily Pearson and Luella Boelman as co-hostess. Dorothy Helps helped with the serving as she is one of the leaders.

The March meeting will be at the home of Anna Ausborne on Wednesday, March 9th with Mildred Gruis as co-hostess.

FOODS WITH A FESTIVE AIR

Candy hearts and whipped cream make the common custard a special dessert for everyday or holidays. No matter how simple the food, it can always be made to look festive, say food specialists.

Fancy Custards

Perhaps the easiest of desserts to make, and one which is healthful too, is the familiar custard Baked or cooked, it can be served up in many variations

Or try its nearest relative, cornstarch pudding, with the same sort of variations.

Custards, according to Margaret Kagarice, extension foods specialist, Iowa State College, like to cook at low, slow temperatures. Otherwise they are apt to curdle.

For a baked custard use: 2 cups milk (scalded). 2 eggs, 3 to 4 tablespoons of sugar, ¼ teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon vanilla.

Beat the eggs slightly until the whites are liquid, not foamy Add the sugar and salt and stir until the sugar is dissolved. Add the scalded milk, mixing well with egg and sugar. Then add the flavoring.

Bake in a baking dish or individual baking cups set in a pan with hot (not boiling) water up to the level of the custard in the baking dishes Bake in the oven at 325 degrees F. until an inserted knife comes out clean Remove immediately from the pan of water and cool quickly.

For variations add fresh, dried, or drained, canned fruit to the custard before baking; or add grapenuts, chopped nuts, coconut, or dried cake crumbs. Different sweetenings may be used such as brown sugar, honey, maple or caramel sirup, or varied flavoring such as nutmeg, cinnamon, maple or chocolate Or merely unfold the custard and serve it with chocolate sauce, a fruit sauce or fresh fruit in season.

Use the same receipe for making cooked or soft custard This time use your double boiler and be sure to stir the custard constantly. Keep the water in the bottom of the double boiler hot, not boiling, or the mixture will curdle. The custard is done when it coats a silver spoon.

Take it off the cooking unit immediately and pour into a cold dish This stops the cooking. Custard made this way will be softer than the baked

Serve it as is with garnishes of candy hearts, whipped cream or cut fruit. Or pour the sauce over crushed fruits or berries or simple cake

Puddings

If you make pudding with a custard base, follow the regular rules for custards. If you use cornstarch or flour for the thickening, make a smooth paste with starch and sugar or cold liquid before you add it to the heated milk This will prevent lumping. Cook the pudding 15 to 20 minutes to give a cooked starch flavor. Stir it constantly while thickening.

A good recipe calls for: 3 tablespoons cornstarch, ¼ cup sugar, ¼ cup cold water, 2 cups milk, 2 eggs, and 1 teaspoon vanilla. Mix the cornstarch, sugar and cold water. Add to the scalded milk, stir until thickened. Continue cooking for 15 to 20 minutes. Fold in beaten eggs or egg whites and flavoring. Chill in molds rinsed with cold water. Unmold and serve with cream, or a fruit or chocolate sauce.

Hawaii, Chain of Islands, Extends for 1,500 Miles

Many mainlanders visualize Hawaii as one island, forgetting momemtarily their Pacific geography As a matter of fact, the Hawaiian archipelago is a cluster of islands The entire chain extends 1,500 miles diagonally across the Pacific, from tiny Ocean Island on the northwest to the Isalnd of Hawaii on the southeast; but the eight islands of the main group are encompassed in a distance of 400 miles, with a combined land area of about 6,400 miles.

Semi-tropical, the islands lie just below the northern limits of the Tropic of Cancer. The five principal islands of scenic interest to the visitor are Oahu (site of Honolulu), Kauai, Maui, Hawaii and Molokai.

All different, these five islands present a variety of attractions unparalled in the world. All have been highly developed, especially agriculturally. Comfortable resorts and good roads have brought many unspoiled beauty spots within convenient range of visitors in the last few years.

Oahu's points of interest are by no means limited to Honolulu, although city and suburbs alone hold varied attractions

Carbon Monoxide Liberation

It is not always easy to tell when an appliance is liberating carbon monoxide through incomplete combustion, but certain things may well be regarded as warnings. Any odor (which does not come from grease, varnish or other material about the flame to which the odor can be definitely ascribed) is a cause for suspicion Of course, carbon monoxide has no odor; but when any odorous substance is liberated from the flame it is pretty safe to assume that carbon monoxide is liberated, too. The usual odor accompanying the liberation of carbon monoxide is slightly irritating to the membranes of the nose but is not particularly unpleasant when not too strong Many people will identify the odor at once as that given off by a plumber's or tinner's gasoline torch. It has no resemblance to the odor of the unburned gas. Unfortunately the absence of any odor is not a positive indication that carbon monoxide is not being liberated, even in dangerous quantity.

OFFERS TIPS FOR BETTER DAIRYING

County Extension Director Paul Henderson has 10 tips for better milking that he believes will make high quality milk production and increased profits a reality as well as a goal for Hancock County Dairymen.

Developed by the dairy husbandry section of the Agricultural Extension Service of Iowa State College, the 10 points are also designed to prevent losses from mastitis and to cut down the time required for milking.

First of all, break the heifers in properly, advises Henderson. Give them special care so that they do not associate unpleasant treatment with milking. Along the same line, avoid the unusual at milking time. Cows are excited easily and barking dogs, strangers or rough treatment will result in less milk.

A third point is to follow a regular milking routine. Milk at the same time each day and milk the easy milkers first. Prepare the next cow to be milked one minute before putting the milker on her. Washing and massaging the udder is important from two standpoints. Besides cleaning the udder, it stimulates the let-down of milk.

Clean, sterile equipment is one of the factors Henderson puts on the list in high quality milk production and also in control of mastitus. Use of the strip cup helps detect cows that are giving abnormal milk. Milk two or three streams from each quarter and milk cows that are giving ropy or flaky milk last.

Most cows can be milked in three or four minutes, the county extension director points out. Rapid milking steps up production and cuts chore time. Too, labor can be saved by stripping by machine. Machine stripping is best accomplished by pulling down on the teat cups with one hand and massaging the udder with the other.

Another point to watch is removing the machine promptly when the milk flow stops Prolonged machine action may injure the udder and be a contributing factor to mastitus infection, Henderson warns. He also advocates operating the machine according to the manufacturer's instructions. Increasing the vacuum or changing the pulsation rate from that recommended by the manufacturer may result in lower milk production.

FOSTER MOTHER

When a calf at the Woltz sale pavilion in Jefferson got hungry, it found a suitable foster mother in a brood mare whose colt had just been sold. Attendents found the calf enjoying a free lunch the morning after the sale.

Nobody Complains - - -

about spending money for the things he can see and fell. At any future time he can see these things and the job they are doing and usually be satisfied. Labor, whether it is farm help or the labor we pay for to get something fixed, can be an entirely different matter.

This reminds me of a time I was repairing a tractor. I was pretty well down into the innards of the thing and about to dig out about twenty pounds of old grease and putrid soy beans mixed The owner was standing over me and complaining about the ten dollar bill this job was goin to cost him I graciously invited him to grab the wrenches, take over, and save himself a ten spot. He turned me down cold. I wonder why.

Treat, Clean Oats And Flaxseed This Winter

Treat and clean oats and flaxseed this winter instead of waiting until spring when the rush of spring work is on, is the recommendation of C. S. Reddy, extension plant pathologist at Iowa State College.

He says that many Iowa farmers may find they can't get out of their yards or the roads may be soft if they wait until spring Too, every delay in sowing oats and flax will cut yields

Reddy says that treating is just as effective if done now as it is if done a few weeks ahead of planting time. In fact, he points out that treatment is not effective if made less than 24 hours before sowing oats or less than 48 hours before sowing flax

The Joe Louis Angels

AFTER ALL the hullabaloo, back and forth, a number of noncombatants are wondering just what Joe Louis plans to do about his title and his return to action.

Here are some of the angles they are discussing here on the West coast:

1. LOUIS has no intention of returning to the prize fight ring. He is using this talk to help his exhibition trip where he has been knocking over from $10,000 to $15,000 for each show. This is the easiest money anyone can make, using 14 and 16-ounce gloves.

Grantland Rice

2. LOUIS has no one to fight except Ezzard Charles who doesn't want to fight Louis. Besides, the 175-pound Charles would make Louis look like an elephant chasing a rabbit or a whippet. It wouldn't be a contest. It wouldn't draw $300,000.

3. HERE IS the situation as it is today—Louis is through and there is no challenger to meet him. The heavyweight division today is at its lowest ebb in ring history.

4. (MINORITY OPINION) Louis is a professional fighter. That's his trade. Why shouldn't he pick up from $200 000 to $300,000 meeting some pushover?

These are a few of the angles I've gathered recently, from such boxing men as Jack Dempsey and Abe Roth, the referee, on down the line.

Louis is in a spot where he can get no credit for beating any of the heavyweights now gumming up the scenery. On the other hand, to be beaten by one of these alleged prize fighters would leave a large blot on his so-called escutcheon. The theme song with thousands is: "It isn't what you used to be—it's what you are today."

Any outsider advising Louis what to do is wasting his time. Louis will either do what he wants or what Mike Jacobs wants. Louis hates to pass up what looks to be the softest touch any champion ever faced. Mike can always use more money, no matter how much he has stuffed away through the years.

As things look now, the Bomber probably would be the slowest-moving champion that ever defended a heavyweight title if he went to post again in June. His opponent will have to be a fairly sour specimen to lose.

Jim Jeffries

The old boy with the scythe can travel in a hurry. It hardly seems possible that 50 years have passed since young Jim Jeffries knocked out Bob Fitzsimmons.

This was Big Jim's 11th fight. He had been Jim Corbett's sparring partner before Corbett's fight with Fitzsimmons at Carson City. And there are still vague rumors that Jeffries gave Corbett a heavy beating before Jim lost to Fitz, via the famous solar plexus route.

Sullivan, Corbett, Fitz and Jack Johnson have put on their traveler's cloaks and moved on beyond. But Big Jim is still here with us, hale and a trifle hearty after a bad paralysis jolt a year or two ago.

Fifty years after he knocked out Fitzsimmons, Jeffries, now in his 70's, is as bald as two doorknobs, but still a powerful looking citizen

When I first met Jeffries, back around 1902 or 1903, he could high jump six feet and run the 100 in about 10 seconds flat. He then weighed 212 pounds and he was as light on his feet as a featherweight

"In some way," Jim Corbett told me later, "Jeff has become a better boxer than I ever was. And nobody can ever hurt him, not even with an axe."

Fitz broke almost every bone in both hands slugging Jeff in their second fight, without even jarring him "I might as well have slugged a bloody hydrant," Fitz told friends after the fight.

Jim Jeffries, around 1902 and 1903, was a great a fighter as the game has ever known. He could hit you and hurt you—and no one could hurt him.

I saw him in 1910 training for the coming Jack Johnson party. He weighed over 270 and he was bald, fat and slow. He had been out of action for seven or eight years. The Jeffries of 1902 or 1903 would have murdered Johnson. The Jeffries of 1910 was a pushover for anyone who could breathe and move around.

They still talk about Dempsey and Louis. I often wonder how either would have looked against the Jeffries that used to be. You wonder what shape their fists would have been in after a few rounds.

There has been a long gap since the days Jim Jeffries was so good he had to retire. It was a joke to mention anyone having a ghost of a chance against him. He dominated his field more than Dempsey ever did—more than Joe Louis ever did.

MIRROR of your MIND ● ● ● Long Engagements

By Lawrence Gould

Does a long engagement make for happy marriage?

Answer: Only with exceptionally "repressed" people who have inhibitions that take a long time to break down, if they ever do so. With the average man and woman the desire for closer intimacy grows stronger and stronger, and if it is thwarted too long, they tend to associate each other with frustration rather than the hope of happiness their love was based on And then, when or if they do get married, this association may remain and poison their relationship by leaving them still resentful and suspicious of each other

Is a chronic vagabond neurotic?

Answer: No, says Dr. Jose Belbey of the University of Buenos Aires. "Wanderers" are of two distinct types: those who run away from home to escape an immediate emotional crisis, including the victims of amnesia, and those who are constitutionally unwilling to accept responsibility or be "tied down" by a permanent relationship with anyone else. The first type require psychiatric treatment, while the second should, he thinks, be recognized as anti-social and compelled to do their fair share of the work of the community they live in.

Can the best of friends be "outgrown"?

Answer: Yes, and this need not mean either one is more mature than the other—only that they have developed along different lines. For a healthy-minded person changes; he acquires new tastes and interests, and since common interests are what friendship rests on, you need not feel that you are disloyal if you find that you no longer get much satisfaction out of being with the people who meant most to you a few years ago. Violent breaks are seldom necessary, but it's better to accept facts than hang onto something that is "over."

Chronic Invalids on Increase

By Dr. James W. Barton

WHILE it is gratifying to know that the life span has been lengthened from 49 to 66 years since 1900, this means that the percentage of elderly people in the world is greater than ever before. Although they are living longer, it is only natural that they will not be as well and strong at 60 to 80 as they were when younger — hence, the greater number of invalids today than ever before.

The death rates from acute infections, abnormality of glands, lack of proper foods including vitamins and minerals are falling and many patients afflicted with cancer now are being cured because the cancer is discovered and removed early.

In the Journal of the American Medical Association, Dr. Edward L. Bortz, Cleveland, president, states that the patient with chronic illness is one of the major challenges to modern society. In 1900 chronic disease was the cause of 26 per cent of the deaths that occurred in New York state; today it is the cause 70 per cent of the deaths there.

A point stressed is that although people live longer, chronic illness does not have to be present as we grow older Many persons have a vigorous and enjoyable old age, free of prolonged illness.

What are the chronic illnesses that cause pain, unhappiness and fear?

Heart diseases; diseases of the blood vessels (apoplexy); rheumatism and arthritis; advanced cancer; mental diseases; tuberculosis; diabetes; stomach and intestinal diseases.

Heart disease stands first as a cause of death and disablement, and arthritis and rheumatism stand second on the list of the most common disabling afflictions.

The major industries and school systems of the nation, in collaboration with medical authorities, should create a program for positive health which, among other benefits, should be able to uncover diseases in their earliest stages at which time their removal or cure is possible.

★ HEALTH NOTES ★

Nutrition experts have found that the body does not use as many of the proteins of vegetables as it does of the animal proteins—mostly because the real tissue-builder of proteins is the amino acids, found in great quantities in animal proteins. This acid contains vitamin B, which now is considered the chief vitamin in building muscle-tissue, nerve-tissue and iron in the blood.

Electric surgery is used for other operations besides removing tonsils. This method involves using a high frequency current instead of a knife and scissors; it destroys the tissues by removing all their fluids. This removes all malignant cells such as cancer cells or other suspected malignant structures to prevent the carrying of malignant cells into the system.

For Joyful Cough Relief, Try This Home Mixture

This splendid recipe is used by millions every year, because it makes such a dependable, effective medicine for coughs due to colds. It is so easy to mix—a child could do it.

From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex, a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its soothing effect on throat and bronchial irritations.

Then make a syrup by stirring two cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. No cooking needed. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Put the Pinex into a pint bottle and fill up with your syrup. This gives you a full pint of cough medicine, very effective and quick-acting, and you get about four times as much for your money. It never spoils, and is very pleasant—children love it.

You'll be surprised by the way it takes hold of coughs, giving quick relief. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear the air passages. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

BOND ISSUE UP TO VOTERS

Annual School Election Will Be Held Next Monday

The annual school election will be held next Monday March 14th from 12 00 noon until 7:00 p. m. at the Community Hall for the purpose of electing two directors, a treasurer and to vote on a $15,,000 bond issue with which to repair the school house.

Dr. A. H. Dulmes and Glen Terhufen are the candidates for directors for the three year term and A. R. Arnold is candidate for Treasurer There are no other candidates filed.

The Bond issue is of great importance and voters should get out and express their wishes in the matter. Some of the walls of the school are in bad shape and it seems that there is no other course open except to vote "Yes" for the bonds. This is a MUST proposition and whether we like it or not, the school must be repaired To delay action will only run into a greater repair bill later.

Relatives Of Klemme People Died At Oskaloosa

—By Mabel Ridder

It may be of interest to the former acquaintences and friends of Mrs. C. E. McGrew. the former Mrs. John Suckow, to learn of her death which occured on February 27 at the Oskaloosa Hospital. The funeral was held at Searshow, Iowa on Tuesday, March 1st.

Mr. John Suckow, who passed away in 1903, was a former teacher in the Klemme Schools and was the Supt. of the school at the time the first school house burned down.

After Mr. Suckows death Mrs. Suckow returned with her two daughters to Centerville, Iowa. There she supported her family by working as a paper hanger and as bookkeeper in the bank. In 1923 she was married to C. E. McGrew, who was a farmer near Unionville. Mr. McGrew, a widower, also had two daughters who she helped raise as her own children. They continued to reside on the farm until this past November when they moved to a home they had purchased in Searshow, Iowa. She became bedfast a week after moving to her new home and remained so until her death. Never being able to enjoy the home so recently purchased.

PARITY DOES NOT TELL HOW FARMER FARES

The agriculture department said Monday that its legal yardstick for measuring how well farmers are doing, compared with city folks, isn't much good

That yardstick showed that per capita farm income last year was 60 per cent above "parity." But, the department said, that doesn't mean the farmer is 60 per cent better off, or even better off than the non-farmer. It simply means that his income is that much better than in 1910-1914—the base period on which parity is computed. But, the department said, it doesn't give a true comparison of farms and non-farm living standards.

Congress in 1938 ruled that farm and non-farm income are at "parity" when they are in the same ratio as prevailed during 1910-14. In 1910-14, the department said, farmers got 28 cents for each dollar received by non-farms. Last year farm folks on an average got 58 cents for every dollar received by non-farmers.

It is "generally acceped" that partiy—under the present definition—isn't enough to provide a standard of living equivalent to that of non-farm people, the department said.

Congress last year redefined parity income as follows: "That gross income from agriculture which will provide the farm operator and his family with a standard of living equivalent to those afforded persons dependent upon other gainful occupations."

YELLOW OLEO VS. BUTTER

BUTTER SUBSTITUTES HAVE ALWAYS SPREAD FRAUD AND DECEPTION

The major federal curb on butterlegging has been exercised in the past through the power to tax oleomargarine.

Congress imposes a federal tax of 10 cents a pound on yellow oleomargarine. A federal tax of one-quarter of one cent a pound is also imposed upon uncolored oleomargarine to insure that the manufacture and sale are properly reported. License fees are required of retailers and wholesalers. The receipts go to the Internal Revenue Department to pay the costs of policing the oleomargarine industry.

This control method dates back to the time of President Grover Cleveland. Following the invention of a French process "to obtain butter" from beef tallow or oleo fat in 1870, fraud in the sale of this substance became widespread. By 1870 the states of New Yory, Pennsylvania, Delaware and New Jersey had passed laws against the product to protect the public from racketeers. In 1886 the Congress recognized that control by states was ineffective, and enacted the first oleomargarine act.

In signing this act, President Cleveland stated:

"If the existence of the commodity and the profits of its manufacture and sale depend on disposing of it to the people for something else which it deceitfully imitates, the entire enterprise is a fraud and not an industry; and if it cannot endure the exhibition of its real character which will be affected by the inspection, supervision and stamping which this bill directs, the sooner it is destroyed the better, in the interests of fair dealing."

Then as now, oleomargarine could not be passed off as butter unless it was colored yellow by artificial means. A mixture of cottonseed oil and sulphur was used for this purpose. Now a dye must be applied after the product has been bleached to remove unpleasant colors, tastes and odors. It is impossible to make a naturally yellow margarine from domestic cottonseed and soybean oils, according to the Armour Research Foundation of the Illinois Institute of Technology.

Fraud and deception for the consumer—and, disaster for the dairy farmer—are again threatened by the unrestricted sale of oleomargarine artificially colored yellow at the factory in semblance of butter.

TWO COMPLETE TICKETS FILED FOR TOWN ELECTION MON., MARCH 28

WHAT IS A SATISFACTORY SCHOOL UNIT?

(Chas. Whitney, Co. Supt.)

A desirable school unit, for administrative purposes, must have enough pupils so as to provide, rich, flexible, comprehensive program for each of them time they start to school until they complete a least the 12th grade, and enough wealth so as to be able to support that program at a reasonable cost to the taxpayers.

It has long been recognized that secondary schools must draw pupils from a larger area than elementary schools in order to get enough pupils together to provide an educational program for each of them. Conquently, it would seem only reasonable that the unit for school administration should include at least one good senior high school, one or more junior high schools and several elementary schools. This is the pattern in the cities and it would seem only feasible that such could be the case in rural Iowa. Under this form of organization, the people of the territory participate in formulation of educational policies and the control of the schools through a board of education chosen from this entire territory, while their children are permitted to attend school in buildings located near their homes. The schools in such an area would not only be under one board but would have one superintendent of schools, one supervisory staff, teachers with the same qualifications, same type of offerings in each of the schools and one tax base. Only in recent years has this concept of organization received much consideration.

It is often mistakenly assumed that in order to reorganize school districts all the children must be moved under one roof. Because of this confusion the following definition of an administrative unit and an attendance area are given:

"An attendance area comprises the geographical area served by a single school."

"An administrative unit comprises all the area under a single system of administration and should be composed of more than one attendance or school area and will constitute the local taxing unit."

Attendance areas are consequently quite flexible but the schools for elementary as well as junior and senior high school should be located so that enough pupils can be brought together to provide a good educational program for them on that grade level. For example, where conditions permit, enough elementary pupils should be brought together so as to have one grade per teacher with 25 to 30 pupils per grade.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Congress Gets Control Proposals Which Would Curb Wages, Prices; Doctors Offer Public Health Plan

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

CONTROLS:

Needed or Not?

The administration at Washington has made its move for price and wage controls.

It has asked congress to place ceilings on prices which threaten to go above last December's level. It also has proposed creation of a six-man board to regulate wage increases.

Already, however, it was becoming increasingly clear to the people that constantly shifting factors are changing so swiftly that some of the major points in the administration's legislative program may become obselete before they are called for consideration.

FOR INSTANCE, the downward trend in prices would indicate that a proposal for price control, except in some few isolated cases, might even appear ridiculous. Consequently, continuing decline in prices would naturally knock out any validity of wage hike demands.

The sincerity of the administration is this respect might be open to question, but not seriously so. Practical politicians and people who realize the need for application of politics in government procedures will understand that whether the government actually wants what it asks is somewhat beside the point.

The real point is that these measures were pledged by President Truman in his campaign, and it was as early as inauguration day that administration leaders stated publicly they meant to implement campaign pledges in every way. Now the administration is going through the motions of seeking to have adopted all the legislation the President promised the voters when he was a candidate for the office.

A QUICK RUN-DOWN of the administration's legislative-potential will show that civil rights, tax increases, outright repeal of the Taft-Hartley law and socialized medicine, all admittedly needing some treatment, are in for a rough time in congress.

That being the case, it is difficult to understand how Mr. Truman and his advisers could make price and wage controls stick should there be no apparent need for either.

PUBLIC HEALTH:

Physicians' Plan

There would be discussion of motive, of course, but whether actuated by the belief that socialized medicine was an undesirable alternative, or by a sincere desire to widen their field of service, America's physicians had come up with a plan.

OBVIOUSLY, the plan was a counter move in the developing battle over socialized medicine, and in it one could see some concession to the bureaucratic ambitions which, it is claimed, motivates the socialized medicine effort.

First, the doctors through their American Medical association's board of trustees, urge creation of a federal department of health, with cabinet status, which would be authorized to promote the general welfare by aiding and fostering programs in the field of health. This department also would contribute to individual, family and community well-being.

Briefly, the program would include:

PROMPT DEVELOPMENT of diagnostic facilities; health centers and local public health units; health centers and hospital services; comprehensive health education programs; integration of veterans' medical care and hospitalization with other medical care and hospital programs; greater emphasis on the program of industrial medicine, and adequate support, with funds free from political control, of the medical, dental and nursing schools and other institutions necessary for the training of specialized personnel required in the provision and distribution of medical care.

In its scope the doctors' program read like Mr. Truman's "bold new program" for betterment of world living. But its very generalities and extent might be the factors to doom it.

With immediate medical care the greatest need of too many Americans unable to pay for it, the panacea would have to be immediate and visual. Examined, even close up, the doctor's plan appeared to offer little toward the solution of the issue of socialized medicine.

DEFENSE PACT:

Gilded Lily

There were puzzling things going on in Washington as the proposed north Atlantic security pact came up for discussion.

As any schoolboy knows, only congress can declare war. Yet Senator Vandenburg of the foreign affairs committee was quoted as saying that if any pact were drawn he expected such a pact to "reserve to congress the complete right of decision" on what to do about an armed attack.

THAT STATEMENT of Vandenberg's amounted to nothing more than a thick coat of gilt on the lily. The pact could do no less than "reserve" such decision, because the constitution of the United States is quite clear as to what governmental body in the United States has the authority to declare war. The constitution does not relegate that power to a senate committee or to the state department.

The point is made only to highlight the trend of official thinking in federal circles. Despite the constitutional provision, Senator Vandenberg and apparently those who draft the pact, are "willing" to let congress make any decision on going to war.

There were other puzzling factors connected with the pact. Both Senator Vandenburg and Senator Connally declared that signing the pact would not commit this nation to war in the event another pact signatory were attacked.

IF THAT were the situation, the critical queried, what would be the use of the pact?

The senators had an answer for that one—an answer reminiscent of American thinking before Pearl Harbor. They pointed out that, as Vandenburg put it, "In my opinion the mere formal recognition of this community of interest in the event of an armed attack on the Atlantic community—without another word in the treaty—would be an infinite assurance against World War III."

What the senator was intimating in effect was that with the United States a signatory to the pact, any nation would be afraid to jump either on the U. S. or another member.

THE SENATOR'S MEMORY seemed to be waning. Japan wasn't "afraid" to attack Pearl Harbor. That was World War II. Germany wasn't "afraid" to sink the Lusitania. That was World War I. The "fear" bulwark hadn't done so well on two occasions.

Did Senator Vandenburg have some special information, or intuition, that it would work better to prevent World War III?

LONGEVITY:

The Hard Way

So you'd like to live to be 102?

There's a way—but it will appeal only to the rugged.

A Westerfield, N. J. woman has passed the century mark with vitality still good, interest in things about her still unimpaired.

OF HER 102nd birthday party she said:

"It was a most wonderful party. I felt just like I was walking on air. The house looked like a greenery. All those flowers and even an orchid. It was wonderful."

About reaching 102 . . . well, the lady who did it, Mrs. Katherine G. Lyon, said she was in favor of exercise and fresh air.

"It's all a matter of chewing your food properly, and getting plenty of fresh air. Anyone who is 102 years old and can't walk at least two miles ought to go to a doctor and find out what's the matter with them . . . I'm always ready to go."

Mrs. Lyon did not stipulate that walking two miles a day was the entire answer.

TRENDS:

Dictatorial

The gentleman who was talking knew whereof he spoke. When he began to express himself on dictatorships, the public might listen respectfully for he had but lately concluded an assignment to put down one of the most vicious dictatorships the world had ever seen.

But he wasn't talking of foreign dictatorships. Instead, he was warning the Columbia college forum on democracy that dictatorship was an actual possibility right here in the United States.

THE SPEAKER was Gen. Dwight D. "Ike" Eisenhower, who was supreme commander of allied forces in the war against the dictatorships—World War II.

Discussing the supposition that this nation was in danger of falling into the hands of a dictatorship without a shot being fired, Eisenhower said he was not talking about the usual type of seizure of power by force.

He was talking, he said, about a gradual dictatorship of bureaucracy which could result from the "constant drift toward centralized government."

"There is a kind of dictatorship," he said, "that can come about through a creeping paralysis of thought and readiness to accept paternalistic measures from the government, along with a surrender of our own responsibilities and, therefore, of our control over our own lives and our right to exercise our vote.

"IF WE ALLOW this drift toward centralized bureaucratic government to continue, finally it will be expressed . . . in the actual field of operation.

"There'll be a swarming of bureaucrats over the land, ownership of property will gradually drift into that central government, and finally you have to have dictatorship as the only means of operating such a huge organization."

When a man of General Ike's stature is publicly concerned over the probability of a dictatorship in the U. S., benign or otherwise, it seems it were time the public, too, should begin to look into the situation.

MYSTERY:

Biggest Run

As one southern reporter described it, it was the "biggest run in the South's history."

One moment everything was all right. The next, disaster had struck.

It happened in Jacksonville, Fla., and there was no warning of its coming. Women and girls arose in the morning, donned attractive, sheer nylon stockings and started about their business.

Then, the nylons simply started coming apart. Working girls went bare-legged to lunch, carrying their stockings—or what was left of them—in their purses.

A horrible possibility failed to materialize—the girls were spared disintegration of their nylon underwear; but there were many anxious moments as they watched the nylon stockings disintegrate on their legs.

The health department advanced a theory that incompletely-burned particles of soot carried a gas which caused the stockings to come apart.

At Wilmington, Del., a technical engineer for a nylon manufacturer said it's happened before in Washington, Chicago, Nashville and Minneapolis.

He explained that the trouble was acid-bearing soot. These tiny particles, he said, even from ordinary coal fires, contain sulphur dioxide, sulphur trioxide and other acids. When they land on a coat or hat, the concentrate may destroy a thread, but you don't notice it.

But when they land on a stocking thread—zip! And there's a story to make the nation's headlines.

METALS:

Stronger

For those who use metals, there was good news. Dr. J. H. Holloman, General Electric research laboratory scientist, reported that metals eventually can be made from five to 10 times stronger.

Metals are made up of tiny grains. A break always begins at a high temperature with microscopic cracks along the boundaries. It is prevention of these cracks that will strengthen the metal.

GOP Tries to Face Facts: Changes Are Sure to Come

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WASHINGTON—I don't want to get into semantics but I have to say something about the word "conservative", purely as a word, if I am going to discuss some of the undersurface terms in Washington recently.

If it is fair to define a conservative as a person who has something to conserve, and I think the American people are naturally conservative in that sense, when you take away that something, Americans will join the radicals or anybody else to win back what was taken away.

The majority of the people don't want a free lunch. They just want a chance to earn enough to pay for their own lunch. But if they can't get lunch any other way, they'll take it how and where they can get it. That is a lesson which certain conservatives (in the political sense) are learning slowly.

BAUKHAGE

Last month Tom Dewey returned from his political grave to say at a Republican Lincoln Day dinner that if the GOP tried to go back to the 20's, it would become the "deadest pigeon in the country."

The burden of his theme was that the party was split wide apart and it had better get together, slough off one extreme element which wants to "turn the clock back" and the other extremists who want to "outpromise the Democrats." He demanded that the party stand for "social progress under a flourishing system of private enterprise where every human right is expanded." Those opposed to "liberal and progressive policies" should get out of the party.

Here again we run into semantics—what is "progressive," what is "liberal"—for that matter, what is Sylvia? To one an owl, to another a nightingale. To the pinks, a "liberal" is a reactionary. To the conservative a "liberal" is a red

Dewey said that the Republican party (or the party as he sees it) believes in "unemployment insurance, old age assistance on an increased basis, in broader social security generally, in slum clearance, in public development of our water resources, in farm price supports, in vigorous protection of the rights of labor."

And he seems to recognize that all of us, Republicans included, will have to take certain things for granted. Certain social and political changes which we may not like any more than our grandfathers liked a lot of "new-fangled" ideas they met with, like the safety razor, say.

The federal reserve board, the income tax, women's suffrage—all were once considered little less than the instruments of the devil himself by a lot of people who never think twice about them now. What policy the federal reserve board follows is debatable by either political party, but nobody would be fool enough to try to eliminate the board as an institution. Both parties claim they invented it.

The size of the income tax, and how it's distributed is also a matter to be settled by the party in power, but I can't quite see anybody trying to eliminate income taxes entirely. Other matters like the principles of government regulation of interstate commerce, of old age and unemployemnt insurance and dozens of other activities seem to be here for good.

If I am a Red for saying that, you can measure me for a suit of long underwear to match, tuck me into the one-hoss-shay and send me home.

As a matter of fact I am really pretty much of a moss-back. Although I'd trade in my used airplane for a rocket, if anybody has a surrey with the fringe on top and I had a place to park it, that's what I'd really prefer.

Mention of Taft Evokes Criticism

One can't discuss the Republican party without mentioning Mr. Taft. And whenever I say anything good on the air about Sen. Robert A. Taft, I get letters like the following from a man in Lakewood, New York (I had in the same broadcast described a truck-driver who nearly ran over me):

"I can see a picture of you," he writes, "looking down your long nose at that truck driver and believe me, I know just exactly how you felt towards him. However, I wonder which is the most dangerous, an idiot with a truck or an idiot with a vast radio audience.

"You see, I look down my long nose at you just as you did the truck driver and I have the advantage of having heard a few thousand of your broadcasts Through this medium I have explored your brain and believe me I find not much there. Your speaking of the truck driver as well as Taft's intelligence is a fair measure of your own . . ."

This was my answer:

"Dear Sir: I have your letter saying that you wonder which is the most dangerous, the truck driver I referred to or an idiot with a vast radio audience—and also that you have heard me a few thousand times. I am glad to note we have so much in common."

My reference to Taft which so infuriated the letter-writer was in connection with an implication that Senator Taft IS the Republican party in the Senate as it exists today. This situation may change, though there are no present indications it will. Taft rides the elephant, regardless of who happens to play the calliope.

And paradoxically enough, it will be Senator Taft, the strongest figure in the senate, arch-Republican, symbol of reaction to his enemies, who probably will be a powerful factor in the enactment of more than one of the so called "social-service" laws which are a vital part of the administration program. Housing and federal aid to education are two measures which might be named. And although the Taft-Hartley act will have a new name, the imprint of its senatorial sponsor will not be entirely eradicated from its structure when it comes out of the hopper.

Taft was able to drag out the labor bill hearings for two weeks longer than was originally planned, and I would not be surprised if these lines appear in print before his gently-led filibuster against the repeal is over, or at least long over. But that does not mean Taft or his party controls the senate

As this was written a theory was abroad that the Republican strategy had developed to the point where, if the party would keep its "young Turks" in line—the so-called liberal Republican senators who tried and so dismally failed to curb Taft's power—they could count on enough votes of the southern senators on most controversial issues (unless these issues step on the toes of southern tradition) to wrest control from the Democrats.

In fact, the expounders of this theory were only a little while ago pointing to defeat of the bill to exempt the tax on the inauguration as proof that the fate of the Democrats in the senate was a pretty dark one. They explained it was symptomatic when 41 Rebublicans voted against the measure, and found to their surprise and pleasure that they were able to get six Democrats to join them, thus providing a majority and defeating the measure.

That made things look very simple. But there is another side to that story. That vote backfired and hurt the Republicans more than it helped. It did more than a little to create Democratic solidarity, and the really deep-dishers on Capitol Hill are predicting that the Democrats are going to achieve enough unanimity from now on to maintain their majority on major issues.

There will be, of course, matters where members of both parties will desert because the issue involved is such that the particular state or area from which the senator comes has an interest which conflicts with the majority of his party.

There will be some issues in which Democrats will join Republicans as well as vice versa. And, as I said earlier, there are some things that don't appear on the surface.

The burden of the attack against the Democrats, whether you call them New Dealers, Fair Dealers, or Trumanites, is that they seek government control of business.

Now I believe most Republican leaders have the brains to admit (and if they haven't they can expect to be defeated, just as the liberals and conservatives were beaten in England), that the best way to kill government control—the antithesis of free enterprise because it is government monopoly—is to kill private monopoly. The latter is a two-edged sword against free enterprise. First, private monopoly kills competition. Second, it opens the way to government ownership.

Today the intelligent leaders of the GOP have to admit what I am sure they believe at heart, namely, that they will have to let the federal government do certain things for the people, if private enterprise can't or won't do those things Taft as well as the young Turks, know that. They also know that private monopoly breeds state control.

Baseball Outlook

ALMOST 21 MILLION spectators paid to enter, big league ball parks last year. What will 1949 offer? An increase or a drop?

Apparently, the astute athletes are not looking for any increase and they seem to be shy about equaling the 1948 roundup. They are shying away from bonuses arranged on attendance figures You can't blame them.

The ballplayer can see a dollar or a paying fan about as far as anyone else, including the owners. He recalls the American League had a race that is not likely to be duplicated with Cleveland, Boston and New York neck and neck or nose and nose at the wire. This meant terrific business for the three top teams and also for many of their opponents.

Grantland Rice

It isn't at all improbable that some team, possibly Cleveland, will pull out several lengths in front and stay there. Or it may be the Red Sox or Yankees. But the odds are we'll have no such hell-for-leather riding down the stretch next September.

There is the chance, of course, that the Athletics may improve and the Tigers might move abruptly into a challenging position under Red Rolfe. This might make the bonus angle even better, but it isn't an even chance and the player would rather let the club owner take the gamble. As a result, over 30 ballplayers are balking at terms, especially those terms involving attendance and gate receipts.

What about the National league race? This can be closer that the American, what with the Braves, Dodgers, Cardinals, Giants, Pirates and the improved Cubs—a rather uncertain medley of scrambled talent.

At this spot, the Dodgers and the Braves have the edge, but it isn't a killing edge. Any one of five teams can win this race and most of them can also finish in the second division.

Reports of winter injuries and ailments to Carl Furillo and Rex Barney haven't helped the Dodger outlook, but the month of May is still a long way off.

But once again the earnest athlete doesn't seem to be too interested in National league attendance, especially as it might concern a 1949 contract. We think he is right. Racing is taking a 15 to 20 per cent decline and the chances are baseball will face a drop of a million or so, perhaps more.

It would be no surprise to see the total attendance slip from 21 million to 19 million this next season.

Ben Hogan

Ben Hogan had just reached the peak of a brilliant career when his accident cut him down for months to come. No other game could have suffered such a loss from the absence of one player.

Ranking Hogan as a golfer of skill and a competitor of high rank, he undoubtedly belongs on level terms with Bobby Jones, Walter Hagen and Gene Sarazen. And you can add Harry Vardon.

Outside of Vardon, he was a more accurate club-swinger than any of those just mentioned. He had fewer bad holes. Both Jones and Hagen had to depend on brilliant recoveries and marvelous putting to win their 24 championships. Gene Sarazen was a golfer of moods, of sudden inspirations and sudden depressions.

But none of this lot kept up as savage and as steady assault on par as Hogan. As great as they were, neither Bobby Jones nor Walter Hagen ever were able to average 69 strokes for all their tournaments in a year.

Hogan is as fine a swinger as golf has ever known. He has been golf's hardest worker, undoubtedly. Bobby Jones, a hard worker himself and a most determined competitor, marvelled at Hogan's intense, unbroken concentration and determination—his willingness to take a beating and keep coming back.

I have seen Ben work for an hour on just one shot—over and over and over—from 90 yeards away, from 120 yards away. His idea was to get every approach shot dead. Few know the beating he took to reach the prefection he finally gained before his accident.

Before the Los Angeles Open, Hogan had taken a rest for two months. He wanted to be at home. He was getting sick of hitting the road in long automobile trips.

"I knew I had made a mistake," he said as the Los Angeles Open started. "You can't stay away two months and be any good."

God's Signature

Lesson for March 13, 1949

IN A STRANGE city you may suddenly need to be identified. Some suspicious clerk wants to know if your signature is genuine. It is a fair challenge, for too many liars are in circulation. Jesus himself had to furnish identification. No less a person than his old friend John the Baptizer had grown uneasy. Are you the One we are looking for," he inquired, "or shall we look for some one else?" Jesus' answer to John was not to discuss the theology of the Incarnation, or anything of that sort. He just went about his usual day's work.

Dr. Foreman

In the course of that day he cured a good many sick people, and preached to some very poor people. "Now go back," he said, "go back and tell John what you have seen and heard." What those men saw that day was what Jesus at another time called the "finger of God," the genuine divine signature.

Jesus wrote no book, no letters even; he wrote in action, and his acts were the handwriting of God. It is important to see where Jesus underscored that writing. It is true, his healings were what we call miracles. But Jesus did not even mention that feature.

What he asked John to notice was simply this: the blind see, the lame walk; lepers are cured, the deaf hear, the dead are raised, and (as a climax!) the poor hear good news. The signature of God, in short, is not sheer power; it is using what power one has, to help people in trouble. That was the sort of person Jesus was.

Not By Bread Alone

THE EXPRESSION, "needy people," nowadays suggests people who haven't enough to eat or wear. Jesus helped such persons; but he knew well that men's needs go beyond well-cared-for bodies. There was the poor man from the grave yard, for example,—he was happy enough. He didn't want clothes, and he was strong enough to steal all the food he could eat. All he wanted, in fact, was to be let alone. But Jesus knew that what he needed above all was a sane mind, a mind no longer run over and trampled by a regiment of devils.

When Jesus got through with him he was clothed, but that was not the best part of it. He was in his right mind. So God's signature is not only written in a sound body, it is in the sound mind. Again, at Jericho when Jesus invited himself to dinner with that pint-sized tycoon, Zacchaeus, Jesus did not go just for the meal. He went because he knew that Zacchaeus needed something.

We do know that after dinner Zacchaeus was a changed man. He was going to give back every dishonest penny, with interest; and since he could not locate every one he had cheated, he was going to give away half of his holdings for the benefit of the poor.

What Jericho needed was a new administration, an honest one; they needed slum clearance; and Zacchaeus was going to give it to them. But first of all Zacchaeus had needed a new heart—and Jesus gave him that. Again it was the genuine signature of God.

We Too

ALL AROUND us is a troubled world. Some men, seeing it, infer there is no God. Others conclude that if there is one, he must be bad or weak. The truth is that the signature of God is not to be found in the evil and the confusion of the world. It is to be seen wherever freedom is standing against slavery, wherever truth is pushing back ignorance, where diseased bodies are being healed, where sanity replaces madness.

More people would believe in God if they could see more of the handwriting of God. Do you want to help?

We cannot always do things as simply as Jesus did. Curing the diseased is not for us a simple matter of saying, Be well. A Christian woman, distressed by what she had learned of the plight of the insane in her backward state, was asking the head of the state hospital (himself a church officer), "What can we Christians do?" "Get behind the legislature," he said.

NEW CHURCH SERVICE PROJECTS DEVELOP IN NORTHWEST IOWA

Two new service projects are being sponsored by the Methodist Churches of northwest Iowa, with the help of other interested people. "Friendship Haven," a home for retired people will be built at Fort Dodge, and two additions are to be completed at the Methodist Hospital in Sioux City.

The Friendship Haven at Fort Dodge will provide a home for 130 retired people in the first building of a series planned on a spacious grounds given for that purpose. Construction is scheduled to begin in the spring. The Home will be one of the most conveniently planned in the country, with library, chapel, infirmary, and hobby rooms in addition to well appointed private quarters.

At the Methodist Hospital in Sioux City, the Carlotta C. Chrisman Students' Residence and Training School is already in use and will accommodate 76 student nurses, making a 50 per cent increase in enrollment. A wing to be added to the Hospital will increase patient capacity to nearly two hundred and will add equipment and a labratory space for specialized medical and surgical services.

The recent Tri-Hospital Campaign in Sioux City raised much of the fund needed for this Wing Government aid and the contributions of interested people in the territory are expected to provide sufficient funds to complete it.

The goal set by the Methodist Churches for their members and other interested people is the raising of $400,000 for those two institutions. The current active fund raising period is known as "A Crusade for Health and Care," through the Methodist Hospital in Sioux City and Friendship Haven in Fort Dadge.

Solicitation is being made this week in support of the projects by the Klemme and Liberty Methodist Churches.

CUT SEEDING RATE OF CLOVER, GRASS

Legume and grass seed shortages can be overcome this spring by cutting down the rate of seeding, and this can be done without sacrificing the stand, suggests H. D. Hughes of Iowa State College.

By proper practices. the seeding rate of legume and grass seed can be reduced to at least a fourth with satisfactory results, Hughes says.

He recommends sowing oats light if used as a nurse crop. Reducing the rate of seeding to 2 bushels or even 1½ bushels per acre will result in a few less bushels of oats harvested, but this will go a long way toward insuring the success of the new legume or grass seeding.

Use Cultipacker

Firming the soil about the seed and insuring proper depth of planting probably contributes more to a good stand than any other single factor. To do this Hughes recommends using a cultipacker or corrugated roller. "If the seed is broadcast and the surface rolled with a cultipacker, the best results possible can be expected," he says. Much clover and grass seed is covered so deep when disked in with small grain that the seed never makes plants.

Seed Early

Early seeding is important, but that doesn't mean a hurried job poorly done. Too often the tendency is to rush spring seedings and neglect the preparation of a good seedbed. Better stands of clover and grass as well as better yields of small grain result if a well pulverized but firm seedbed is prepared before seeding.

It's important also to use fertilizer where needed. Hughes says that the clover and alfalfa responded well to superphosphate applied at seeding time.

MORE CHICKS, EGGS BY PREVENTING NEWCASTLE

Iowa poultry raisers will save more chicks, and their hens will produce more eggs. if Newcastle disease can be prevented from striking chicken flocks in 1949, says Dr. C. D. Lee, extension veterinarian at Iowa State College.

Newcastle disease will kill young chicks rapidly. Death losses in laying flocks are usually lower. However, egg production stops and will not return to normal for several weeks if the disease hits.

The first preventive measure to follow is a good sanitation program, according to Lee. The brooder house should be very thoroughly cleaned and disenfected before the chicks are put in. Buy quality chicks from a reliable hatchery, and if possible, take them home in your own car or truck.

Lee also offers these suggestions. Once the chicks are on the farm, don't allow visitors around the brooder house. They may spread the disease on their shoes or clothing. Always keep other chickens away from the healthy flock.

There is no known cure for Newcastle disease once a bird becomes infected. Since 1942, a formulized tissue vaccine which gives good short-time protection against the disease has been used or has been available for use. Live virus vaccines are available from at least two different sources.

The type of vaccine to be used depends upon each poultryman's program, Lee says. In some cases one vaccine is best. while in another poultry program a second vaccine might work better. He recommends that Iowa poultrymen contact their local veterinarian for specific details on Newcastle disease. General recommendation cannot be given because of the varying condition of the disease.

By Joe Norris

(This is the eighth of a series of lessons by Joe Norris, only bowler named to the All-American team eight consecutive times. Norris also has been a member of the world's match game team champions and the ABC and international team champions.)

BALL RELEASE

This illustration reveals a "book" on bowling form. The bowler is sliding up the foul line in perfect balance. The right foot is acting as a brake. The ball has been delivered with "sufficient loft" to insure its placement on the alley well over the foul line. (A ball dropped on the approach behind the foul line loses its working action.) The ball at this point is spinning in a counter clockwise motion, the spin having been applied with a counter clockwise twist of the fingers and wrist. A ball so delivered will hook into the 1-3 pocket and "work" to scatter the pins.

MISQUOTATIONS

The two most widely quoted words in English are the Bible and Shakespeare. But, more often than not, our quotations turn out to be misquotations.

For example, the Bible does not stigmatize money as the root of evil. The exact wording of I Tim. VI:10 is: "The love of money is the root of all evil," which puts a different complexion on the matter.

The popular saying, "Eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow you may die," is made up of fragments of these three versions: "To eat, and to drink, and to be merry."—Eccl. VIII:15. "Let us eat and drink; for tomorrow we shall die." — Isaiah XXII:13: "Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry."—Luke XII:19.

We often hear it said that the lion will lie down with the lamb; but again this is a garbling, for Isaiah XI:6 states: "The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid."

Meanwhile, dissolve the other package of gelatin in 1¾ cups hot water. Turn into another pan of the same size as one used above. Chill until firm. Then cut 8 or 9 shamrock shapes with a shamrock cooky cutter. With spatula, carefully arrange shamrocks on first gelatin mixture, allowing one for each serving. Chill. Cut in squares.

If desired, cubed or riced gelatin may be used for decorating instead of shamrocks.

Asparagus tips riding on toast points with smooth, well-flavored cheese sauce make a truly spring-like dish for luncheon or supper. The green and yellow color scheme which this combination makes will make a welcome sight for winter-weary appetites.

ASPARAGUS, that aristocratic vegetable, which comes into season early in Spring is sometimes called sparrow - grass. But whatever you call it, this handsome, green-tipped vegetable is one of the true appetite treats of the season.

The vegetable can be changed from a supplementary to a main dish if you serve it on toast with a cheese sauce because cheese is a high grade protein food. The cheese sauce is also an excellent idea to remember if you want to add interest to leftover vegetables.

Asparagus on Toast with Cheese Sauce

2 tablespoons butter
4 tablespoons flour
2 cups milk
½ pound American cheese, shredded
Salt, pepper
Hot, cooked asparagus tips
Toast points

Make cream sauce with the butter, flour and milk. When thick and smooth, add the shredded cheese and stir until it is melted. Season to taste. Place each serving of asparagus on 2 toast points and cover with a generous amount of hot cheese sauce.

If you want to make a spring vegetable platter that looks pretty as well as one which interests winter-jaded appetites, this next recipe is just the thing:

Spring Vegetable Platter
(Serves 6)

1 pound green beans
4 medium carrots, cut in strips
1 box frozen asparagus
1 hard-cooked egg, chopped
¼ cup butter
2 tablespoons lemon juice

Cook green beans in boiling, salted water for 30 minutes. Cook carrots in boiling, salted water for 15 minutes. Cook spinach without water 5 - 8 minutes. Arrange spinach in center of platter and garnish with egg. Arrange drained green beans and carrots in spoke fashion around the spinach. Pour over them a sauce of the butter melted and mixed with lemon juice. Garnish the platter with the following: Roll slices of luncheon meat spread with salad dressing around tiny sweet pickles. Fasten with toothpick.

Like creamed cauliflower? Stick ½ cup of salted almond meats in the white sauce after pouring it over the vegetable for appetite appeal.

Young cabbage cooked in milk rather than water is delicious to taste.

Melted butter mixed with lemon juice and chopped parsley makes an excellent sauce for whole cooked carrots.

Cup of corn added to 3 cups of cabbage and seasoned with crisp, crumbled bacon and a bit of sugar is delicious!

MIRROR of your MIND • • • How Ideas Are Born

By Lawrence Gould

Does anyone know where "ideas" come from?

Answer: If you're thinking of "original ideas," all that we can be sure of is that they don't "come into our minds" out of the wild blue yonder; they rise out of the "unconscious." Basically each idea starts from a wish or "drive" and represents a real or imagined way of getting satisfaction for it: an invention, for example, may start with a wish to save yourself work, to win fame, or to make money. But little is known of the mysterious process by which we put two and two together so that an idea eventually "takes shape."

Are there people whom you cannot "win by kindness"?

Answer: Yes. There is a type of person who is thrown into a panic by being treated too kindly and he will shun you like the plague if you attempt to do him favors; he firmly believes you want to "put him under obligation" to you and thus rob him of his "freedom." What he really is afraid of is his own unconscious wish to be dependent on some stronger person, and the reason this wish seems so dangerous is that once he gave full confidence to someone—probably one of his parents—and felt he was betrayed or "rejected."

Can your body make your mind sick?

Answer: Yes, says Dr. Armando Ferraro of the New York State Psychiatric institute. He feels that psychosomatic medicine has emphasized the mind's effects on the body to the point where it tends to ignore the fact that physical conditions may produce mental disturbances. A disorder of the "autonomic nervous system" which controls our movements and sensations may arouse states of "anxiety" such as occur in anxiety neurosis. What we know as mind and body are two aspects of one organism and whatever injures one affects the other also.

KEEPING HEALTHY

Preventing Heart Stroke

By Dr. James W. Barton

MANY years ago, one of the medical journals published the story of a businessman who had become mentally deranged. He was taken to a farm and treated entirely as an animal—regular meals, regular exercise and regular sleep

In a matter of months he was restored to good mental and physical health because of this regularity of the same life as an animal—plenty of the right food, and the full amount of sleep to give rest needed because of the hard physical work.

It is not surprising, therefore, that physicians are prescribing somewhat similar treatment for their cases of high blood pressure which cause heart strokes (coronary thrombosis or occlusion) and brain strokes (apoplexy).

Men will not have coronary occlusion in the dangerous age (except if they have infections) if: (1) they take daily physical exercise; (2) learn their foods (do not gain weight, take a low fat diet, do not eat more than they need for the amount of work or exercise taken); (3) keep a quiet mind; and (4) get eight hours' sleep, leaving worries at the office.

There is no question but that if the middle-aged man or woman would take daily physical exercise, which creates a natural appetite and prevents constipation, he or she will have rich pure blood circulating throughout the body, feeding needy tissues and carrying away wastes which could damage heart and blood vessels.

Naturally, also, the man or woman who can sleep peacefully and not be restless because of office or domestic problems, is going to rest heart and blood vessels and prevent a rise in blood pressure. Restful sleep is like having a battery recharged. It is the rise in blood pressure that causes most attacks of coronary occlusion or heart stroke.

★ HEALTH NOTES ★

The doctrine that alcoholism is a sickness has provided drinkers with a handy alibi, according to Edward J. McGoldrick Jr., director of New York's Bureau of Alcoholic Therapy. The most important thing in effecting a cure is that the patient must want to be cured. There should be more psychiatric clinics like Bridge House in New York City

With death rates from cancer reported on the decline, there is strong reason for optimism, according to Dr. Louis I. Dublin, second vice president and statistician of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company. This is largely because widespread publicity has sent many persons to cancer detection centers or to their physicians at early stages of the disease.

FIRST AID to the AILING HOUSE

by Roger C. Whitman

QUESTION: "My bedroom has two doors with opposite faults; when unlatched, one will not stay open, the other will not stay closed. Can this be corrected by adjustment of hinges? Is it something an amateur can do."

ANSWER: The trouble in both cases is because the pin of the lower hinge is not directly in line with that of the upper hinge. To check on this, use a plumb line—that is, a string with a small weight tied to one end. If you hold the loose end of this at the bottom of the upper hinge pin, the weight will show you which hinge needs resetting. The door originally was set with the hinges in line, and the trouble has come because of settlement that has somewhat distorted the door frame. It may be that moving one hinge will be enough, although possibly a small adjustment of both hinges will be easier.

When you have decided what to do, open the door part way, and jam books or blocks under the outer corner to take the weight. You then can remove the hinge pin of the hinge that is to be shifted, and do whatever is necessary. Take off the hinge plate on the door frame, and pack the screw holes with wood putty. You might find it necessary to place a shim (in the form of a piece of cardboard or a thin piece of wood) under the offending hinge.

THE NATURAL COMMUNITY AREA

A Factor In School District Reorganization

(By Chas. Whitney)

Any plan for reorganizing school districts must take into consideration the natural community interests of the people in the affected territory because the ability of people to work together in an educational program is conditioned to a very great extent by their cooperation in other types of activities.

For example, people might like to be in the same school district with those who go to the same church as they do, go to the same place for their recreational activities such as movies, dances, or swimming pools. Or they might like to be in the same school district as people who belong to the same American Legion Post or the same lodge. Possibly they feel something in common with people who do their banking in the same town as they do, or who market their produce in the same location as they do, or who do their Saturday night trading in the same center with them. At least, these are examples of possible factors to be taken into consideration by the county boards of education if they are to make recommendations relative to new districts in line with the wishes of the affected. Only if they have information relative to where people go to satisfy certain intersts can they make recommendations which would group into the same school unit people who have as many interests in common as possible.

In order to take these factors into consideration, every family unit in every county in the state, except those families residing in towns or cities of over 1000 population, are being asked to cooperate in furnishing information to the county board of education, relative to where they go to secure various types of services and merchandise. The questionnaire is called the "Natural Community Area Survey," and consists of checking the name of the town to which the family most frequently goes for each of 58 services and commodities. The information given by any family unit will be kept strictly confidential by the county board of education, the name of the head of the family used only to spot the information on the may.

The natural community area is only one factor that will be taken into consideration in determining boundry lines for new school district lines, but an important one for the family units involved. The county board of education can serve the families in their county to the best advantage in arriving at a wise plan of organization, only if the people in the county furnish them with the information necessary to do so.

GREIMAN CLAN NUMBERS 117

GRANDCHILDREN AND GREAT GRAND CHILDREN LIST GROWS BIGGER

The several stories that the Klemme Times has been running on grand children and great grand children has proven very interesting to our readers. This week we are given some additions to the list

Mrs. Anna Wille, better known as Grandma Wille, who is 85 has 22 grandchildren and 29 great grandchildren

117 Members In This Family

Mrs. Dora (Lau) Greiman, who is 88 years old and was born in 1861 near Elkport in Clayton county, Iowa. was married in 1881 to William Greiman and moved to Hancock and has lived on the same place northwest of Klemme continously for 68 years, lists her family as follows:

11 living children
40 grandchildren
35 great grandchildren

FARM MACHINERY OUGHT TO BE IN GOOD REPAIR

Those "lick and a promise" repair jobs may pull a machine through another spring season, but they increase the odds against the operator making them, says Norval Wardle, extension safety specialist at Iowa State College.

Makeshift machinery repairs and equipment that isn't working properly reduce an operator's efficiency and multiply his chances for accidents, Wardle says Working long hours in the field with machinery that isn't in good condition is irritating, fatiguing and fosters carelessness, he points out. Studies made in three Iowa counties during 1948 show that one-fifth of farm accidents are caused by hurry and fatigue.

The farm safety specialist recommends that all farm the equipment be checked very thoroughly before spring work starts. Defects in hitches, seats, clutches, wheels, brakes, steering mechanisms, and unguarded gears or shafts should be found and repaired. Repairs made now will head off costly accidents and breakdowns during the busy season.

Fire extinguishers, secure holders for grease guns and other servicing tools, and a good, solid step or grab bar are safety measures Wardle recommends for tractor operators.

He suggests checking fuel lines and fuel servicing equipment. A leaky hose or valve can easily lead to a costly fire. Fuel supplies that are too close to farm buildings are another hazard that should be corrected before a fire occurs, Wardle says

KLEMME PAVING BIDS ARE LOW

KLEMME COUNCIL RECEIVED FAVORABLE BIDS ON PAVING

At a meeting held by the Town Council Monday evening there were three firms present to present bids on the proposed paving contract. All of the bids were within the engineer's estimate and all were considered to be low bids.

Bidders present were Booth & Olson of Sioux City;. R. E. Johnson of Sioux City and Fred Carlson Co. of Decorah. The latter contractor put in the highway from Klemme to Highway 69 a few years ago.

All bids were within $75 of each other Bids were around $4.38 per square yard for pavement widening and curb, and 40 cents per square foot of sidewalk. The total sum of the entire contract was approximately $11,000.00.

However, the contracts were not let, pending action of the State Highway Commission who will also hold a letting for the State. Both lettings will then be combined.

ANTONIA KERAUS DIED AT HOME OF HER DAUGHTER MONDAY A. M.

THE CONSUMER IS ENTITLED TO GET WHAT SHE PAYS FOR

The dairy industry does not seek to deprive anyone of oleomargarine—provided the substitute is sold for what it is, and not in the guise of butter. When a housewife asks for butter, and pays for butter, she is entitled to get real butter rather than an artificially colored substitute.

Recent Supreme Court decisions now appear to strengthen the Federal Government's power to control fraud in the sale of food through the Interstate Commerce clause of the Constitution. It is now possible, therefore, to place a flat ban on the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine colored yellow in semblance of butter.

Under this new plan, consumers would pay no taxes whatever. License fees for wholesalers and retailers and manufacturers would be eliminated entirely. Hospitals and other public institutions would be free to serve uncolored oleomargarine without restriction. The housewife would be protected by the Food and Drug Administration and not by the Internal Revenue Department.

This new policy was proposed by three leading national dairy organizations and announced to the public October 26, 1948, the week before the election.

The oleomargarine manufactures have been allowed to imitate the taste of butter by adding diacetyl. They have been allowed to add preservatives such as benzoate of soda, which are denied the butter producers, in order to keep their product palatable until it can be sold. They have allowed to fortify their butter substitute with vitamin A—denied to butter—in an attempt to approximate the nutritional value of butter. They have been allowed to imitate the texture of butter by adding skim milk to their product. They have been permitted to illustrate their advertisements with pictures of pastures and barns to suggest the wholesome freshness of butter.

OBITUARY OF ANTONIA KERAUS

Antonia Paulina Keraus was born on October 19th, 1868 in New York City, the second of a family of five children born to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Prochaska, who were natives of Bohemia.

Mr. Prochaska was a cabinet maker by trade, but left New York City and took up a claim in Kansas, here the daughter Antonia attended the rural school and grew to womenhood.

In the spring of 1885, at the age of 16 years, Antonia Prochaska and Charles F. Keraus were married. They took up a claim near Wakeeney, Kansas and operated a cattle ranch. Four years later they sold out and came to Hampton, Iowa with their two small children, Rose and William, making the trip in fifteen days by covered wagon.

They farmed near Hampton for three years, operated a hotel in Garner for five years, farmed for a while near Latimer and in 1901 purchased a farm near Hayfield and five years later moved to Klemme. Mr. and Mrs. Keraus were the parents of eight children, four died in infancy and four survive. Mr. Keraus died in 1941.

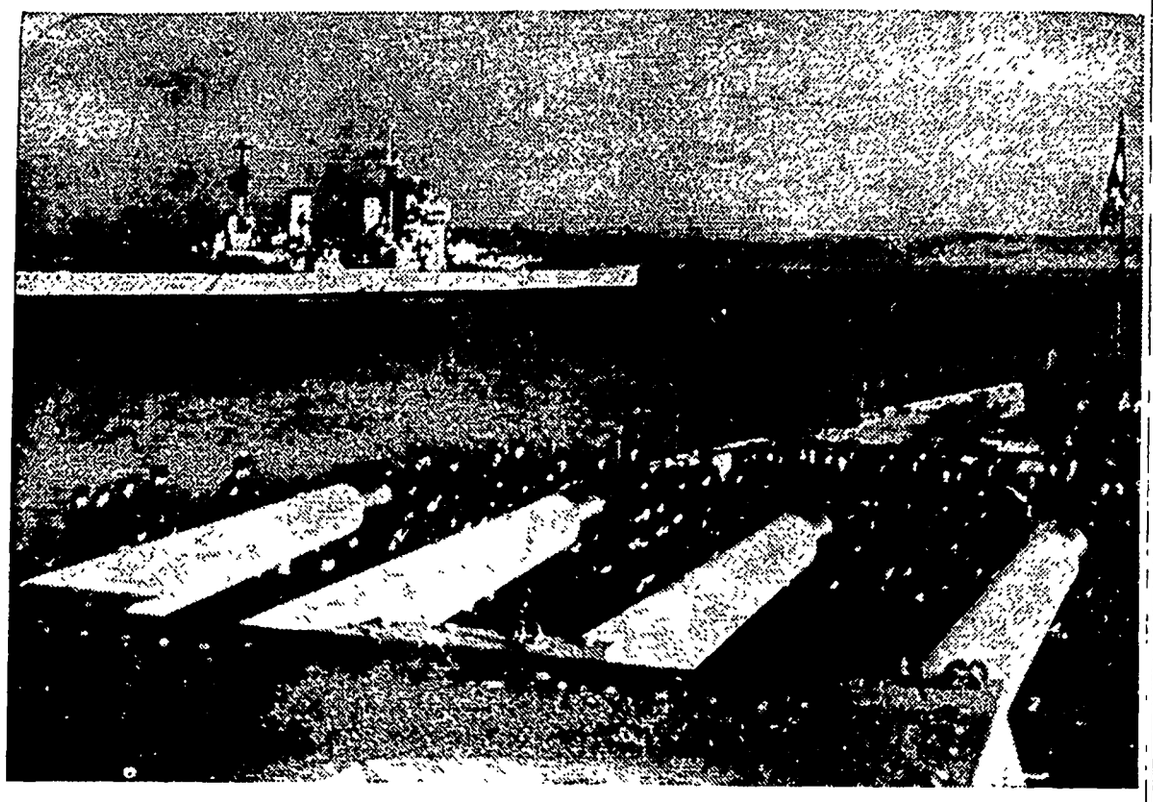
Antonia Keraus was a member of the Methodist Church, Klemme, Iowa.

Because of a heart ailment her strength gradually failed and the end came Monday morning, March 13th, 1949, at the home of her daughter, Rose Mitchell at Swea City. She had reached the age of 80 years, 4 months and 22 days.

Antonia Keraus leaves of her immediate family four children:

Mrs. Rose Mitchell, Swea City, Iowa
W. C. Keraus, Klemme, Iowa
Jess Keraus, Aberdeen, South Dakota
Bessie, Mrs. C. G. Waterman, Klemme, Iowa.

Five grandchildren, two great grandchildren and one sister, Emma Patton of Clear Lake.



LOVELY SISTERS WITH BIG, BUCK TEETH MEET AT SEA . . . Two of the heaviest hitters of the British Navy, HMS King George V (background) and HMS Duke of York, manage to squeeze into the same picture as they pass while leaving Portland for Gibraltar and Mediterranean exercises. The King George was one of the ships which sank the German battleship Bismarck. The Duke of York sent the Nazi pocket-battlewagon Scharnhorst to the bottom. Both ships are armed with "big teeth" which you see jutting out in foreground here over assembled crewmen of the Duke of York.

IT'S A WHALE OF A FISH STORY . . . Most fishermen will tell you ruefully, however truthfully, of the big one that "got away," but John Perrone, of Gerritsen Beach, N. Y., can tell you about this one that didn't. John saw this 50-foot whale, weighing about 15 tons, wallowing about in the sea off the New York coast. The big mammal apparently had been hit by a steamer. John managed to get a line around it and towed it to the beach where it is shown here in a photo taken from the air. John hadn't decided when the photo was taken, just what disposition he would make of the whale.

North, South Fought Hard Over President Buchanan

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WASHINGTON.—Democratic harmony, so far as the Dixiecrat revolt is concerned, remains an uncertain quantity. Democrats, basically, are still Democrats, but there will always be certain fundamental differences between North and South which existed even before slavery and secession became issues.

Beyond that, however, recent clashes with the Dixiecrats are largely only a levelling off process and probably nothing a sensible compromise cannot cure.

BAUKHAGE

People outside of Washington are often surprised that differences still arise between North and South over ancient matters which most of the country has forgotten. The country has also forgotten that it was here that the earliest outbreaks of sectional feeling took place. As early as 1848, there was a riot following an "underground" slave-running incident in which 76 household servants were spirited off to freedom. The Abolitionist Weekly was stormed and the capital suffered the biggest attack of jitters it had had since the British burned the White House 34 years before.

Nine years later a band of armed ruffians from Baltimore entered the city bent on helping the "Know Nothing" candidates in the local election. (We had local elections then.) The marines had to be called out: six men were killed and twice as many wounded.

The tide continued to rise and no President, from Tyler to Buchanan, could or would do anything about it. It was an open secret that Buchanan's sympathies were largely south of the Mason-Dixon line. Historians agree that he learned in advance the decision in the famous Dred Scott slavery case which was one of the last of the explosions which started the Civil War. Today supreme court secrets are kept secret. But Buchanan knew the court had ruled that Dred Scott was not a citizen under the meaning of the Consitution, and could not be made a citizen; further that the Constiution affirmed a property right in slaves, and such slave property was protected by the "due process of law" clause.

Buchanan realized what the effect of this decision would be, but in his inauguration speech piously advised the country to accept the verdict, no matter what it was.

Later when southern sentiment grew in the capital, Buchanan did try to organize a militia, but congress would have none of it. The regular army troops in the city were known to be of doubtful loyalty. The militia, much larger on paper, could muster only 150 men. Meanwhile the southern group, the Militant Jackson Democratic association, was drilling 800 men.

Finally the militia managed to get a thousand men under arms. But feeling ran high, and on Washington's birthday following the election of Abraham Lincoln by the electoral college but before his inauguration, the militia paraded. Ex-President Tyler, a Virginian, went to Buchanan and protested the fact that they had been allowed to display the Stars and Stripes, and Buchanan is said to have apologized.

Most people have forgotten the northern animosity toward Buchanan, but it was to crop up again in my time when it was the subject of one of those asidulous debates for which Sen. Cabot Lodge was notorious. Many Presidents are memorialized in stone in Washington, but not all, and in Lodge's time, Buchanan was one who was not.

Buchanan had been a bachelor and had taken his niece with him to the White House as hostess to assist in the brilliant entertainments for which he was noted. She later became Mrs. Harriett Lane Johnston, lived to an affluent old age and when she died, left the sum of $50,000 (which bought a lot more marble and bronze then than it would now) for the erection of a statue of her uncle.

The donation of a site required the approval of congress. This donation was cheap, considering that, unlike similar tributes to the nation's hero, all expenses were provided. Congress was willing enough, but not that stalwart yankee, Lodge, who lived perhaps nearer to the age of Buchanan to his own generation.

He chose to dig up all the unsavory memories his scholarly brain could muster to block the donation of the site. Naturally hot southern blood grew hotter, and what some of Mr. Lodge's opponents lacked in data, they more than made up in oratory. The motion was passed, but not until tempers had been thoroughly ruffled.

The site chosen for the statue was not conspicuous. In fact, I had never seen it until it was brought to my attention by a gentleman fully conversant with the details of the dispute and likewise familiar with every nook and cranny of the capital city. I asked him to show me the statue. He said he knew where it was. In Meridian Park. But just before we arrived at the scene, he paused and said: "It ought to be here."

It developed that he had never seen it either.

It was there—in an inconspicuous spot, a huge bronze statue, of good workmanship, backed by a wide exedra which is defined as "a seat with a high back"—but this would seat several squads of infantry.

It is a huge piece of stonework flanked by two symbolic figures in classic style, one representing diplomacy, in which Buchanan was skilled (he had served well as minister to Great Britain) and one representing the law in which, if we may judge by his breach of ethics in connection with the supreme court decision, he was not of equal stature. Perhaps his niece was sensitive on this point for she specified the inscription—the only words on the statue beside the dates of his term and the single word "Buchanan"—It reads—

"The incomparable statesman whose walk was upon the mountain ranges of the law." (Although it isn't indicated, it was Buchanan's own attorney-general who said that.

There is a certain ironic touch in the fact that Buchanan's memory had to be perpetuated in stone by family subsidy, for from 1820 to 1830 he was one of the few members of congress who pursued the futile attempt to get congress to approve a suitable memorial in the capitol to George Washington.

Efforts in this direction either were circumvented or ignored until 1831, the centenary of Washington's birth. At that time, the public was so aroused over the indifference of congress that George Watterson, then librarian of congress, formed an association which raised the money for the Washington monument which was eventually completed on the spot originally chosen for a statue of Washington by Major L'Enfant who drew the plans for the city.

The President said recently he didn't depend on opinion polls under any circumstances. Well, if anybody has a reason for that attitude, it certainly would be Harry Truman.

White Coal

White coal is the figurative name for falling water that is capable of being used for power purposes. The term originated in France; it is the literal translation of houille blanche and was probably suggested because much of the falling water in France originated in snow-covered mountains, or because falling water when filled with air bubbles appears white when compared with the blackness of coal.

Tide water, usable for power, is sometimes called "blue coal."

Gents:

the sense in protesting use of a blackjack when me time you are pounding on the head with six feet per? Deluging state legis- nd the national congress s demanding that some- thing be done about mock trials in the Kremlin pattern is all very well, but what about us all personally doing a little less cheering, hat tossing and voting here on home grounds for candidates for city, state, and national office who are known to be so far to the left that a slight breeze could send them over to the Moscow line? Huh?

Is there anything screwier than expressing indignation over the Cardinal Mindszenty outrage, with its threat to religion everywhere on earth under communism, and then taking it on the double to the polls to vote into office leaders who are not wholeheartedly for the American way?

Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty, not eternal telegrams. Americans must wage this fight at the polls not at the Western Union offices. Ballots, not wires or postcards are Uncle Sam's first line of defense if he is really indignant over that Hungary trial and wants to make sure that no court routines of that type ever come to America.

If I were a congressman I would answer all wires with a terse, "Received your telegram urging me do something. Fine idea. What are you doing besides sending wires? Are you by any chance among those millions of easily-fooled folks who by word, deed or vote make the way easy for the Communist routine in America? Don't answer too fast. Sit down and give your conscience a good checking up."

This country's Number One Loons are the boys and gals who think they can stop the "reds" and "pinkos" by Western Union instead of by an all-out determination never to support for any office (government, labor union or chowder club) any candidate who has a smile for the Kremlin way. All Russia laugh up its sleeve at that kind of hypocrisy. They love it and count on it. And they have been getting it from plenty of telegram senders

You can't stop by wire an evil which you are not trying to stop by your own love of country and mental alertness. It makes no sense.

I don't mean to lay off telegrams of protest against persecutions of the church and defiance of all the rules of human justice. They help. But you're just performing in a squirrel cage if you rush off a wire of indignation in the morning and dash off in the afternoon to vote into office some crumb you know very well is the type who might play footsie with Pal Joey.

The Quiet Night

Grace Noll Crowell

WHAT is death but a quiet night of sleeping
All weariness forgotten, and all pain
Our eyelids closed and shaken of their weeping,
Our bodies waiting strength to come again
We say good night to our beloved then turning,
Go through the shadowy hall and up the stair
The little light goes out that has been burning,
We watch the stars beyond the window square
Then, soft as nightfall on the meadow flowers
Sleep comes and bears us dreamlessly away,
And rest is sweet though long or short the hours
Until we waken and again 'tis day
With its bright glory, and its sudden splendor,
And, dazzled by the golden light that spills,
We will arise all lithe and strong and slender
And young again to climb the golden hills

Leadership School

Lesson for March 20, 1949

IT TAKES more than a call of God to be a Christian leader. It takes study, it takes work. The call is necessary, of course, but it is not all. Jesus set the church an example here as always. He called his Twelve; but he was not so foolish as to think that just because he had called them they were all ready to go out and take the lead. Jesus put them through what may be called the first Leadership Training School in the history of the Christian church.

Who Was Enrolled?

THE TWELVE Apostles were the training class. Not all Jesus' disciples were equal to it; perhaps some of them actually did not have the time. But these Twelve had already been set off from the others, not because they were better men, but in order to do more direct service in Christ's name. There was nothing formal about Jesus' training school.

It met wherever he was at the time—in a house, or by the roadside, or on a hill-top. There were no set hours, no textbooks, credits or diplomas.

Jesus kept it going to the very end, for even after the Resurrection, as Luke tells us (in Acts 1) he was still teaching his Twelve.

What Did They Study?

THERE WAS no printed circular, no bulletin, no prospectus or catalogue All the "courses" amounted to just one thing: learning to do what Jesus was doing. To this day, that is the aim of all Christian training. Mark and Luke mention at least four things Jesus' training-school students learned from him: preaching, healing the sick, feeding the hungry, and praying It would not be quite true to say that part of what they learned was spiritual and part practical, for there is nothing more practical than praying as Jesus taught it, and Jesus never ministered to people's physical needs without touching their spirits too.

Many a person now in some hospital for the insane need not have gone there if he had had the help that a well-trained minister can give.

Ministers today are not taught how to perform miracles like the feeding of the 5,000; but knowing that people's physical well-being has a great deal to do with their spiritual welfare, the alert young Christian minister of today will be keenly interested in Chiristian social action.

How Did They Learn?

THE TWELVE learned by doing. It is the only way you learn anything of a practical nature. Memorizing a textbook, memorizing rules, is not learning. You have learned how to do a thing only when you can do it. Of course you have to see it done, first. A boy on the farm learns to be a farmer by watching his father and helping him, more than from school courses in agriculture, useful as they are. There is nothing to take the place of apprenticeship under one who knows. So Jesus' Twelve watched him, listened to him, helped him, before they were trusted on their own.

Will It Still Work?

THE METHODS Jesus taught are just as effective today as they ever were. Not all churches nowadays follow his line to the letter; in fact, most churches do not. But the basic principles which Jesus drilled into his first traveling representatives are still good. One is faith.

Missionaries in the 20th Century are required to take a great deal more equipment with them to their fields than one pair of shoes, one cane and an empty purse. Yet who can deny that any missionary of any church, in China or in Korea today, must live by faith from day to day?

Another of Jesus' principles was direct contact. People are not won to Christ chiefly by sermons from pulpits, but by in-the-home contacts. Ministers know this, missionaries know it; Sunday school teachers ought to know it too. Getting acquainted with your boys and girls at their homes, and being a friend to them there, is what will give your Sunday teaching its greatest force and success.

GENERAL JAKE

By Richard Hill Wilkinson

MAYBE YOU'VE HEARD of this old wardog Gen. Jake Sears. You must have. He's been cited for bravery a dozen times. Considered one of the finest officers in the army, knows all the answers, as far as strategy is concerned. Smart. A hero.

Well, maybe he was a hero. I suppose any soldier is a hero who knocks the devil out of the enemy, no matter how he does it. That's war. Still somehow I'd always had a notion that a hero was one who braved odds. Queer the ideas kids get. Queer the way they stick with a chap as he grows older. At any rate, I was with Old General Jake's outfit at Lameraux. Remember Lameraux? Sure, General Jake got his biggest medal for what happened at Lameraux.

Well, sir, the day before the Boche moved in—of course we didn't know it was the day before until later—up comes a messenger from headquarters with instructions for General Jake to hold Lameraux as long as he could. I mean, headquarters knew General Jake's tactics, and they didn't want him walking out without some show of resistance.

General Jake smiled thinly to himself and tore the orders into little pieces and threw the pieces away. And then the next day the Germans moved in. We had ample warning. Everything was in readiness for a hasty and efficient retreat. Of course, the smart thing to do was blow up the bridge, which offered the only means of approach, before quitting the village, thereby impeding the Germans no end. Everyone expected orders to that effect, but General Jake had a sly look in his eyes. He was thinking of those orders from headquarters, I guess, and thinking what folks might say if he retreated as he planned.

So instead of ordering the bridge blown up, he issued some hurried instructions. Then he started the retreat. Two miles up the road he circled the outfit and headed back through some woods. We waited at the edge of the woods for an hour, watching the Germans cross the bridge into the village. Then General Jake sent a messenger scampering off to the field station he had established.

Ten minutes later there was a terrific explosion. The bridge flew into the air like kindling wood. The Germans who were on the Lameraux side stared in amazement, but their amazement gave way to concern, for just then General Jake's boys came swarming out of the woods.

What followed was pretty awful, even for a war. Our men outnumbered those Germans who had crossed the bridge about three to one. We had the advantage of knowing just what we were to do and having a flock of machine guns set up ready for use.

By the time the slaughter was finished and our own wounded cared for and the outfit organized again, the body of Germans left on the other side of the river had built a pontoon bridge, and what with this and boats and rafts they were coming across with murder in their eyes.

But General Jake had planned everything. Before the first of the remaining body of Germans touched the Lameraux side of the river we were in retreat, and a fast retreat at that, although there was plenty of time and nothing much to worry about.

That evening we reached the town of La Roche, which was occupied by plenty of our boys, and there we made camp. I don't know exactly what sort of report General Jake turned in at headquarters, but I do know that he was cited for the Lameraux episode not long after.

That's the sort of thing that makes a war hero, I guess. At any rate, that's the rank General Jake goes by now—war hero.

HIGH SCHOOL HI-LIGHTS

SENIOR PLAY

The cast of the senior play has been chosen and the practice has already started. Every senior is excited over the play and all are going to do their best to make it a success. The seniors have the record of the juniors to beat as the junior class has set a record-high sale of tickets. The seniors, though, will try their best and here is hoping that they go over and above the record set by the juniors. If everyone co-operates it should not be so terribly hard to do.

The name of the play is, "The Strange House" and is a mystery. It will be given somewhere around April 19th. A definite date will be set later.

SENIOR INTERVIEW

Iris Rosendahl, born on Nov. 17, 1931, is our topic of interview this week. She has blue eyes and brown hair and is about the shortest girl of the senior class. Home Economics is the subject she likes best and cookies are her favorite food. Iris's pet peeve is careful drivers and just exactly how she means that we have no idea. Her favorite pastime is paying the organ. To be a nurse is her one and only ambition and everyone has the opinion that she should be a very good one.

HOME ECONOMICS

The home economics classes have been changed around this semester and now the Freshman girls are taking cooking. Around 2 o'clock every afternoon odors can be smelled as they come drifting down the hall to the sewing room. Once in a great while an unpleasant one finds its way there too. All in all, though, the Freshman girls are really learning a lot of facts about cooking that ought to be of quite a lot of benefit to their mothers. After their class in home economics they ought to be quite accomplished cooks.

As for the senior girls in home economics, they have a fashion parade every day as someone finishes a new garmet. The senior girls are in fact quite proud of their progress. Even Mrs. Andrea is fairly well satisfied with us. When this semester is finished Mrs. Andreae will certainly have earned her vacation after all the questions and work that she has helped her Home Economics girls with. Everyone agrees that home economics is great fun.

WEEKLY QUESTION

Alice Meyer - Study Hall because that is the only place I can get my studying done.

Ruth Janssen - Typing because there is no outside studying.

Norene Pearson - History because there is no hard work.

Roger Howard - Manual Training because it is the easiest.

Virgil Pringnitz - Typing because it is less work.

Marian Anderson - P. T. because I like basketball.

Marvin Schmidt - Economics no special reason.

What Constitutes An Adequate Educational Program For A Community?

(By Chas. S. Whitney, Co. Supt.)

Since the only justifiable reason for considering the problem of reorganizing school districts in the state of Iowa is to improve the possibilities for providing an adequate educational program for every boy and girl, let us take a look at what constitutes such a program

We could safely say that an adequate educational program provides an equal opportunity for every child to develop in line with his needs, aptitudes, and special interests to the point where he will be equipped to take his place satisfactorily in adult society.

This would mean that the very best development in the basic skills or 3 R's. It would mean a health and physical education program from kindergarten through high school that would be under the direction of a nurse, doctor, and dentist, as well as people especially trained in the field of physical education There would be provisions made whereby the mentally retarded and physically handicapped would be given special help by people trained in that field.

There would be provision for every child to develop in the fields of art, music, dramatic expression, etc and for those with special talents in these fields to continue with this development under the direction of people especially trained to give this instruction.

The high school program of studies would be so broad, rich, flexable, and adequate that there would be an opportunity for pupils to take courses in line with their special needs, aptitudes, and special interests, rather than being forced to take exactly the same program of studies as every other pupil There would be opportunities, for example, for them to take vocational agriculture, homemaking, industrial arts, chemistry, trigonometry, a foreign language, and a variety of other courses, if they had a special need and interest in those fields. The boys interested in engineering wouldn't have to take the same courses in high school as the one interested in medicine or farming or the same as the girl in dietetics

There would be people on the staff of the school, especially trained in the field of guidance, who could help the individual pupils to study their aptitudes and prevailing interests, and to give them direction so that they could more wisely choose a life's vocation, as well as plan more wisely for future educational needs. Such guidance personnel would also help the individual pupil to make better adjustments to his situations.

An educational program cannot be developed to the fullest extent without the very best in the way of instructional materials, the most adequate facilities, an instructional staff particularly trained in the areas in which they work, and an administrative and supervisory staff qualified to give proper direction to the program.

Do the schools in your community make these opportunities possible?

WEED AND PEST CONTROL MEETING AT BRITT

Tiny Gunderson will speak at a Weed and Pest Control meeting at the Hemp Plant in Britt on March 31st.

Harold (Tiny) Gunderson has been in extension entomology for 15 years, 14 of which were spent in Iowa

He is a member of the National Fly Control Committee and was one of the principals in the 1948 Iowa Pest Control clinic. He instituted the fly control program in Iowa.

In recent years Gunderson has done extensive research in corn borer control and is considered one of the foremost authorities in that field. He has written numerous articles on the corn borer and has made speeches in all parts of Iowa in an effort to acquaint farmers with the potential danger of the insect

He is also an expert on rat control and has written several bulletins and pamphlets on the subject "Extension entomology and pest control are synonymous terms," says Gunderson, who annually receives and answers thousands of requests from all over the state on how to control everything from rodents to microscopic insects.

MIRROR of your MIND ● ● ● Wrong Way to Wedded Bliss

By Lawrence Gould

Can you really "marry the wrong person"?

Answer: You can marry someone with whom you are sure to be unhappy without knowing consciously what you are doing. But the psychoanalysts insist that this is never "accidental"—what attracts you to a person who will make you miserable is the secret feeling that he (or she) represents a way of answering the "unsolved problem" around which your whole life revolves, but which you will never solve because you do not understand it. Finding a way to regain the adoration that your mother gave you as a baby might be such a problem.

Was loss of self-confidence a cause of "battle fatigue"?

Answer: Yes, say two psychiatrists in the Journal of Nervous and Mental Diseases. The "illusion of strength"—that is, the belief that we are old and strong enough to take care of ourselves—keeps us going under normal circumstances, but when this is shattered by the realization that there's nothing we can do to save ourselves from immediate and deadly danger, our egos are shattered and our instincts and emotions become like an army with no one to lead it. Under such conditions we quite literally "go to pieces."

Does honestly really "pay off"?

Answer: Not always in money or immediate success, perhaps, but in the peace of mind that comes from feeling we have nothing to hide from our neighbors—and still more important, ourselves. Some unusually "tough-minded" people appear able to ignore knowing there are things about them which no one must ever find out, but most of us would eventually "crack" under the strain of such a situation, even though our secrets were securely buried. The fact that so many criminals "confess" shows how true this is.

Lame Back

By Dr. James W. Barton

IN FORMER days when a patient complained of a lame back, he was either advised to rest until the pain disappeared or to try to "work the pain out" by exercise. Both these methods of treatment often resulted in a permanently stiff or poker back.

Today, a patient with a lame back is questioned as to how and when the pain first came on—whether at rest, working or exercising, whether pain increases with exercise or increases when the patient is at rest. Generally, in the great majority of cases, if pain increases when at rest, infection is present from the teeth, tonsils, gums, sinuses, gall bladder or large intestine. If pain is increased by exertine. If pain is increased by exercise or standing on the feet, it is caused by injury or faulty standing or sitting, which causes pressure on the nerves of the spine.

While the salicylate drugs are used to allay pain and relax muscles, whether the pain is due to infection (rheumatism, arthritis) or to injury, physical methods — heat, massage, electricity—are important helps in treatment.

According to Dr. Frank Ober, "the acutely lame back requires bed rest and quieting drugs. The bed must be firm and the mattress flat. If the mattress sags, a board 20 inches shorter than the spring should be placed under the mattress. A board under the mattress may cause more pain, and in such cases it should not be used." Sometimes putting one or more pillows under the abdomen and lying face downward keeps the back flat or straight and takes pressure off the nerves. Hot packs 15 to 20 minutes twice a day are helpful. Baking with a heat lamp the same length of time provides relief."

Light, not deep massage, helps promote relaxation of the muscle spasm and aids the circulation.

When the patient gets back on his feet, a well-fitted corset or other support should be put on before getting out of bed.

★ HEALTH NOTES ★

It may come as a surprise to learn that, although vitamins are important—and their discovery ranks in importance with insulin for diabetes and liver and liver extracts for pernicious anemia—the foods themselves are important aside from the vitamins, as there are other substances present necessary to health. The same condition applies in the case of proteins.

In every case of heart disease, the first method of treatment should be rest. Lying completely relaxed uses one unit of strength, sitting up two units, standing three units, walking five to 10 units. As complete rest may slow up circulation, and thus cause congestion of blood in the heart, the patient while in bed should move his arms and legs or undergo light massage.

Modern science reveals how

THIS TREATMENT CAN RELIEVE ARTHRITIS PAINS

Working with infra-red photography and other modern devices, science now explains the effectiveness of the "Sloan's Treatment" for combating pains of arthritis and rheumatism, neuralgia and muscular aches.

Infra-red photos disclose that after Sloan's is applied to the skin, veins below the surface are expanded . . . evidence that an extra supply of blood has been brought to the pain area, to revitalize the painful tissues and to carry away waste matter and poisons.

Other scientific measurements disclose that this beneficial action penetrates deep down below the surface and lasts for hours.

The "Sloan's Treatment" is simply to use Sloan's regularly, morning and evening; at every application you not only feel the welcome comfort which Sloan's brings, but you know that the all-important, increased flow of blood is getting at the spot where the pain is.

For years Sloan's has been "the greatest name in pain-relieving liniments". Now modern scientific investigation reveals why that reputation was earned.

The latest information on how to combat corn borers and weeds, two of Hancock County's worst crop enemies, will be presented to farmers next week at weed and pest control clinics in several areas of the state. A clinic for this area will be held in the Hemp Plant in Britt, on March 31. Doors will open at 8.30 a. m. with an all-day program scheduled. Paul Henderson, Co. Ext.Director, urges all farmers to attend the clinic as weed and crop pest problems are serious in this county, particularly corn borers.

The clinic is being sponsored by the Iowa State College extension Service, Iowa Dept. of Agriculture, the Iowa Farm and Home Register, Co. Farm Bureau, Weed commissioners, chambers of commerce, and other local farm and civic groups.

Three Iowa State College extension specialists will be on hand Harold Gunderson, Ext. entomologist, will discuss control of flies, grasshoppers, and corn borers. E P. Sylwester, Ext. ### DHIA TRAINING COURSE SCHEDULED

The Dairy Herd Improvement Ass'n. Supervisors' course at Iowa State College will be in session April 11 to 30, according to Co. Ext. director, Paul Henderson. Young men in Hancock County who are interested in dairy herd management may make application by writing to Don Voelker, extension dairyman at the college.

Successful completion of the 3 week's school, which is tuition free, qualifies the trainee as a DHIA Supervisor. Right now, the number of DHIA units in Iowa is limited by the number of qualified supervisors, Henderson says.

Men best suited for Supervisors' positions are those who have a high school education, some practical dairy experience, are single, and between the ages of 21 and 35. The DHIA Supervisor job is to make tests and to keep records of production on herds for the individual members of the organization, Henderson explains. More information may be obtained by writing to Don Voelker, 202 Morrill Hall, Ames, Iowa.

Obituary of Louise Kluckhohn

MRS. LOUISE KLUCKHOHN was born October 6th, 1859, at White Rock, Ogle County, Illinois, the youngest of a family of nine children born to her parents, Sabestian Ell and Katherine (Weideman) Ell.

In 1870, when Louise was eleven years old, the family moved to Hancock County, and were among the first settlers in the Township of Ell, which bears their name.

In the summer of 1871, Rev. William Koerner, a circuit rider, called at the farm home of the Sabestian Ell family, and conducted a religious service. This was the beginning of German Methodism in Hancock County. Louise Ell became a member of the Methodist Church and has continued to be a member for 75 years.

In the spring of 1879, Louise Ell and Geo. W. Kluckhohn were married. They commenced housekeeping on the Kluckhohn farm and continued to farm in Ell Township for 12 years. They moved to Klemme in 1891, operated a butcher shop for two years, and then went into the restaurant business which they operated for 17 years. Thereafter, in 1910, George Kluckhohn continued in the Real Estate and Insurance business until his death in 1926.

There was a "Heap of Living" in the hospitable home of George and Louise Kluckhohn.

There was rejoicing from time to time when babies were born, nine of them.

There was weeping in this home, when the Angel of death called, now and then thruout the years, and took of their loved ones, four children.

Again there was gladness within these walls, as young folks grew up, and one after another were married and left the parental roof.

And what a joy it was in the evening of life, to have the grandchildren call to romp and play and eat of Grandmother's cookies.

Truly, Grandmother Kluckhohn was Queen in a very busy household.

And now, at the age of 89 years, 5 months and 16 days, like a child tired of play, Grandma Kluckhohn closes her eyes in eternal sleep.

She leaves five children:
Frank W. Kluckhohn
Sadie Turgeson
Clarence Kluckhohn
Fred Kluckhohn
Lola Keraus

Also 10 grandchildren and 14 great grandchildren.

WOMAN'S WORLD

New Window Curtains Give Crisp Look

By Ertta Haley

JUST BEFORE the warmer weather makes its appearance, many a woman is apt to take a good look at her windows. The curtains look very dirty and sleazy after a winter's heating. If you're certain they won't stand another laundering session, then get out the tape measure and sewing machine. It's time to make new window dressings!

Glass curtains are among the easiest items that can be made at home. Most of them require only long stretches of straight seams There's no fancy stitching or cutting, no elaborate patterns, and hardly ever any ripping if you follow the simplest rules.

Soft, full gathers will make the simplest materials exquisite when they're made into curtains First measure the windows as to height and width. The curtain material should be purchased twice as wide as the window. You'll need at least two inches at both top and bottom for seam allowances, and from two to four inches for a shrinkage tuck, so add at least eight inches to window measurements on the length

Net marquisette, scrim, sheer rayon or nylon are all used for glass curtains A good quality, firmly woven material will give you the most satisfaction and most wear and is well worth the few cents more a yard which it costs

It's very important to buy good material if you live in a community that's dirty or smokey, because then curtains will have to withstand frequent washing.

Have Edges Straight For Good Appearance

Because curtains are so large, it is best to cut them on the floor where you'll have enough space to spread them out. If you place the curtain material on a rug, the fabric adheres to the rug and you need no pins to secure it.

Use the vacuum cleaner on the rug, and run over it with a damp cloth to catch any dirt, or you will soil the curtain.

Whenever possible, tear the curtain fabric, rather than cutting it, as this will give you straighter seams to sew. If the fabric does not tear, draw a thread and cut on the thread line. If you cannot pull a thread use a yardstick or ruler, and draw a chalk line on which to cut.

Pay special attention to the grain of the fabric in cutting, folding and stitching so the curtain will hang straight.

Selvage edges are woven tighter the the curtain fabric and should be removed before cutting and sewing the seams Why? After the curtain is washed, you may find yourself with baggy curtains which never can be ironed smooth

This selvage does not show up in the new curtain, but it will almost always show up after laundering

Use Iron to Save Basting Stitches

Professional seamstresses always work with an iron and ironing board set up ready to use, in their sewing room Many edges can be pressed immediately after cutting so that the fold is sharp This may be stitched without basting

As soon as the curtain is cut or torn, turn the side seams using an iron to fold them neatly The hem edge on these is one or two inches when finished Press first a quarter of an inch turn, then a second one inch turn. Pin the hem on the outside edge and then stitch, thus saving basting.

The top edge is turned in a casing, but this usually is basted first so that you can hang the curtain for a trial to see that it fits your curtain rod. This fitting will also help you in seeing that the curtain hangs properly.

Use Stiffening At Heading

If you like transparent curtains to hang properly, it's best to use some stiffening at the heading of the curtain. Usually three inches or slightly more is best. Firm crinoline or buskram are fabrics which are best.

In measuring the turning necessary for the heading, decide first on the depth of the pleat, then turn the top edge in two inches more than this measure allow a double turn so the buckram will not show

When measuring the buckram, measure two inches from the edge, because the top stiffening should not extend to the outside hem of French-pleated curtains

It's also possible to use washable buckram banding made with eyelets to form the French pleats No rings are needed. The curtain pole is slipped right through the eyelets, thus giving the necessary pleat.

If you are putting in the shrinkage tuck of two to four inches, put this in at the top in a narrow heading above the casing Or, to avoid the shrinkage tuck, wash the curtain material before sewing and it will shrink as much as it is going to, and no allowance need be made.

No Purse Problem

You need never again worry about what to do with your purse when dining out, if you have one of these smart purse holderettes. These inexpensive gadgets are small and compact; they fit into your bag when not in use, and will help you avoid uncomfortable juggling of the purse on the lap or trying to find a place on the table or floor for the bag. They may also be used for holding umbrellas or packages.

Be Smart!

This season silk prints are really back, for the first time, in substantial quality and quantity You'll see them now as one of the favorites for resort wear: very classic as to lines, extremely brief as to sleeves and pleasing as to pattern. Polka dots will continue their popularity, and prints are innumerable. New and refreshing are the small scale patterns, often so conventionalized or stylized that they are entirely new looking The lovely hand of silk makes it possible to give these new classics many original collar interpretations, and most of them are low-cut .

THE HOME TOWN REPORTER IN WASHINGTON

WALTER SHEAD, WNU Correspondent

What ECA Means

YOUR HOME TOWN Reporter has been particularly interested in the testimony before the senate foreign relations committee with reference to the new appropriation of more than five billion dollars for the Marshall plan, or the economic cooperation administration, for the next fiscal period. What we were particularly interested in finding out was what this new agency and its expenditure of billions of dollars for European recovery means to the folks back in the home towns and rural communities of the country who are putting up the money for its operation.

As yet we have heard nothing specific on this phase of the operation of ECA and we believe it to be vitally important to the continuity and success of the plan. The taxpayers generally are in favor of ECA for the reason they have been told it may prevent another war and that it has curbed communism in Europe

We believe, however, that if we must keep going back to congress for additional billions, since the estimate is that it will take some 16 billion dollars to do the job, the taxpayers in the country should be told just what they are getting for this money, just what it means to them, just what is their stake in this plan and the expenditure of these billions. At this writing, that has not been done

Secretary of State Dean Acheson told the committee that the situation in Europe from an economic standpoint is "vastly more encouraging than it was two years ago." "Improvement can be noted in almost every phase of the participating countries," Mr. Acheson said. Paul Hoffman, the able administrator of the ECA, told the committee that production in all lines, steel output, factory and mine output, electric power output, freight traffic, crops, earnings and exports in the participating countries all showed a high percentage of gain.

Hoffman said he hoped European countries would balance their budgets, that ECA's economic objective could be attained by 1952, that he would prefer continued high taxes here to a slowing down in the European recovery program, and that he believed definitely that the ECA program would end June 30, 1952.

So far the ECA agency here in Washington has, with the exception of some information which has been given to the country by private sources such as magazines and other mediums for the dissemination of news, given only information good for technical and business magazines and other publications

It has not attempted to show Joe Doakes out in Keokuk or Kokomo what the ECA plan and the expenditure of this money means to him personally and to the general welfare and well-being of the community in which Joe Doakes lives.

This reporter believes ECA is overlooking a bet and a necessary and important factor in the continued successful operation of the entire program unless it does just that. The folks back in the Home Towns are generous, they believe more or less vaguely that the Marshall plan is a good thing but still they would like to know in a very material and specific way just how they are benefiting, just what they are getting for this money, how it is being spent and how it affects each one of them individually

Stamp-Lovers, Field Day

The philatelists are having a field day and the postoffice department is hoping the President will veto many of the 22 bills thus far introduced in the congress providing for issuance of special stamps. These bills run the gamut of special events all the way from memorializing the advent of the first Angora goat to anniversaries of cities, towns, prominent men and women, organizations and cotton textile manufacturing. Most of these bills likely will be passed

A member of the house committee on postoffices and civil service said, "The post office can issue only so many stamps a year, but special stamps mean a lot to the member who introduced them so we usually pass them and then the President vetoes 'em." President Truman last year, however, let some get by him. Usually the postoffice department does not sell enough to pay the cost of lithographing or embossing.

Rankin Hits Back

Congressman John Rankin of Mississippi, obstreperous Dixiecrat who has been charged with being everything a member of congress should not be, kicked off the house un-American activities committee as a bigot and a debaser of civil rights, is getting back at the administration. He forced a bill out of his house armed services committee, which he chairmans by virtue of his seniority only, calling for a veterans pension

Exaggerated Self-Pity Is Poison

Bell Syndicate—WNU Features

"WHEN MY SISTER was three and I almost five years old, our loved Daddy was killed in a motor crash," says a letter lying here on my desk. "Mother was left penniless, but she resumed her old profession of teaching and we had some happy years, we three together. Our little four-room apartment was full of love and harmony and Lily and I wanted only to be with mother for the rest of our lives.

"When mother married the family doctor, a widower," the letter goes on, "what has proved to be a fatal injury to my development took place I was not conscious of it then, naturally, but the seeds of what grew to be absolute morbidity were sown then

Sense Of Injustice

"Our stepfather loved Lily and me, but two boy babies came to take our places, and at 12 and 14 we were sent to boarding school. Our happy country summers and the letters and packages from Mother never could remove our sense of deep injustice and it has colored both our lives Lily never married and has worked for years in the county home for mental cases I have married twice unsuccessfully and now feel that while my present husband is an absolute angel, I am too sick, weary and disillusioned to be a good wife for him or good mother to my boys, now 17 and 5 years old.

"It was my psychoanalyst who, searching painstakingly through my past, unearthed this unhappy situation in my girlhood and has helped me enormously by putting the blame for this injustice where it belongs—on the accident that robbed me of my father and my mother's second marriage"

This is only part of a 17-page letter, which I have not answered. It takes more patience than I possess to sympathize with such a woman And yet she is typical of actual hundreds who write me every year that fancied slights injustices and disadvantages far back in their perfectly normal everyday, give-and-take, up-and-down American childhoods, have upset their mental balances for life

It has become the fashion to seek back for something Mother or Dad did or something they left undone, and lay today's stupidities, resentments, failures and flaws in character all to that.

Must Compensate For Wrongs

But, good heavens, which one of us hasn't suffered wrongs far deeper than these imaginary ones Diana lists here, not once, but all through our younger years! Parents will have favorites, teachers will put the blame on the wrong child, and young bewilderment and confusion will lead children into embarrassing and humiliating morasses. Unless we make up our minds, at 5 or 7 or even earlier, that that's the way the stupid world of grownups is and develop some sort of shell, philosophy or spiritual balance to offset it, we shall grow up like Lily and Diana—lopsided human beings whose wretched destiny it is to complicate further rather than help straighten out this enigma that is life

Some 40,000 of us die in auto crashes every year, so that detail didn't particularly distinguish these little sisters. Terrible, but it's the truth. And as for a pretty mother, at 29, taking a second mate, for happy years of motherhood and companionship—was that such a crime never to be forgiven?

"Mother," says another part of Diana's letter, "was always trying to make us like Uncle Rob as we called her husband But we saw through her devices"

In other words, you and Lily were ungracious little jealous minxes and did all you could to ruin your mother's chances for happiness in her marriage

I'm all for modern psychological methods when they deal with the problems of the immediate present Many good doctors and teachers and all good mothers know how to handle those cases that arise in connection with almost every child's development Their adroitness in analysis and method is amusingly evident to those of us who can remember our own young vagaries, inhibitions and fixations —only under simpler names As long as the psychologists take today, tell their patients just what's wrong today then I'm with them

But when they encourage us to dig into the past, to discover that at four months one's bottle was late in arriving and at three years Mother said she already had kissed us goodnight and was going downstairs now—and that these heinous crimes lived on, and maliganantly affected all our later years, then that is sheer nonsense

Silly? You'll find all these instances solemnly portrayed in a recent moving picture that supposedly represents a woman's experience in a madhouse These are the causes that sent her there.

THE GARDEN SPOT

Beware of Over-Cultivation

By Eldred E. Green

"TAKE IT EASY, You'll live longer," is a common saying and in the garden you will enjoy yourself more if you apply that principle. The most pathetic garden is the one that started out early in the spring as a grand affair and then fizzled out as the hot weather caused the worker to "done run out of ambition" as one lady put it.

The first factor is soil preparation. A clay, loam or any stiff soil is benefitted by a turning to loosen it up Plowing, spading, or rotary tilling will do the job In hand spading remember that you do not plant all the garden at once. Dig it as you need it. This will save backaches and keep a crop of weeds from starting on the soil that is turned too long ahead.

Sandy or light soils may need only a raking to fit them for planting. The soil needs to be loose; that is all.

In planting large perennials as peonies or trees and shrubs, the soil need only be prepared where the plants are to be set. The area in between can be taken care of later

Heavy soils will be aided if rotted humus of some kind is worked in. Leaves, old sawdust, manure, peat, compost are all valuable This can be mixed in when the soil is prepared Generally a depth of eight inches is enough for most plants. Trees and large shrubs may need more

Cultivation in the garden should be limited to one idea: killing weeds. In lawns and around shrubs the new preparations of 2-4D are fine; in the garden a light hoeing or scuffing of the soil is generally sufficient.

Watering is a chore unless a hose is able to reach. Watering and weeding can be kept to a minimum or eliminated if a good mulch is used Dried leaves, grass clippings, straw old manure sawdust or strips, of heavy, weighted paper can be used to cover the soil between plants or around larger ones. The mulch prevents weeds from taking hold and keeps the soil from drying out

Fertilizing may seem difficult but in the home garden a sack of a complete plant food is the best and cheapest way of adding fertility Manure is excellent if it can be obtained and worked into the soil. Testing for individual elements may be a pleasant pastime but the amount of special chemicals needed in most can be more easily added in a ready-mixed, balanced formula.

Pests may cause trouble but now there are many preparations that will control all of the garden pests with one spray. These combination products have been supplemented to good advantage by DDT, which most of them contain.

U.S. Filming Old Documents

Microfilm to Preserve Records for Posterity

A campaign to save part of the world's cultural heritage is being carried on by the United States library of congress

A library of congress laboratory in Mexico City, Mexico, has photographed 20,000 historical documents of northern Mexico. The library operates a second laboratory in Japan. A third project, still in the planning stage, is photographing medieval manuscripts of value in St. Catherine's monastery in Palestine

George T Smisor, head of the Mexico laboratory unit, recently returned from Washington where he conferred with library of congress officials.

"Both the state department and the library," said Smisor, "feel a responsibility for cooperating to preserve documents throughout the world, documents that are a part of our heritage and part of our culture.

"The United States is the only country in the world with the experience and the desire to do it."

The desire entails plenty of hard work Men from Smisor's unit have ridden muleback across Mexico's bleak Sierras to photograph precious manuscripts in old colonial towns. They have, to date, put on film the complete cabildos (records of city councils) for Durango from the 16th century to the time of Benito Juarez, the middle 19th century. Durango was a big operating base for the early church fathers.

Spring Dreams of '49

AT THIS TIME last season, the following facts had been rather definitely established:

The Red Sox and Yankees were to fight out the American League pennant race with Tigers and Indians in fairly close pursuit. The Dodgers and Cardinals were to take over the National League race with the Braves always threatening.

Grantland Rice

This seemed to be logical enough. No one knew anything about a kid pitcher named Gene Bearden and no one could guess that Lou Boudreau and Larry Doby would improve to any such extent as they did. Also, no one could figure the Cardinals would get such little help from their rookie crop, and the Dodgers would be scrambling around last place long after the season opened.

Now at least 10 clubs are indulging in early March dreams of October cash and glory. Here they are:

AMERICAN LEAGUE—Cleveland Indians, Boston Red Sox, New York Yankees, Philadelphia Athletics and the Detroit Tigers.

NATIONAL LEAGUE—Boston Braves, Brooklyn Dodgers, St. Louis Cardinals, New York Giants and the Pittsburgh Pirates, with Chicago's Cubs hanging around the outskirts.

There has seldom been a time in major league history where so many ball clubs in both leagues could be rated with a healthy chance to win. Something unforseen can happen to scatter them apart, but they could also come to the wire under two blankets.

The best ball club in the two leagues looks to be Cleveland. The second best club should be the Red Sox. We are leaning heavily on that "should be" adjunct.

THE BEST CLUB in the National League should be the Dodgers with their speed and youth, their quantity of strong arms and stout legs, plus their 1948 experience. But it will probably prove to be the Braves again.

If Billy Southworth could win a flag with Eddie Stanky out of action over two months and Warren Spahn afflicted with an off years (for Spahn), there is no particular reason why he should not win again with a few slight improvements and more help from these two standbys.

Also, I have a fair idea that Billy Southworth's Braves will come north in April the best-conditioned team in the older circuit. Southworth overlooks few bets when it comes to getting the best out of what he has to work with. He wastes less time in his training campaign than any manager I ever knew.

A Dip Into the Dark

With the first day of spring training less than a week away, we hereby climb out on the end of the limb of a palm tree which has no limbs to speak of.

Here are our nominations for the early October roundup that may prevent us from seeing the Army-Michigan football game:

AMERICAN LEAGUE—Cleveland Indians, Boston Red Sox, New York Yankees, Detroit Tigers, Philadelphia Athletics, St. Louis Browns, Chicago White Sox and the Washington Senators.

NATIONAL LEAGUE—Boston Braves, Brooklyn Dodgers, St. Louis Cardinals, Pittsburgh Pirates, New York Giants, Chicago Cubs, Philadelphia Phillies and the Cincinnati Reds.

You can cut out this prediction, if you care to, and save it for next October.

The two races are the toughest to pick that I can recall in the last two decades. Lou Boudreau's Cleveland Indians are better equipped than anyone else to win the American League pennant.

WEEKLY PICTURE STORY

Mush No More...

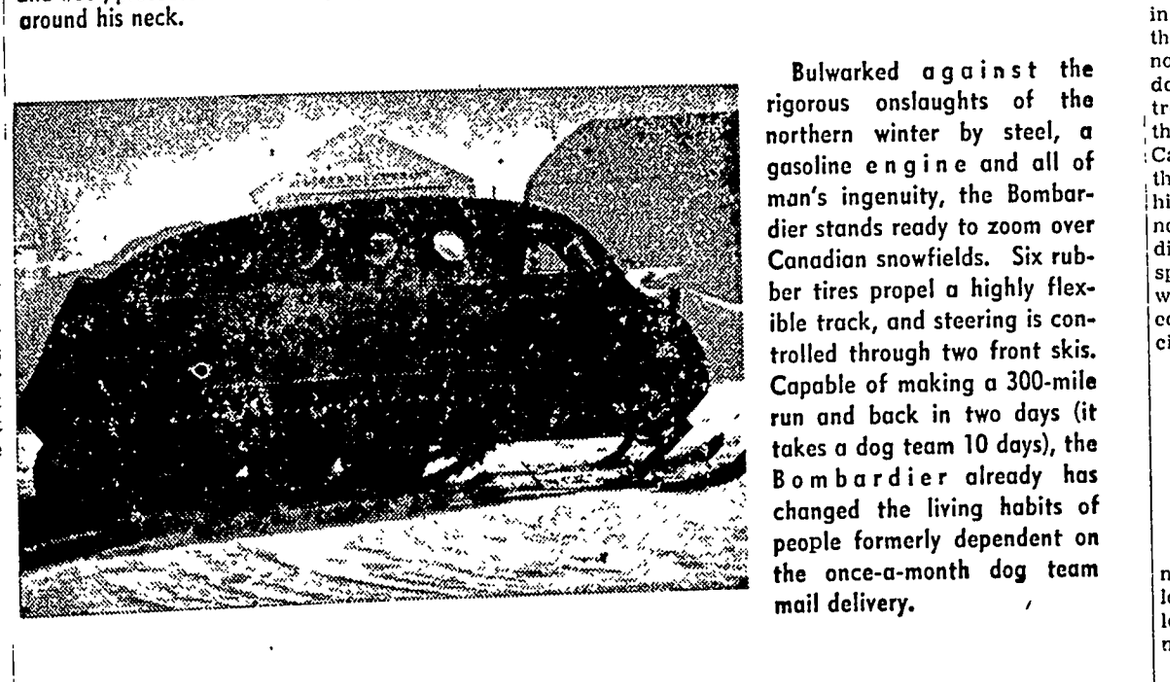
Up in northern Manitoba, Canada, they have a new kind of snow-mobile called the "Bombardier", the proponents of which claim it will go anywhere on snow or ice at a mile-a-minute clip, regardless of snowdrifts.

And the word around the frozen wastes of the North is that this snow-travelling contraption soon will supersede the dog teams and sleds which for generations have been the only practicable means of transportation in the aurora borealis country.

(Incidentally, the fresh-cheeked young thing sitting on the ice man's lap is Shirley Cane of Alberta. She's a skier and really doesn't belong with the rest of these pictures; but it's all right, isn't it?)

At the right is a man whose storied occupation apparently is destined for extinction. He is a dog team driver—a figure right out of the gripping history of the North—and he stands bundled against the minus-50-degrees temperature in layers of leather, fur and wool, protected from mishap by the polished trophy foot hanging around his neck.

Bulwarked against the rigorous onslaughts of the northern winter by steel, a gasoline engine and all of man's ingenuity, the Bombardier stands ready to zoom over Canadian snowfields. Six rubber tires propel a highly flexible track, and steering is controlled through two front skis. Capable of making a 300-mile run and back in two days (it takes a dog team 10 days), the Bombardier already has changed the living habits of people formerly dependent on the once-a-month dog team mail delivery.



A sinewy team of intelligent huskies pose for posterity. Hardened to snow, ice and winter wind, they have been more than a friend to man in northern Canada. Now mechanization is outpacing them.

SCRIPTURE: Mark 7:24-37 Luke 7 1-10.
DEVOTIONAL READING: Acts 10:34-45.

The Race Question

Lesson for March 27, 1949.

JESUS DID NOT Know there was a race question. That is to say, there was no question for him, though he well knew that his neighbors found the race problem a hot one. All the germs of any race problem, even of race riots, were there in Palestine as in all of our world today.

Dr. Foreman

First there was the feeling of racial superiority. Few, if any, peoples think of themselves as an inferior race. Nobody would mind being kicked around if he thought he deserved nothing better. The Jews, to which race Jesus belonged, were no exception to the rule They felt themselves the superior of any race on earth.

Two Sides of the Question

IN JESUS' time the Jew of Palestine was in the middle. The Romans, having conquered the land, were top-dog in Palestine. With the Romans, the Jews saw the under-side of the race question. But there were other races, much less pure than the Jews, races called "canaanite" for want of a better name These people were kicked around by the Jews, just as the Jews in turn were kicked around by the Romans Looking at the Canaanites, the Jews saw the race question from the top side.

In Palestine the wounds of race quarrels were made worse by the vinegar of religious differences. In those days it was taken for granted: Different race, different religion.

Jesus' neighbors and relatives in Nazareth, like most Jews, supposed that God would favor only the "chosen people," namely themselves So the Jew's resentment toward the Romans above him and his contempt of the Canaanites beneath him were made more bitter by his conviction that they would all end in hell except his own race.

What Jesus Did About It

THE TWO STORIES in our lesson (see the Scripture references) show the astonishingly simple way in which Jesus walked straight through those walls as if they did not exist. He passed no resolutions, denounced nobody; he simply treated all races alike. He helped the Roman army officer and the Canaanite woman precisely as if they had been Jews. (By the way, his remarks to that woman should not be misunderstood as rude. She did not take them that way. He spoke to her, we may well believe, with a smile, and she took him with equal good humor.) Jesus appreciated faith wherever he found it.

He was the last person to fancy that all human beings are alike. But he was the first to give all an equal chance. He took people as human beings, not as "Romans" or Canaanites."

He neither cringed to the Romans nor bullied the Canaanites. He looked at all men and women with level eyes, seeing not their skins nor their clothes, but their hearts.

What We Can Do

OUR NORTH AMERICA is also criss-crossed by walls of prejudice—racial, political and religious. In Canada (for example) there is the friction between Canadians of French and those of English or Scotch descent; in the United States (not by any means confined to the South) between Negroes and white people, or between Japanese and white people; between the "old stock" and recent immigrants; and so on. Those walls look pretty solid; but a Christian will find that if he follows Jesus' example he can walk right through them. Last winter a national interdenominational organization challenged its 28 million members and through them the Christian world, with one of the most sweeping declarations of human rights ever drafted by an American church body.

Hitting at every type of discrimination—racial, political, social, economic, religious—the group has challenged the Church to work for the creation of a non-segregated society "as proof of their sincerity."

Yet the real breakdown of human prejudices, hatreds and contempts, with the injustices growing out of these, does not come at one stroke by resolutions. It comes only by degrees, as Christ-inspired individuals make their own bright doorways.

Northern Town Warmed By Drift Currents

Hammerfest, on the island of Kvalo off the coast of Norway, is regarded as the most northern town of Europe.

Its latitude is 70 degrees 40 minutes north—about 10 minutes farther north than Point Barrow, Alaska. It is a prosperous city and has a normal population of several thousand.

In spite of its northern latitude, Hammerfest enjoys a comparatively mild climate; the average January temperature is a little below freezing and the harbor is always ice free; this is attributed to mild westerly winds, the drift currents of the Gulf Stream and/or those of the North Atlantic.

MROCK NEWS

STRANGE HOUSE"
Senior class of Klemme
chool has selected the 3
, comedy-mystery, "The House" by Carl Astrid
sentation on April 13th.

The production will be under the direction of Mrs. Robert Andrea who is responsible for many past successes. The leading roles have been assigned to Miss Iris Rosendahl and Mr. Robert Baack. Other members of the cast are: Donna Greiman, Marjorie Lau, Alice Meyer, Norma Early, Mildred Meinders, Phyllis Boland, Maurice Trumbell, Ardell Rosendahl and Wilford Back.

BAND

Evening rehearsals have started again as the band is preparing for the band contest. Last year the band prided themselves as they got a one in the State Contest. They hope they can bring that honor home again this year.

They are also preparing for a concert that is going to be given April 28. Advance ticket sales for this concert will begin April 11th.

STATE TOURNAMENT

Friday morning the six boys on the first team of the basketball squad left for Iowa City These six were: Robert Baack, Calvin Josten, Bill Back, Red Schmidt, Merlin Brinkman and Dick Kaduce. Mr. Patterson and Mr. Ahrenkiel went with the boys. They will stay for the final game Saturday night and be back in school on Monday morning. This is quite an event for the Shamrock team and we hope they have a fine time while in Iowa City.

INTERVIEWS

This week we are adding a new feature to our paper. It is an interview of teachers. For the next few weeks we shall carry this interview in our paper.

The first one on our list is Mrs. Betty Schawin. She teaches the fifth and sixth grades here in Klemme. She is from Garner and attended the Garner High School and State Teachers College at Cedar Falls. She has taught in a rural school three years, two years at Ventura, and two years here in Klemme. Her purpose in teaching is that she likes children and considers education important. The age group she favors are those in the fifth and sixth grades. Her favorite subjects are art and arithmetic.

Outside of her teaching activities, she is also a housewife. For a hobby she collects cups and saucers as well as salt and pepper shakers.

SENIOR INTERVIEW

Maurice Trumbell is the last senior on our list of interviews. His birthday is May 18, and he is 17 years old. He has blond hair and blue eyes. Two-crusted pies are his favorite food and he certainly does justice to them. His favorite subject is manual training. The kind of music he likes best are of the hillbilly or backwoods type His main ambition is to be a woodsman. His hobby is guns and from what we hear he is a pretty good shot. Hunting and fishing is his favorite pastime Maurice is what one might call an all around sportsman. His pet peeve is that there are too many girls in the senior class, (does it bother you that much Maurice?)

GOSSIP!

What about those letters Janice is getting from Kanawha?

Charlotte, if you don't want to go with "Tubby" why not let Audra have him?

What happened Madelyn, is Mildred the favorite attraction?

News

By Miriam Priebe

Friday the 7th and 8th grade had a winning basketball battle over the 5th and 6th grade The Junior High boys won 19 to 9, while the Junior High girls won 14 to 7.

Friday was also Lois Christians birthday, so she treated the room with froststicks. We sang the birthday song for her

After dinner today we had a health test over everthing we've had this year.

Thursday afternoon we listened to the basket ball game between Forest City and Ankeny. Lois Jacobs brought the radio.

Janice Swanson was absent most of the week because of illness.

In art we have been making posters. Arithmetic seems to be the hardest subject this six weeks for the eighth grade. We have been having interest problems and circle graphs.

READING

I don't get time to do much reading outside my regular business, but there is one yarn being spun that I do not miss. It is called "The Greatest Story Ever Told" and it is now running in The Des Moines Register. Having in the past read the first four books of the New Testament and now this, I feel qualified to state that this story may be to literature what Handel's "Messiah" is to music.

No Radical Changes Will Be Made in New Car Designs

Wider interiors, achieved largely by placing more of body instead of fenders over rear wheels, will be a quite general feature of new model automobiles to be introduced in the next six months.

It appears fairly well agreed in industry quarters that few mechanical changes, aside from increased horsepower, will be incorporated in initial 1948 models. Latest word in trade circles is that most of new models will be generously re-styled, and most of them will follow much the same pattern.

Aside from distinctively different body lines, re-designed instrument panels and other changes to enhance eye-appeal, there will be relatively few major changes in models between now and next February.

All the manufacturers still are working on their ideas of automatic gearshifts and transmissions. Relatively few of them will be ready for early 1948 models, however.

Inaudible Sound Waves Can Kill Insects, Mice

Sound waves which produce such intense heat that they can kill mice and small insects are being experimented with in army laboratories. In tests for the signal corps at Penn State college white mice died one minute after exposure to the ultrasonic waves, which are of such high pitch that they are inaudible to human ears. Roaches, fire-brats, mosquitoes, blow flies, meal worms and caterpillars were likewise killed by the sound waves.

Extensive possibilities for pest control were suggested by the experiments, but there was no indication that the discoveries might lead to a new war weapon.

In previous experiments the high-frequency waves have been found useful in detecting defects in metal castings and other materials. They also have been used in emulsifying or colloidizing liquids by dispersion, as is done in producing homogenized milk.

PRESIDENT FELL THROUGH FLOOR . . .

There'd Be Re-Joisting in the White House

. . . THE WORLD WOULD STAND AGHAST

H I. PHILLIPS

N AND THE TUB

ent Truman, in explaining ubble cost of around five dollars to repair the White declared — "My bathroom so that I had begun to fear go through the floor."

n't see why the President rned. He would have been the first president ever to have fallen from one floor to another in his bath; it would have made history.

For a century there might have been signs in the White House: "President Harry S. Truman, 32nd President of the United States, Landed Here" or "On This Spot Harry S. Truman Made the First Crash Landing Ever Made in a White House Bathtub, Glider Type."

Had Harry kept his mouth shut, let the building deteriorate and bravely crashed through the floor in his tub, it might have been far from a calamity so far as his fortunes are concerned. People love the dramatic these days. They crave entertainment and action as never before. There on the ground-floor in his second-floor bathtub amid the rubble, his head unbowed, he would have won a new grip on the public. The picture might have taken a place beside Washington and the Delaware in water exploits. We can imagine some painter glorifying it with an oil entitled, "Truman Crossing the Dilapidated Beams."

The accident would have given the people a new appreciation of what a president has to go through. It would have kindled a mood of warm sympathy and understanding. What man has ever stepped into a bathtub without at least a fleeting fear of an accident? And how many have known what it is to take a tumble in one? Can you fancy their feelings for a President who had stepped into a tub powl . . . gone down a flight or two!

This is an era of rumor, gossip and suspicion; the story would have spread that the Republicans had undermined the timbers, and this would have increased pity for the President. From coast to coast, across mountains and valleys, over brooks and rivers, from log cabin to mansion the one cry would have gone up: "How's Harry?" The world would have awaited breathlessly the hourly bulletins from the White House:

10 A M.—The White House morning statement read: "The President is doing well, but still suffering from his own amazement."

Noon—The President is resting. His face is not so red by 10 degrees as was after the mishap.

1 P. M.—Mrs. Truman was allowed to visit the President this afternoon. She asked him simply, "It seems mighty funny to me that you and the tub went down two flights, but your bathrobe remained on the hook upstairs!"

2 P. M.—President Truman got a telegram from Thomas E Dewey It read· "I join the bathtub users of America in my deepest gratitude that you piloted the tub to a safe landing and I sincerely hope you will soon be bathing again in the happiness and security which you have a right to expect from our country."

3 P. M.—Henry Wallace was asked to comment on the President's bathtub accident and replied: "It was too far away for me to know the exact facts. All I know is that you hear of nothing like that happening in Russia."

5 P. M.—The doctors said they would permit the President to be interviewed by radio and television "I only regret" Mr. Truman said, "that I have but one ceiling to give for my country."

The Mosaic

Grace Noll Crowell

HE who lives the Christ life day by day
Unknowingly creates a wonder-thing.
A beautiful mosaic, a bouquet
Of jewels set in gold, an offering
To place within God's hands when life is done
A brave resplendent thing of light and shade,
Each little priceless jewel, one by one,
In a design that life itself has made

And God will note the lovely inset gems,
Will mark the glowing rubies that are prayers,
The amethysts of patience, the clear stems
Of jade, where courage has outlived despairs,
The diamonds that are faith, the topaz light
Of hope that shone across the darkest days,
And surely He will take that little bright
Mosaic to His heart with words of praise.

FIRST AID to the AILING HOUSE

by Roger C. Whitman

QUESTION: My basement floor was painted some time ago, but the paint has worn off and I would like to fix up the floor so that the youngsters can use it for dancing. Because of the expense involved I would prefer not to lay asphalt tile. As it is now, there is powder about one-quarter-inch deep over the whole floor and the surface is not smooth, but full of small pin-holes.

ANSWER: You can treat the floor and get a good job, depending on how much labor you are willing to put into it. I would suggest that you look forward to laying asphalt tile as soon as you can manage it, for the tile would be much more comfortable underfoot than concrete, if the floor is to be used for dancing. In the meantime, you can paint the floor with an appropriate paint with a rubber base.

DANCING SHOES

By CHARLES DORIAN

WHILE a vast throng of theatre-goers passed through the exits of the Orpheum, the beautiful blonde attraction left quietly by the stage door on the arm of her most ardent admirer, the owner of the theatre and string of others

At the curb stood Max Berber's limousine, and just ahead of it, a taxi. Four maudlin "Collegians" having a sing-song, obstructed the entrance to Berber's car, but made way while the lady stepped in Then suddenly three of them gave Berber the bum's rush, while the fourth clambered in beside Paula Pauleen, tap dancer extraordinary.

Max spluttered and fumed while the three kidded him. A letter was pressed into his clenching fist and his car keys were frisked from him. The taxi jumped forward, and in a moment was followed by the limousine carrying the dancer and four members of the notorious Scarlet Gang in evening clothes and top hats, still simulating drunken collegians, singing to drown out the cries of the distressed dancer.

3-Minute Fiction

In the Holland Tunnel the sing-song ceased and one of the gang said to the girl:

"This is something new in kidnaps, sister. We're all jolly good fellows, members of a theatrical troupe (to the general public) But don't get us wrong We'd rub you out as quick as any Broadway mug if you failed for a minute to join the spirit of our little game Your big boy has just read our demands in a note left with him."

"I'll—I'll pay you," chatted the little dancer. "Please — my contract. I must dance every night."

THE CAR sped along for thirty miles and turned into a narrow road. License plates were switched and another fifty miles sped by. They stopped at a railroad village and parked the car on a side street. They changed their toppers for peak caps and entered the railroad station.

"Oh, you're the troupe from the opery house," grinned the operator. "Thought there was two girls in the party."

"One of us is a female impersonator, haw! haw!" laughed the spokesman. The operator laughed too, and began stamping the tickets. "Train's not due for thirty minutes yet," he apologized.,

"O.K. brother, we'll put on a little show while we're waiting." He strode over to Paula. "Smile, sister, SMILE," he hissed, and out loud. "Come on, Sally Rand, give the gentleman your best imitation of a fan dance."

Paula was ready to faint but entered into the game by dancing a whirling tap number that had the operator's eyes popping. Some singing followed and a bottle was passed around.

"Now, another dance," ordered the master of ceremonies.

"Just a slow one," pleaded Paula, "I'm very tired"

"Oh, all right,' yawned the fellow She made a long slow stride straight to the operator and whispered "Listen!" Then she performed a painfully punctuated dance with more body undulations than footwork.

The bottle passed around again and the operator went to his key, took an order, sent one, and in a few minutes the train was in. They boarded it.

Sargo was a small city A taxi was ready waiting for them and whisked them out into the country where they got out in front of a big house.

Every shadow exuded a police officer. Eight of them had pinioned the four "collegians" before the door opened, and two more seized the servant.

Paula promptly fainted. Two officers carried her to safety.

"This house has been under suspicion for a long time," said an officer to Paula "When that operator's message mentioned 'Sargo' we posted a squad at the house. Here's the car now which followed their taxi from the depot."

Oh, yes, Paula's dad had been a station agent and had taught her to tap dance the Morse code.

MISS KLEMME

(By Mrs. E. J. Arnold)

At the February meeting of the Amerncan Legion Auxiliary Mrs. Benn J. Coobs was unanimously elected Miss Klemme.

Mrs. Coobs is eligible to the Auxiliary through her husband, Benn J. Coobs, a veteran of World War I, and a member of the Klemme Post.

Miss Klemme is a charter member of the Adam-Schaefer unit which was organized in 1926. She assisted in the organization of this unit and has continuously each year held an office or chairmanship. The Auxiliary members look to her for final unbiased decisions in the weighty matters pertaining to their activities, knowing that her faithful attendance and work through these many years have given her a thorough knowledge and understanding of its vast program. She held the office of Treasurer and Secretary during the years of 1927, 28, 40, 41 and 1942. She was President of the organization during the years 1945 and 1946.

Perhaps one of her outstanding contributions of service has been her work connected with the Memorial Day Service Not only has she always helped with the making of wreaths and marching with the members, but has supervised the children as they decorate the veterans' graves. Mrs. Coobs is the only member familiar with the location of all these graves and it has been her job each year to take care of all the little details that are connected with the Memorial Day Service.

Mrs. Coobs has lived in or around Klemme since girlhood She is a faithful member of the Klemme Methodist Church and helps in its various organizations.

Mr. and Mrs. Coobs are the parents of two children, Melvin, a World War II veteran, married and attending school at the State University, Iowa City, and Peggy, Mrs. Walter Clark, of Des Moines

Wherever Auxiliary activities are in progress, there also is Miss Klemme. Nothing is too trivial nor anything too difficult for her to undertake

We salute Mrs. Leafy Coobs, our Miss Klemme.

Editors Note:—

Mrs. Benn Coobs was elected Miss Klemme to represent the local American Legion Auxiliary unit in the county contest. The above history of Miss Klemme was written by Mrs. Nellie Arnold.

FARM BUREAU ASKS STRONG SAFETY PROGRAM IN SPRING

Jack Dethmers, President of the Hancock County Farm Bureau, today reminded members and other farmers that the spring planting season also brings on the season when farm accidents increase.

Dethmers said today that the rate of farm accidents is nearly twice as high as that for industry in general, and urged that all farm machinery operators take special care this year to prevent accidents which in the past have resulted in serious injuries and in death to many farmers in this immediate area.

"Safety in the fields and on the highways is a must", Dethmers said, "If we are to cut down on the tremendous losses in life and damages which Iowa has suffered for the past several years Individual carelessness is the most likely cause of accidents. As farmers, we must do our own part in eliminating accidents at home

"Our Farm Bureau resolutions, written by members across the state, calls for full cooperating with all safety programs which will lessen the seriousness of our farm, farm home, highway and other accidents. Following is a quotation from those resolutions:

"Education through the use of modern teaching methods such as visual aids, can be effectively used to prevent future accidents We believe the work done by the extension Service should be supplemented by well-developed safety courses to be taught in public schools Courses in safe driving should be a major part of this program We approve of the fire prevention work carried on in our schools and communities

"We believe all highway laws should be strictly enforced A long-time program to eliminate traffic hazards such as narrow bridges, narrow roadways, and sharp turns should be adopted Future highways should be designed in such a manner that they take advantage of the latest safety measures We believe that many accidents are caused through lack of uniformity among the several states, in the placement of highway markers. In the interest of saving untold human suffering and property damage, we urge that immediate and favorable consideration be given this problem, to the end that there will be more intra-state and inter-state uniformity in the type and the placement of highway signals and markers"

DAIRYING AND THE NATIONAL WELFARE

The dairy industry has a tremendous bearing upon the national economy. Dairy products comprise more than 25 per cent of all food consumed annually in the nation.

More than 10,000,000 people are dependent upon the dairy industry for their livelihood, including those in allied industries and the families of employees. There are more than 2,500,000 dairy farm families, and about 250,000 workers are employed in processing and delivering dairy products.

Our 48 states have some 50,-000 distributors and about 40,-000 local plants that process milk, butter, cheese, ice cream and other dairy products. Milk is the largest single source of farm income in the United States. It is produced on about 75 percent of all the farms in the country.

Dairying is a major factor in soil conservation, restoring and increasing the richness of the land. Dairying is also a vital feature of our animal agriculture, by which Americans enjoy the highest dietary standard in the world. No other land so successfully converts it's gram crops into meat and other products of high nutritional value

Butterfat prices have not advanced as the price of beef and grain. Increased sales of oleomargarine have been accompanied by reduced butter consumption and a decline in dairy cattle. The number of milk cows at the beginning of 1948 was about 4 per cent less than at the beginning of 1947—and the smallest since 1940.

That decline is one of the sharpest percentage drops ever to occur in a single year, according to the Department of Agriculture.

The Sunday school teachers have a place for their materials in the cupboard and a book rack was made at each end of the cabinet. New draw drapes have been put up in the dining room and venetian blinds installed in the kitchen and hall.

A Message On School District Reorganization

(By Chas. S. Whitney)

The Hancock County Board of Education, through the office of the County Superintendent of Schools, is charged by law with the responsibility of creating plans for the Reorganization of School Districts to be presented to the people. Our 52nd General Assembly, two years ago, passed a School District Reorganization Bill, designed to give the 99 County Boards of Education and the State Department of Public Instruction the responsibility of making surveys, holding hearings, and finally presenting the plans for the Reorganization of School Districts by vote of the people.

In order to assist all groups with this problem, the County Board of Education has secured a new sound-color moving picture film of forty minutes running time entitled "Schoolhouse In The Red." We are now prepared to show this film to groups in the County for both afternoon and evening meetings. This picture was produced by Kellogg Foundation of Battle Creek, Michigan. If you desire this picture to be shown, contact the office of the County Superintendent, Garner, Iowa.

1948 TAX COLLECTIONS RUN AHEAD OF LAST YEAR

Over Half Million Dollars Turned In Up To Saturday P. M.

County Treasurer, Roy L. McMillin, reports that tax collections are running ahead of last year for the same period and up to Saturday collections had gone over the half million dollar mark.

McMillin received one check for $50,850 as payment of the first half of the Homestead Exemption for 1948 and another for $5,457.85 as first half on Military Exemption credit

These credits all go to the current tax account and pay this amount on the tax that would have been collected from the citizens of the county.

The State of Iowa mailed out checks over the state for $8,721,-095.41 as Homested credits, and Military credits were $859,849.-39.

This is only the second year that the State has refunded their share of what would have been borne by the county on Soldiers exemption. They pay to the county up to twenty five mills on each claim, Hancock County is above that rate in all townships.

The Northern Natural Gas Co. paid their tax in full with a check for $20,178.63. This covers their plant in Concord township and also their pipe lines over the county.

Just a few of the large tax collections have been received up to Saturday, March 26 and yet to date our collection have run far ahead of former years, and including Saturdays run the collections have gone over the half million mark.

School and Corporations are all asking when they will receive their first apportionment as their funds are very low It will be impossible to get this money out to them before the later part of April.

Many more payments of tax in full have been received this year, they all seem to have the money and feel that it is best to get them cleaned up at this time, says McMillin

Personal tax in the farm and business area are both showing a large increase over former years. The values that were placed upon the stock and merchandise accounts for this increase

Hancock County ranks far ahead of many of them in the state for early collections.

LARGE CROWD ATTENDED ORGAN RECITAL SUNDAY AFTERNOON

The Methodist Church had a capacity crowd out on Sunday afternoon to hear the organ recital on the new Wurlitzer organ by Mr. Emlyn Owen of Waterloo, who gave an hour and a half concert. People were present from Garner, Hayfield, Crystal Lake, Mason City and other nearby towns.

The ladies of the church, under the supervision of Mrs. Roy Arnold, served a tea with colorful sandwiches, cake, coffee, and mints to over three hundred after the program.

The church was also filled to near capacity for the Sunday morning service when the new organ was dedicated and Dr. F. Earl Burgess, district superintendent from Algona preached

KITES . . . AND SPRING

The surest sign of Spring is when the small fry are out flying kites. There were quite a number of kites flying in the skies around Klemme Sunday afternoon. There were also several kites which were not so successfully flown when they lodged in tree tops! Spring is here . . . we hope.

IKE HAILS RED CROSS . . . The national Red Cross campaign to raise 60 million dollars gets underway in Chicago with a distinguished cast. Left to right, Mayor Martin Kennelly, actress Helen Hayes, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, and film star James Stewart. Gen. Eisenhower, speaking of the Red Cross, said that in war it was a "manifestation of American teamwork and American spirit." The national campaign was given chief impetus by a radio address by Harry S. Truman and aided by a galaxy of Hollywood and radio stars in a 30-minute program.

WON'T BE LONG NOW UNTIL REAL THING . . . There's no surer harbinger of spring than the beginning of the baseball season, and it won't be long now until that is at hand. Then, pictures such as that above, will be showing actual play instead of training camp scenes as ball hawks and base-runners get underway. This photo shows Roy Campanella of the Brooklyn Dodgers practicing his sliding under the watchful eye of Branch Rickey, Jr., at the Dodgers' Vero Beach, Fla., training camp. Roy looks a little hefty here, but enough sessions like these and the old waistline will be back to normal.

CONGRESSIONAL "WATCH-DOG COMMITTEE TALKS CHINA AID . . . The joint congressional "watch-dog" committee on foreign aid got a first-hand report on conditions in China from Roger D. Lapham, E.C.A. mission chief to China. Lapham recommended that China be given 240 million dollars in economic assistance next year. His views were reported to the committee by Senator McCarran, Nevada, Democrat. Shown here, seated, Paul Hoffman, E.C.A. administrator, Lapham and McCarran. Standing, Representatives Sol Bloom, (who died a few days after this photo was taken) John Kee and John M. Vorys.

HERE'S HOW AIR REFUELING JOB WAS DONE . . . This photo of refueling of the Lucky Lady II, which flew non-stop around the world in 94 hours, shows how the B-50 was supplied with fuel for the 23,452 miles. The bomber was refueled in this fashion at four points on the flight—the Azores, Saudi Arabia, the Philippine Islands and the Hawaiian Islands. The refueling technique was worked out especially for the flight. A top officer of the air corps declared that the flight had definitely established the fact that the United States was now in position to deliver the atom bomb "wherever it might be required." that might be remained an unknown quantity.

Bill Dickey Returns

IN THE SPRING of 1928 a tall, lanky kid blew into the Yankee stadium from Little Rock. He had arrived via Little Rock, Muskogee, Jackson and Buffalo. He was then 21 years old, 6 feet 2, weighing 185 pounds. When he was born in Bastrop, La., back in 1907, he was formally christened William Malcolm Dickey. The William Malcolm soon gave way to plain Bill.

The point of this outbreak is that Bill Dickey, after a lapse of two years, is back with the Yankees again as a catching and pitching coach, a spot where he has no equal.

Grantland Rice

The Arkansas Traveler has at least two distinctions. He is about as fine a quail shot as you'll run across. And he comes close to being the best all around catcher baseball ever produced. His main challengers are Mickey Cochrane, Gabby Hartnett and Ray Schalk. Or maybe Johnny Kling from old Cub days.

Other catchers have had better arms, or arms just as good as Dickey's. All of them were faster. Mickey Cochrane was a ball-of-fire where Dickey was serene and unruffled. Bill's claim to fame rested on his hitting and the way he handled pitchers.

As far as I know, Dickey is the only catcher who drove in over 100 runs four years in succession—107 in 1936, 133 in 1937, 115 in 1938 and 105 in 1939. In these four years Dickey hit 102 home runs.

Smart pitchers have told me more than once that in a clutch they considered Bill Dickey the most dangerous man in baseball—and this wasn't barring Ruth, Gehrig, DiMaggio, Greenburg, Foxx or Williams.

Dickey remained with the Yankees from 1928 through 1946, when he returned to Little Rock for a two-year stay. He was lured back to the Yankees this last winter and this spring he will help Casey Stengel unravel two Yankee tangles—the catching and the pitching.

If these two snarls are straightened out, the Yankees can be a dangerous outfit. If not, they won't be. If the combined snarl and tangle can be handled, Stengel has the right man on hand for the job.

Dickey vs. Pitchers

"One reason I get such a kick out of catching is the chance to see Joe Gordon play second base," Bill said some years ago. "He keeps on making plays that can't be made."

It was always a treat to watch the way Dickey handled his pitchers, especially the young ones. Atley Donald won his first 12 games pitching to Dickey. Now and then you'd see Bill stroll out to the box. The two would talk for a while and then Dickey would return to work.

"What do you two talk about?" I asked.

"Oh, I'd say what a nice day it was. Or ask him how the folks were. Something like that. And then suggest we had all afternoon and not to hurry. A lot of pitchers when they lose control or get in trouble seem to pitch faster and faster. That's when you have to slow them down."

"I'll never forget watching that Dickey stick his big glove under his left arm and start for the box," Roger Bresnahan said one day. Bresnahan was John McGraw's pick for the all-time catcher.

"You could almost see the pitcher settling down. He was another pitcher after Dickey got through. Usually a catcher gets a little peeved or sore at a pitcher who can't locate the plate. Not Dickey. This was his chance to use his soothing syrup."

It must be admitted that Bill Dickey is a hard fellow to upset, mentally or physically. Bill's philosophy consists largely in accepting the breaks as they come. The good breaks never lift him too high nor the tough breaks let him down.

"It doesn't pay to get excited," Dickey advises. "Why get worried?" Bill wouldn't know an alibi if he bumped into one

Dickey as always carried a great admiration for Ted Williams' batting eye.

It is my guess that one Casey Stengel is an extremely lucky manager in having Bill Dickey hanging around. If anyone can work out the battery situation, a trifle lopsided or cockeyed with the Yankees, the tall, gangling fellow from Arkansas is the answer

Trail of The Cross

Lesson for April 3, 1949

THE TURNING-POINT In Jesus' career was dramatic. But the few friends who were present did not then realize what it meant. On a vacation journey, Jesus put to his most intimate friends this question: "Who do men say that I am?" Peter's answer, "Thou art the Christ," may sound obvious to us, but was not obvious then.

Dr. Foreman

It was sensational so much so that Jesus did not want the publicity that would come to him if that name "Christ" were freely circulated. For the word "Christ" meant nothing less than "King" To the Romans it would sound like treason; but to the Jews it would sound like Judgment Day

When Peter said, "You are the Christ," he was implying also: "You are immortal. You are the coming conqueror of the world. You are not in the same class with any other man. You will do for mankind what no other hero has ever done."

God's View and the Devil's

ON ALL THAT glowing devotion Jesus' next announcement fell like icy rain. In the ears of those friends of his it sounded like the bell of death Never before had Jusus told them anything like this, and they must have found it hard to believe. For he had not a word about a throne, nothing about success, nothing about mastering the world. Quite the contrary He must "suffer many things be rejected . . be killed" If they heard the words "rise again" too, the words made no impression.

For Jesus had announced what to them seemed impossible, absurd: He, the Christ, would be killed! Small wonder that Peter broke out—No, No! But Jesus would not compromise. He even called Peter "Satan" for thinking as he did.

The Christain church agrees with Jesus, not with Peter. We realize today, as Peter himself did afterwards, what the Cross of Christ means.

Buddha, founder of a very different religion, died in old age of overeating. Can you imagine Jesus doing that? Suppose Jesus had taken Peter's advice and made arrangements to retire comfortably where he would never see a cross? Then we never should have heard of him. He would not have been worth hearing from.

One Cross is Not Enough

YES, WE KNOW now that the Cross of Christ is important. But we are a good deal like Peter, after all. For we do not listen to what we do not like to hear. And the next words of Jesus, on that historic occasion, must have sounded then as they do now, most chilling of all. "Whosoever would come after me, let him take his own cross and follow me." In Jesus' time no one was ever seen carrying a cross who was not already under sentence of death and on his way to be executed.

Translated into modern terms, what Jesus said would sound as horrible as this: Any man who wishes to follow me must take his seat on the electric chair . . . must take his place in the lethal chamber . . . must put his neck in a noose . . . and follow me.

One cross is not enough. There must be other crosses. My road is a death-march. I want for my followers only those who are willing to take the same trail.

Trail of the Cross

SUCH WORDS sounded harsh then; they do still. But in the light of the centuries, we can see what Jesus meant, better than that little band of frightened men around Jesus who did not want to hear the words "suffer die" Jesus was ot advocating pain for pain's sake.

Why did Jesus set his own face toward the cross? The Christian answer is, He did it—for others. Now what is wrong with the world today? It isn't that we don't wish our neighbors well; but the troube is, we don't want to be bothered, our good-will is too tender to stand any strain, we will do anything for other people provided it doesn't hurt.

But the world can be saved only as men and women imitate and multiply the spirit of the crucified Christ.

Heat Resistance

A thick glass filled with a hot liquid is more likely to crack than a thin one because glass expands when heated and, being a poor conductor of heat, some sections expand more quickly than others. Thin glass is not cracked so readily by hot liquid or by immersion in hot water because the heat is able to reach all sections of the glass more quickly and cause it to expand together.

RILED ABOUT HARRY'S DIG AT PRESS . . .

Truman Chided for His 'Newspaper Stand'

. . . ELMER WRITES HIM AN OPEN LETTER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

LETTER FOR SPECIAL DELIVERY

Hon. Harry S. Truman,
Washington, D.C.
Dear Mr. President:

It pains me to note that you who over the long pull have seemed to me a horse-sense fellow who knew baloney when he saw it and who didn't like it thin, thick or medium, have now taken up that old cry about the newspapers being in a deep plot against the people. Harry, you know better.

"There are no full-page ads for our side," you say in taking a dig at the press. Now that is plain hassenpfeffer All the page ads in opposition to your policies or acts in a year, if stacked end on end, would be completely lost in the thousands of pages which the American newspapers have devoted to you in reporting your speeches and your programs. The space devoted to any one of your speeches in the papers of the country would swamp the total space consumed by all those full-page ads over a period of six months. The ads get into few papers; no paper fails to report your speeches to its fullest ability.

Few Presidents in history have had a friendlier press. The note of kindliness is to be found, even in the criticisms. The newspapers go to great expense to give you every break. It is doubtful if any occupant of the White House in 25 years has been more warmly treated by the newspapers of this country from coast to coast and from border to border.

—o—

At work or at play you get a million columns of newspaper space and any honest publicity expert in your own party would admit that the advertising is mostly good and that all the dough your opponents could lay a hand on wouldn't be enough to get that much space for their views. So you must be kidding when you say, "There are no full pages for our side."

"Selfish interests are on the job year in and year out, seven days a week and 24 hours a day They work through the editorial pages, the columnists and the commentators they control," you assert. "They twist and misrepresent the measures the people voted for."

—o—

Well, Harry, may the press of America never be as unfair to you as you are to the press when you make a crack like that. The fact twisters don't last long on any paper. No newspaper can misrepresent things long and survive.

• • •

In a democratic country where a free press has men of all parties and beliefs running newspapers, you don't expect them all to be 100 per cent for everything you propose, do you?

The press is one of America's great institutions, Harry. It is mighty important to the American system. It is important to the Democratic party, the Republican party and any other party. To deliberately undermine its prestige, create an atmosphere of distrust in its fairness and foster the notion that it is a tool of the privileged few is bad stuff, Mr. President. In every great crisis the press is a Number One Need. You've needed it, Harry. And you've had it as few Americans have had it "year in and year out, seven days a week and 24 hours a day " I thought you knew

Yours in surprise

Walter Donnelly, slated as the new undersecretary of state in charge of South American affairs, used to work in the circulation department of the New Haven Register back home Video does the darndest things As for instance Sid Caesar's use of that old Willie Howard skit on the interrupting waiter, with no credit or apology to anybody. And it was played on another program only a few weeks back . . "Knock On Any Door," widely proclaimed as a study in juvenile crime and a deterrent, is just another glorification of a hoodlum, with enough murders and stickups to keep a kid absorbed for weeks . . .

The youth of any political party cannot be ignored, but the oldsters, because of greater experience, if honest, are the better guides.

WE CANNOT understand why he delays
So often in his coming to our door
But oh, recall, he tarried two long days
And Lazarus dead! He knew the grief they bore,
And then he came and all was well again
And he will come to us as he came then
Often he allows our fragile boats
To be dashed sadly on a stormy sea,
But O dear hearts, be certain that he notes
Our terror and our toil, and surely he
Will move through the dark waters and speak
Peace
He bids us trust him for the storm to cease
And oh the long unanswered prayers! We wait.
We hope, we plead—too often we despair
And all the while our prayers accumulate
Within his loving heart—he holds them there
Testing our faith, then certain as the sun
In his own way he answers every one

Albino Horses

While cases of albino horses are known, ordinary white horses are not born white.

Horses of certain colors, particularly dappled grays, become lighter as they grow older—until they become pure white. Such horses do not give birth to white colts which are so rare that they are virtually unknown.

Many Arabian horses are light gray at birth and become pure white at the age of four or five years.

Bill Quinn
Started Young

By INEZ GERHARD

BILL QUINN, radio's "Little Herman," (ABC, Saturday evenings,) made his debut in show business with Adolphe Menjou, Ruth Roland and Marion Davies, at the age of five. His mother was an extra in the early days of filmmaking, at Fort Lee, N. J., and took Bill along. A stage career followed; came the depression, and he helped his mother and brother run a stationery store, perfect preparation for the setting of his radio show. His radio experience is extensive. Says Bill, "If there is a show that originated in New York in the past 12 or 13 years that I haven't at least read a commercial on, I don't know what it is."

Jerry Hausner just returned from a three months' tour of Europe; visited almost every country on the continent. His first radio assignment when he returned—playing the part of a dog and a used-car salesman on "The Great Gildersleeve."

Rudd Weatherwax arrived at NBC the other day all white and shaking. "This other car bumped my station wagon and threw Lassie off the seat onto the floor," he explained. "I rushed to look at the dog, of course; didn't pay any attention to damage on the car. It's beginning to dawn on me that I told the other guy it was my fault!" Lassie can easily pay the damages.

William Wyler, producer-director of Paramount's "The Heiress," watched part of World War I from his front yard as a boy; he lived in Mulhouse, France, a battleground. But he got into the last war, in the air force.

THE LAST CRY

By NORMAN FREILICH

HE STOOD outside his uncle's room, and as he listened for a brief moment to the labored breathing coming from within, his features became distorted by some sinister emotion. For the physical wreck within the room, his uncle stood between him and his inheritance. Only upon Jason Stoneleigh's death would he come into his estate, and only yesterday he learned from Doctor Phelps, his uncle's physician, that old Jason would perhaps live for years. It was then he had made his decision.

Alex clenched his fists as he thought how simple it would be to strangle the life out of the old man—but there was an easier way one which would never throw an inkling of suspicion his way His uncle kept a loaded gun in his room, eccentric as he was, he lived in fear of his life He kept only one servant, who would be away today, and there would be away today.

3-Minute Fiction

Alex smiled to himself, deeply satisfied with his plan, as he entered the room. He greeted his uncle with robust good cheer, but his uncle, a dark scowl upon his thin bony face, sat in his chair silently. There was no movement in his body.

"Aren't you feeling any better?" he asked with feigned concern, and then the eyes of the two men met, and their glance seemed to sweep aside all pretense between them

"It's been a long wait, hasn't it, Alex," the old man said with biting contempt, "but I'm afraid it will even be longer. Doctor Phelps has been quite encouraging."

Alex edged toward the desk in which the gun would be. He opened the drawer, felt the brittle coldness of steel. He swept about to Jason Stoneleigh, and the gun was in his hand. "You miserable wretch," he slurred, "I won't have to wait a day longer"

The old man's eyes stared wide with terror His body did not rise from his seat as though he might be frozen with fear. There was only a pitiful cry: "You'll hang for it, Alex!"

A MOMENT later, with detached calm, Alex wiped the gun clean of his own fingerprints, and then placed the weapon in the murdered man's hand He took one last glance about the room asuring himself there was no trace of evidence.

He was sleeping soundly that night, happy in the thought that in the morning he would be a wealthy man. But it was almost midnight when he was awakened by the police. He was ordered to get into his clothes at once.

"But I don't understand," he protested, his face white and drawn. Then he succeeded in controlling his fears, realizing, of course, that this would be only a routine investigation. Surely nothing could have gone wrong. He hastened into his clothes.

The police drove him to the house of his uncle. It seemed all of them were awaiting him—the state's attorney men, Jason's servant — and in the background—Doctor Phelps

"I'm here to give you gentlemen every help," he said, gravely, and the sound of his voice gave him sudden courage. "I'm terribly upset to hear of my uncle's suicide."

"Suicide? You're certain it was suicide?" The question was hurled roughly at him.

Panic gripped him, and his eyes turned desperately to Doctor Phelps "Surely, Doctor Phelps, you can tell them how absurd it is to think otherwise. You can tell them of my uncle's brooding over his ill-health."

The doctor stepped toward Alex, his face stern, almost menacing. "I can only tell them the truth, Alex—"

"Yes, the truth," Alex pleaded.

"Your uncle suffered a stroke a week ago—and the gun which killed Jason Stoneleigh was found in his right hand"—the doctor paused—"and that hand and the whole arm were paralyzed."

This week we interviewed Miss Lorraine Seim. She is from Kiester, Minnesota. She attended high school in Kiester and college at Waldorf in Forest City. She teaches kindergarten in Klemme and has taught here for three years. Klemme is the only place where she has taught. She favors the age group between the ages of 4-6.

Aside from her teaching activities Miss Seim has the interesting hobby of collecting kodak pictures.

THIRD AND FOURTH NEWS

Last week was Hobby Week. Some of the boys and girls brought parts of their hobbies to school. There were wishbones, four hundred of them, perfume bottles, cards, mechanical toys, soap, arrow heads and stones.

Our spring art activitites were kites, pictures of Cock Robin, and pussy willows in vases.

The third graders are studying a unit on clothing. So far we have had stories of wool, silk, and cotton.

The fourth graders were surprised when they found out by practice that uneven division wasn't so hard after all.

Demand For Butter Is Less Than Before War

Compared with other dairy products, butter is not bringing the premium that it was before the war, according to Francis Kutish, extension economist at Iowa State College.

Consumers are not willing to spend the same part of their income for butter that they did before the war, and the result has been a steady drop in butter prices. Kutish points out that margarine production has not been great enough to make the difference in butter demand.

He says that the price consumers will pay for butter depends mainly on three things: their income, their preference for butter over other fats, and the price of butter compared with the price of margarine.

Since butter prices are not as high as would be expected on the basis of current consumer incomes, Kutish says the explanation lies in lower demand for butter.

Careful Planning Gives A— NEW LOOK TO LIVING ROOM

Note the pleasing combination of plain and patterned areas in this room. Wise planning, say home furnishings authorities, is the key to creating a comfortable, cheerful, homelike living room.

Just as comfortable and colorful as any you would see pictured in a modern magazine is this living room in an Iowa rural home.

Its cheerful and inviting atmosphere is due to well-chosen color for the furnishings, the arrangement of the furniture, and to a pleasing combination of plain and patterned areas. All these factors are important in room planning, home furnishings authorities of Iowa State College tell us.

Of course, not all living rooms are this large, nor do they have picture windows, but there is much about this living room to give us food for thought in the planning of a different look for our own living rooms.

Color Counts

The young homemaker, who planned the furnishings herself, reasoned that because of the large wall areas and the great amount of light coming in the picture window, she could use a dark color (a new trend in home furnishings) on the walls and offset it with lighter, neutral color on the ceiling and floor. Thus, her walls are a deep forest green, the ceiling is light gray and the rug a deeper pearl gray.

Her units of upholstered furniture, in the immediate foreground, were carefully chosen in the same shade of green, while those grouped beside the fireplace are a cheerful, cheery red. Shades on the well-placed reading lamps near the fireplace repeat the green color.

The draperies at the wide window are the only large-patterned area in the room. Thus they prove a pleasing contrast to the other plain areas. The deep green leaf pattern against a soft white background with a touch of gray and yellow blended in makes the draperies a colorful unit which harmonizes with the other furnishings. The yellow color in the curtain is repeated in the two light-colored chairs on the opposite side of the room, and in small, well chosen accessories.

While not all living rooms would perhaps lend themselves to as much color, this living room does show what can be done by careful planning. A common fault in living rooms, we're told, is that they either have too much pattern, which makes for unrest, or they are too plain throughout, which makes for monotony.

Plan For Family Use

Planning for use is just as important as for appearances, of course. When you are house cleaning this spring, try out some different arrangements for your furniture. You will want reading unit, conversation unit, and a pleasing balance throughout the room.

Larger and more stationary pieces of furniture usually fit best, and look the best, if they are placed parallel with and against the wall. Balance a large piece of furniture in one end of the room with either a similar large piece of furniture at the opposite end of the room or by two or three smaller pieces.

You can place the smaller pieces of furniture at an angle, but move one out further than the others to break otherwise regular lines. This makes your room look less formal and more interesting.

If possible, group the pieces of furniture which are used together close to each other. A reading unit should be complete, from comfortable chair to table, reading lamp and magazine rack. Plan other units such as play or game groups, or a music group, in the same way.

Less Than Third of Farms Made Agricultural Record

American agriculture's production record during the war and since was accompished largely by less than a third of the nation's 5.9 million farms with a third of the farm population.

This is shown in a department of agriculture study of farms by total value of production. The survey breaks down farms into seven broad classifications, running from large-scale operations such as cattle ranches or big mechanized grain farms down to groups classed as nominal units representing mostly residential homes or places where elderly farmers have retired. The figures are based on the 1945 census of agriculture.

The study shows that approximately 1.7 million farms, representing 29 per cent of the total number of farms, turned out 76 per cent of the gross value of farm production in 1945. This means that 1.2 million farms contributed only 24 per cent of the gross value of farm production in that year. Products raised and consumed on the farm are not included.

The group that made the biggest single contribution to supplying food and fiber for the nation and to help feed a hungry world since the war is the medium family farms There were approximately 1.2 million of these in 1945 with a population of around 5½ million, or nearly a fifth of the total farm population They raised 30 per cent of the total gross value of farm production.

U. S. Makes Strong Effort To Control Cattle Disease

Prevalence of foot and mouth diseases in Mexico has brought about intensive efforts to keep the disease out of this country. The bureau of animal husbandry maintains a strict quarantine against all livestock and meat products from Mexico It also is cooperating with Mexican authorities in efforts to stamp out the disease in that country

Carefully selected range riders and inspectors, traveling by horse or truck, patrol the border to prevent importation of livestock into this country When Mexican livestock cross the Rio Grande and come out on American soil, the patrolmen promptly seize and destroy the animals Fences have been built along some stretches of the river by private interests to prevent stock from entering this country Sometimes attempts are made to smuggle animals and meat across the border, and the patrol seizes and destroys the animals or meat.

Not only is the border patrolled by men in motor vehicles or on horses, but also airplanes are used to inspect the border area. When an aerial observer detects a livestock movement or other signs on the Mexican side of the border that bear watching, he quickly notifies the ground patrol.

Fish As A Brain Food?

"Eat fish and grow smart" is an old, old saying, but scientists say that it's all the bunk. The Ohio division of conservation says: "Science does not recognize any one food as more beneficial to the brain than another. What food is good for the whole body is also good for the brain. Fish meat is considered rich in phosphorous and a German scientist of the nineteenth century started the idea, 'No phosphorous, no thought.' As a matter of fact, the human brain attains almost its full adult size during the first six years of a child's life and during the time when its chief article of diet is milk. The flesh of fish is lighter and more easily digested than most of the flesh meats and therefore it is a suitable and desirable food for so-called brain workers or persons engaged in occupations involving little physical exertion and much mental labor."

SOME PIG BROODER LAMPS DANGEROUS

Need To Be Right Type And Should Be Hung Beyond Reach Of Sow

Infrared heat lamps hanging too low in pig brooder houses not only make dangerous backscratchers for sows, but they also raise the cost of spring pig production.

According to reports received by Harold Beaty, extension agricultural engineer at Iowa State College, sows frequently break the heat lamps by rubbing up against them with a wet back.

Beaty recommends hanging the lamp at least 2½ feet above the floor, out of reach of the sow. One farmer reported the loss of a sow due to electrocution. The sow was able to reach the cord and chewed it until she bit into the bare wiring.

Reflectors Help

Metal reflectors over the heat lamps protect them from melting frost, which causes the lamps to explode. Newer lamps are now made of moisture-resistant pyrex.

All types of lamps are not adapted to use in pig brooders, says Beaty. Infrared lamps do not provide ultraviolet rays or vitamin D. Germicidal lamps should not be used as brooder lights because they don't put out the necessary heat and their germ-killing action may be very harmful to pigs. Regular ultraviolet lights or sun lights can be purchased and used, but Beaty cautions to use them only according to the manufacturer's directions.

Watch Size of Wiring

The size of wiring used in the brooder house often means the difference between economical use of lamps and watted power. Beaty points out that as much as 20 percent of the available heat from 110-watt lamps may be lost by trying to use wiring which carries only 100 volts.

Farmers over the state have different opinions as to which is better, the corner panel brooder or the overhead system. Some feel the corner panel type affords better protection for the pigs, but others believe the overhead system requires less time and keeps the sows in better condition.

Whichever brooding system is used, says Beaty, the main points to remember are that electric brooders don't have to be expensive, they are portable, and most important, little pig losses may be reduced as much as 50 percent per litter.

ROTATE PASTURE FOR SPRING PIGS

Need To Seed Three Lots To Furnish Abundance Of Feed For Season

The sooner sows and litters are put on clean ground and into the sunshine the greater are the chances of success in raising hogs, says E. L. Quaife, extension animal husbandman at Iowa State College.

The ideal situation, he says, is to put the sows and litters on clean, green pasture. This gives little pigs and their mothers opportunity to get the needed exercise, sunshine, and nutritious green feed.

Quaife recommends having 3 lots of pasture that can be rotated. He says that use of an electric fence makes this program practical from the standpoints of labor saving and economy.

Rape, Oats, Legumes

One pasture lot can be seeded early with oats and rape. This combination will make fast growth and provide early pasture. The second lot can be seeded with rape alone. The third lot can be seeded with oats, rape and alfalfa or clover.

It may pay farmers to seed alfalfa or clover with the oats and rape in the third lot, according to Quaife The oats can be harvested for grain and the seeding used the following year. Hog raisers operating on a smaller scale may want to drop the seeding from the third lot and use just oats and rape.

JOLLY WORKERS CLUB MET MARCH 9TH

The Jolly Workers Club met at the home of Anna Ausborn on Wednesday, March 9th. We had 17 members present and also had Mrs Waddingham, Mrs Knoke, Mrs. Erdman, Mrs. Nellie Ausborn and baby and Mrs. Voight as visitors.

We answered roll call by giving some very useful house cleaning hints. We also decided to send a dollar to the Red Cross.

We invited Nellie Ausborn to join our club. Dorothy Helps and Irene Marshall gave a follow up lesson on how to use your mixer. They made a cheese spread and it was very good served with crackers.

At our April meeting we are going to play Bingo for our recreation so each member is to bring a 50 cent Bingo prize so that everyone will win a prize

The meeting was dismissed and a lovely lunch was served by Anna Ausborn with Mildred Gruis as co-hostess. The April meeting will be at the home of Anna Conners with Alvina Helps as her assistant. Come and don't forget your Bingo prize and an Easter card.

Warn Of Loss Of Wildlife On Highways

The next few weeks will bring the heaviest loss of wildlife on Iowa's highway's, the state conservation commission reported Thursday

The commission warned that late March and early April take a heavy toll of wildlife because cover is "at its lowest effectiveness" Vegetation, flattened by wind, snow and rain, fails to provide hiding places and wildlife "is forced to the dangerous protection of the sheltered roadside ditches."

Food supplies are low, also, the commission said, and grain sifted from the farm-to-market movement onto the highways, provides a "temptation and often deadly" attraction.

The commission asked autoists to drive slower to conserve human life and wildlife."

PEDESTRIANS JUST CAN'T BACK INTO CARS

The Iowa pedestrian has made some headway against traffic odds during the last two years, according to a report by the state safety department.

The report lists 104 pedestrian traffic deaths in Iowa last year. This is 22 fewer than in 1946 and 2 less than in 1947. Pedestrians injured in Iowa traffic last year numbered 1,491.

Though this figure seems to mark an injury increase of almost 400, safety officials say it is due for the most part to better accident reporting required by the safety responsibility law.

The younger and older pedestrians suffered most last year, according to the report. Seven children 4 years old or younger and 31 youngsters between the ages of 5 and 14 died as pedestrians. In the 65 years and older age group, 34 persons died on streets and highways.

The safety education director Frank Ulish warned motorists to be more careful in the months ahead. "Good weather brings out the children and older people. At the same time traffic speeds are increasing," he said. "This is a killing combination unless all drivers assume the responsibility of caution."

Mid-block street crossings resulted in death to 39 and injury to 401 pedestrians last year, according to the report. Stepping into traffic from behind parked cars brought death to 17 and injury to 236.

At intersection unguarded by traffic signals, 11 persons walked to death and 284 to injury Of the 12 killed and 47 hurt while walking on highways, 7 of the dead and 34 of the injured were walking with traffic instead of gainst it as advised by safety officials.

At Clear Lake, Fred Moffett, retired farmer, is now in his 25th year of making baskets as a hobby Last winter he made about 30 baskets, from 3 trees. Black ash and maple were used and the baskets are woven so skillfully that no glue, and only a few small tacks, are needed to hold them together.

HAWKEYE BEANS IN GOOD SUPPLY NOW

Large supplies of Hawkeye soybeans still are available for planting this season, according to Joe L. Robinson, secretary of the Iowa Agricultural Experiment Association.

Growers wishing to secure beans for 1949 planting should contact their county extension director immediately to locate sources of seed.

Hawkeye is recommended for northern and central Iowa. It may be used for late plantings in southern Iowa, especially on the extremely fertile bottom lands where other varieties tend to lodge.

As compared to Lincoln, the Hawkeye stands up better, matures earlier, and yields almost as well. Hawkeye yields 5 to 6 bushels more than Richland, is about 4 inches taller and has a higher oil content. It may replace the Richland acreage in the near future.

The maximum price for blue tag certified Hawkeye is $4.22 per bushel f. o. b delivery point. If the county extension director cannot locate sources of Hawkeye in his county or adjoining ones, foundation Hawkeye seed may be obtained from the Committee for Agricultural Development, Ames, Iowa. This seed is $4.22 per bushel f. o. b Ames.

To be eligible for foundation seed, applications must be accompanied by a letter of recommendation from the county extension director.

For Large Group Get-Togethers—
SERVE BUFFET POT LUCK

Nothing looks better than an attractive buffet table with plenty of food. Make it easy for everyone to serve himself by thoughtful arrangement of dishes. Main dishes come first, followed by the vegetables, salads, sandwiches or rolls, beverage and finally dessert.

Remember the good old days when the whole family gathered at grandma's house for one of her extra special dinners? Grandma usually spent the entire day in the kitchen getting ready for the event It's a wonder she wasn't too worn out to enjoy herself afterward.

A family get-together these days can be easier for the modern hostess if everyone helps out to make it an informal pot-luck served buffet style, says Jewel Graham, nutritionist at Iowa State College

Of course this calls for some beforehand planning by the hostess She may want to suggest the menu and decide who's going to bring what. Perhaps Aunt Mamie could bring her special rolls, Cousin Sue might bring the salad and Cousin Marie the dessert.

When serving a buffet meal, Miss Graham says it pays to remember that some foods are hard to eat on a tray It's a good idea to choose fork foods. Anything that's hard to eat is sure to make trouble

Make Table Attractive

It's the job of the hostess to see that the buffet table is well organized. The table should be large enough so that it isn't crowded. There's no reason why a pot-luck table should have a helter-skelter look.

The dishes shoud be placed on the table so that the family can move around it with their right hands nearest the table edge. This makes it easier for them to serve themselves. The main dish comes first, the vegetables and salad are next then the sandwiches or rolls. Beverages silver and napkins are last.

Family pot-lucks can be a lot more fun if everyone pitches in to help the hostess. Someone might arrange the food on the table, someone else could serve the beverage and still another could replenish the table with hot foods

Pot-luck meals are also a good way to serve large groups. They're popular for church socials, all-day meetings and family nights.

Community pot-lucks usually require more than one person's planning Miss Graham suggests avoiding confusion by organizing committees to handle each job. One person should be in charge of providing a suitable tablecloth.

Two women can make and serve the coffee. Two others might be in charge of arranging the dining table. It's a good idea if they direct placing of the dishes of food.

In addition there might be two responsible for arranging the dessert course and two to see that everything is cleared away after the meal

Don't Overcrowd Table

Plan to place only enough food on the table at one time to give variety to the meal, Miss Graham advises. She suggests serving one or two protein dishes, two or three vegetables, two or three salads, and sandwiches and relishes at first. Later these can be replenished with other dishes.

When it's time to eat, the line forms at the end of the table where the main dishes are. Special guests should be among the first to be served.

Unless the table is crowded, beverages may be poured at one end of the table. Otherwise, they may be put on a smaller table or passed on a tray when everyone is seated.

When everyone's had a chance at second helpings, the dessert committee should clear the table and arrange the dessert dishes.

After the meal, the clearing away committee does a clean-up job.

CATTLE GRUBS AND LICE CUT DAIRYMAN'S PROFIT

This year cattle grubs and an exceptionally large number of lice are eating up part of the dairyman's profit, says Floyd Arnold, extension dairyman at Iowa State College.

Cows may be lousy without the dairyman suspecting it, Arnold says. If cows lick themselves a lot and act uneasy, and if hair is rubbed off or is matted with the appearance of dandruff near the tail head, lice are present. Grubs can be detected by running your hand along the cow's back and feeling the bumps or warbles.

Harold Gunderson, extension entomologist at the college, says it is possible to treat for lice and grubs at the same time. A spray composed of DDT and rotenone must be used in this case. DDT alone will not kill grubs. Rotenone alone doesn't last long enough to clean up lice with treatment.

Farmers wishing to treat for lice alone can do either by a single spraying with DDT or by two dustings with rotenone 16 days apart.

For treatment of grubs only, Gunderson recommends rotenone dust or spry at 15-day intervals on dairy stock. To clean up a dairy herd and prevent further difficulties with heelflies and grubs, treat all dairy stock, not just the milk cows.

HEAVY RUNS OF CATTLE MAY HIT MARKETS SOON

Heavy runs of cattle can be expected on the market within the next few months, according to Francis Kutish, extension economist at Iowa State College.

The number of cattle in feedlots January 1 was the biggest in history. Numbers were 19 percent greater than last year, with Corn Belt feeders having 22 percent more on feed

A high percentage of the cattle to be marketed will be of the better grades this year, Kutish says. A lot of well finished cows and heifers will be marketed, too. The biggest increase in cattle population is in classes weighing over 900 lbs.

Native cattle account for part of the big boost in numbers. When corn supplies are high a lot of native cattle are fed and, too, more feeders are purchased, the economist points out.

Present signs indicate that more long-fed cattle will be on the market this summer and fall. Kutish thinks the premium for better quality cattle won't be as high this year as it was in 1948.

Boards Approve Highway Work In Hancock County

The Hancock County board of approval, consisting of the board of supervisors and one representative from each of the 16 township boards of trustees, met and approved the highway construction program for the local roads in Hancock County for the year 1949.

County Engineer Charles F. Merten states that the program calls for 9 miles of grading and gravel surfacing, one mile of gravel surfacing only and the construction of 5 bridges and the estimated cost of the project is $40,900.

A letting on the project will be held in the near future.

NEW OATS CAN BE SOWN LATER THAN OLD KINDS

While sowing oats early still pays, the sowing date isn't as critical as it used to be, according to L. C. Burnett, Iowa State College agronomist.

This is good news for the farmer who for some reason or other isn't able to get his oats in on time this spring. A few days delay in sowing may not effect yields significantly if newer varieties such as Clinton are grown, according to Burnett.

In experiments conducted by agronomists at the college a delay of 9 days in sowing date only delayed maturity 2 days. A 20-day sowing delay pushed maturity back only 5 days. Plant height was hardly affected while test weight and yield dropped off slowly at first, then more rapidly as the sowing date was postponed.

Yields of Clinton and Benton did not decrease when sowed April 15, or 9 days after the earliest sowing date. Other Bond derivaties gave similar results. Burnett points out that apparently these strains have more tolerance to sowing delays than older varieties used 20 years ago

One reason for sowing the older varities early was to avoid damage from plant disease and hot weather Young seedlings were given time to get a start before diseases became active. Present oat varieties are more resistant to disease.

STATE PARKS OPEN
Some Roads Closed During Spring Thaws

All Iowa state parks will remain open to visitors throughout the spring However, W. A. Rush, Superintendent of Parks, advises that this year as in the past, roads into the parks will be closed when road beds are softened by driving over them will cause damages. Visitors are cautioned that if local roads are soft and cut by traffic, they may expect to find the park roads barracaded Visitors may walk in, however, to use picnicing facilities

SOIL TEST NOW SHOULD BE FOR CORN, NOT

Take soil samples now fields where corn will be ed rather than from the ground, farmers were ad this week by J. M. Fitts, he the Iowa State College Testing Labratory

Reason for this recomm tion is that it requires 3 from the time the labratory a sample until it can be and the results sent back farmer. Fitts pointed out as soon as fields are in shap taking samples, it will be to sow oats, and too lat finding out what soil nee fertilizer.

On the other hand, the plenty of time to take sa from corn ground Fitts that he is not trying to courage folks from having tested. He is only asking ers to plan their soil t work a few weeks in ad so that they won't be disap ed when samples taken th minute aren't tested in tim the results to be useful.

Fitts also announced tha charge for the soil testing ice has been raised to $1 merly, the charge was 75 per sample. Reason for the is to put the soil testing s more nearly on a pay-th basis. Even with the inc however, Fitts said tha charge does not completely er the cost of testing.

Each sample is tested lime, phosphorus and pota deficiencies. Directions for ing samples and for se them to the labratory at may be obtained from county extension office

Jews Improve Palestine, Encyclopedia Editor Says

"An independent Jewish state may prove to be one of the most significant social and economic experiments of our age," says Edward L. Throm, social science editor of World Book encyclopedia.

Present day Palestine, often called the Holy Land because it is sacred to the three great religions of Judaism, Christianity and Islam, has been torn between old and new civilizations for the last 30 years. Ancient Arab villages are inconspicuous beside modern Jewish cities. The metropolis of Tel Aviv, founded by the Jews in 1909, is the second largest city in Palestine and the largest self-governing Jewish city in the world.

Throm pointed out that before the arrival of Jewish settlers under the terms of the 1917 Balfour Declaration, Palestine's agriculture and industry was at a minimum The death rate was alarming, and few educational facilities were available.

Except near the coastal plains and inland valleys, which are much like Southern California, Palestine was a land of sandy wastes. Jewish settlers bought wasteland from the Arabs and transformed it into rich farmland by use of irrigation.

In the 1920's there were a few factories and wineries. Today there are thousands of industries which produce soap, chemicals, woodwork, cement, textiles, leather goods and clothing. Jewish engineers dammed the waters of the Jordan and Yarmuq rivers and gave Palestine its first electric power station, completed in 1932.

Animal Health Endangered By Careless Use of Sulfa

Five dangers in the careless use of sulfa drugs for treatment of livestock diseases are cited in a warning issued by American Foundation for Animal Health.

Sulfas work wonders in relieving certain diseases, the bulletin says, but "in the hands of inexperienced persons they actually may endanger an animal's health."

Unless plenty of water is available to the animal at all times, the patient is unable to excrete the drug and precipitation may occur in the kidneys. Forced intake of water, involving use of the stomach tube, may be necessary.

Any toxic reaction to the sulfa must be detected at once.

Treatment may be useless or harmful of sulfa drugs are given for too short or too long a period of time. The dosage must not be decreased too soon after the temperature becomes normal.

Sulfa drugs may be useless, too, if treatments are not given often enough during the critical period.

Young stock may be harmed unless the dosage is proportionately less for young than for adult animals.

Close cooperation between the veterinarian and the animal owner is urged by the foundation to insure the safe and beneficial use of sulfa and similar drugs employed in livestock medication.

Painting Panels with Aluminum

When the aluminum wall panels on industrial buildings are to be painted for decoration, use of an inhibitive primer is not required unless the building is located where corrosive industrial fume or salt-laden air is present. Good adhesion and good bonding for subsequent coats are major considerations. Any good metal primer, except those containing lead pigments, may be employed. Aluminum paint of the metal and masonry type will give good results under these conditions. Sometimes it may be desirable to apply only a single coat of paint to obtain a uniform appearance. Here an aluminum paint made with leaf-free aluminum paste in a long oil varnish vehicle has been found to give a soft, uniform texture to the surface.

Death Rate Among Insured

Death rate from all causes among U. S. life insurance policyholders reached a new low in 1947 at 737 9 per 100,000, with declines shown for practically all causes of death including heart disease and cancer, the Life Insurance Association of America reports. The 737.9 rate compares with 773 1 in 1946 and 763.9 in 1942, The previous lowest rate. These results are indicated by the experience of companies representing 73 per cent of the ordinary and industrial life insurance policies in force in all U. S. companies. Heart diseases of all kinds constituted the leading cause of death among policyholders last year. Nearly half of all the deaths included in the survey were attributed to heart diseases, cerebral hemorrhage and nephritis which together make up the principal diseases in the group called cardiovascular-renal diseases. The combined death rate from these causes in 1947 was 361.5 per 100,000 policyholders.

Auto Age Gets Horse Laugh

A horse has a better chance of staying healthy today than it did in the heyday of the old hitching post, according to livestock health workers. The community hitching post of a few decades ago was a trading post for equine diseases, and every whinny or nose-rub gave infectious germs a chance to pounce on a new victim. But when people switched from horses to automobiles for their jaunts into town, horses stayed home on the farm and kept their germs to themselves. As a result, certain infectious diseases once prevalent in horses, such as glanders, now have dropped to minor importance.

Lady Luck Leads Finders To Many Buried Treasures

Geological knowledge is handy in hunting a gold mine and archeological lore does no harm when digging for buried cities. But some of history's most exciting finds have come about through sheer chance, involving people whose minds were on other things.

The recent experience of striking English miners, who discovered valuable fossil remains while passing their "stay-down" time, chipping at the mine roof, recalls the odd fact that the first black diamonds to serve industry were turned up in a door weight.

The homely, black substance, which is a form of carbon but infin tely harder and purer than coal, seemed of little consequence when it was first discovered in Brazil in the 1800's', notes National Geographic society.

Then an Amsterdam diamond cutter tried powdering a bit of it from his souvenir door weight to polish a difficult stone. It worked so well that eventually its use spread to industrial drills and other tools requiring hardness and precision.

Lady Luck often looks over the shoulders of farmers and fishermen. An Italian peasant digging a well in 1748 struck some ruins which turned out to be the lost city of Pompeii. A few years ago, an English farmer plowed up a priceless collection of early Roman silver which had been missed by archeologists digging in the same field.

Origin of Peeping Tom Explained by Researcher

First "Peeping Tom" really had something to peep at, according to historical research conducted for World Book encyclopedia.

Dr. George F. Reynolds, University of Colorado, explains that Lady Godiva, the gal who rode horseback clad only in her flowing locks, is responsible for giving our language the name "Peeping Tom."

According to the legend, the very modest and refined Lady Godiva asked her husband to reduce the taxes he imposed as Lord of Coventry. The lord snorted that he would reduce taxes on the day she rode down the main street clad only in her birthday suit.

To her lord's amazement and the consternation of the village wives, Lady Godiva prepared to make her famous ride The village ladies appealed to the local boys to stay indoors and spare Lady Godiva any embarrassment.

The legend relates that all the villagers went indoors and closed the shutters. The men modestly avoided even coming close to the shutters—that is, all except Tom the tailor—he peeked!

The story goes that the tailor's pecking was discovered because he was struck blind.

For centuries a fair was held to celebrate Lady Godiva's heroism, and the name "Peeping Tom" has become a standard phrase in the English language.

U. S. Seed Export

During the war, exports of seeds to Europe increased greatly despite the submarine menace and other transportation difficulties The U. S. government became the largest buyer and exporter of seeds. From the fall of 1942 until mid-November of this year the commodity credit corporation shipped more than 367 million pounds of field seeds and many million pounds of vegetable seeds. More seed corn than any other seed was exported by the government. It was followed by other seeds in this order: Austrian-Winter peas, wheat, vetch, timothy, rye, orchard grass, cotton, ryegrass, Sudan grass, peanuts, red clover, sorghum, sugar beet, Kentucky bluegrass, and crested wheatgrass. Large quantities were also shipped of alfalfa, alsike clover, white clover, mixtures of alsike and white clover, bromegrass, meadow fescue, millet, redtop, hemp, rape, soybeans, and sunflower seed

Study Blood Parasites

A group of scientists of the California division of fish and game and the Hooper foundation of the University of California have completed a two-year study of blood parasites in birds in the Bakersfield area. The scientists were particularly concerned with mosquito-borne bird malarial parasites, in hopes that information gained might be helpful in their studies of encephalitis in the Bakersfied area. A total of over 6,000 blood smears were obtained from wild birds during the two-year study, chiefly from areas close to Bakersfield Analysis of the blood smears disclosed the existence in the birds of the malarial parasites as well as other kinds of parasites. Bird malaria is not communicable to man.

Beaver—Biggest Rat of All

Because he is the greatest engineer and architect in the animal kingdom, the fact that the beaver is a member of the rat family frequently is overlooked. But he is the biggest rat of all, frequently getting up to 60 pounds in weight. These amazing engineers, who were given teeth for saws, go downstream from their home and build a dam. This backs up deep waters which hide the entrance to their home and give them a good pool in which to hide from their enemies and to nail fish. The beaver lives on the bark of trees he gnaws as he cuts them down. He stacks up a woodpile for the winter and when cold weather comes he feasts on it.

Arctic Isle Weather Bases Mark New Conquest of North

Like a slow counter-glacial movement toward the North Pole, man's gradual extension of settlements into the Arctic is blowing the warm breath of civilization deeper and deeper into the frozen northern frontier.

Two new weather stations to be set up by Canadian and U. S. meteorologists at Prince Patrick and Ellef Ringnes islands lie within 850 and 750 miles, respectively, of the North Pole, notes National Geographic society.

One of the many land fragments reaching beyond Canada's mainland, Ellef Ringnes, the nearest of the islands, is about 2,650 airline miles northwest of New York City. Looking across the Arctic short cut toward Siberia and the northern coast of Europe, this island is 2,700 miles from Leningrad, 2,900 miles from London.

Prince Patrick and Ellef Ringnes are part of Canada's vast mainland and island region known as the Northwest Territories. Stretching northwest of Hudson bay, this part of the world once was discounted as inaccessible and lacking in natural wealth.

Today, it is taking on increasing significance as a result of the discovery of its potentially rich mineral resources and the far-reaching global developments of air transport.

CAA Prohibits 2,4-D Use In Weed-Killing Flights

Dusting of weed-killing 2,4-D dusts from airplanes has been prohibited by D. W. Rentzer, administrator of the CAA, at request of the U. S. department of agriculture, following many complaints that drifting dust had injured cotton and other broad-leafed crops. When waivers are issued to operators using aircraft for dusting or spraying, a special provision will be included which will prohibit use of 2,4-D in dust form. The restriction will not apply to 2,4-D sprays or to insecticide and fungicide dusts such as are used to destroy the boll weevil and specific plant diseases.

Use of the chemical 2,4-D was developed during the war by agriculture department scientists as an effective weed killer for many of the most troublesome weeds common on farms and on city lawns. It kills most broadleafed plants and is not injurious to most members of the grass family when properly used. Because of this fact it is now widely used to help control bindweed and other broad-leafed weeds in grain fields. It is being used with good results on weeds in corn, which is a member of the grass family.

Election Returns. . . .

Now that the smoke and noise of election has blown away we know who to call when the neighbors' chickens walk across somebody's sidewalk. We can do that or open the door and holler "SHOO."

Melt butter, add flour and blend Add milk and cook, stirring constantly, until thick. Add cheese and seasonings and cook over very low heat until cheese is melted. Add potatoes and well beaten egg yolks. Fold in stiffly beaten whites. Turn into a large or into individual casseroles which have been buttered and bake in a moderately (325°) slow oven for 40 to 60 minutes

Light-as-a-feather cheese and potato souffle is an ideal way to serve the family more milk, for cheese is a concentrated form of milk. It's delicious as a luncheon dish or a supper dish with a meatless meal.

BAKED BEANS, prepared as they are in the following recipe, are tasty and filling, guaranteed to take the edge off sharp appetites.

Lenten Baked Beans
(Serves 4-6)

- ¾ cup minced onion
- 1½ cups minced green pepper
- 4 tablespoons fat or salad oil
- 4 cups cooked or canned baked beans
- ½ cup chili sauce
- ¾ cup grated American cheese
- ½ cup buttered bread crumbs

Saute onion and green pepper in fat until tender. Add beans and arrange in a greased casserole, alternating layers of the beans with cheese. Top with crumbs. Bake in a hot (400°) oven for 30 minutes.

When you ready the dough for rising, grease the top of it lightly with butter, fat or salad oil, and cover with a clean towel.

Light greasing helps prevent a crust from forming on the dough. The towel prevents dust from coming in contact with the bread.

Bread and rolls should be removed from their pans immediately after baking so they will not steam and become soggy.

If you like a soft crust on rolls, brush them with melted butter as soon as you finish baking.

MIRROR of your MIND ● ● ● Hidden Sides Of Character

By Lawrence Gould

Can a "nice girl" love a criminal?

Answer: Of course. There are many instances on record of criminals having wives or sweethearts who were decent, law-abiding women. But whether she's conscious of the fact or not—and frequently she isn't—at bottom the woman usually falls in love because the man's lawless behavior gives a second-hand expression to part of her character which she has always repressed and believes she disapproves of. And the criminal in turn may see in a good woman a side of himself which still survives despite his efforts to destroy it.

Is feeble-mindedness hereditary?

Answer: Inherited weakness is not the main factor in most cases. Mental deficiency is not a disease; it is a symptom which may be produced by many causes, among which heredity is relatively minor. These causes may include early mental illness, injury before, during, or after birth, and glandular disorders. Nor can the degree of the defect be estimated by "intelligence tests" alone, but by study of the entire personality, including the extent to which thinking ability is paralyzed by fear, or by a feeling of being "rejected."

Do "subconscious" and "unconscious" mean the same?

Answer: No, though the two words are frequently confused in popular writing on psychology. While psychiatrists seldom use it, "subconscious" describes the memories and ideas which are not "in your mind" at the moment but are where you can recall them if you want to—like your first impression of the girl you married. Your "unconscious" mind contains a mass of fears and urges you know nothing at all about and can be aware of only if somebody shows them to you. The real reasons why you fell in love were probably "unconscious."

Blood Pressure and Rice Diet

By Dr. James W. Barton

BECAUSE it is known that the Chinese, as a race, have a lower blood pressure than those in America, it is only natural that it has been thought that it is because rice is their main food.

While food does have something to do with blood pressure, the principal reason for their lower blood pressure is their philosophical, calm way of living.

It is known that after Chinese come to America to live, their blood pressure gradually increases. And when citizens of America live in China for a few years, and learn to live more like the Chinese, their blood pressure decreases.

Because it is known that high blood pressure causes heart strokes (coronary thrombosis) and brain strokes (apoplexy), physicians have been investigating the effects of the rice diet on blood pressure. Instead of eating the usual meals of meat and vegetables, patients with high blood pressure have a diet consisting of rice and fruit juices.

It has been found in a closely followed series of cases that all patients put on the rice diet lose weight for the first three weeks while the body adjusts its water balance.

While depression of spirits occurs during the first few weeks and many patients refuse to continue the diet, if they can be persuaded to persist for some time longer, they lose this depression of spirits and feel better. However, once off the diet, they won't go back on.

While rice and fruit juices undoubtedly help to prevent a rise in blood pressure, the very fact that weight is lost "only for the first three weeks" of the rice diet points to the water held in the blood and tissues by the salt in the food as the real cause of decrease in blood pressure. Rice and fruit juices contain little or no salt. Thus, by cutting down on table salt in and on foods and also on salt foods for three weeks, it would be worthwhile to go on the rice diet for high blood pressure.

★ HEALTH NOTES ★

When there is distress from gas, the family doctor should be consulted. A X-ray examination of the stomach, gall bladder and intestines and close checking of effects of certain foods may show whether it is putrefaction of the proteins—meat and fish—faulty fermentation of starch foods, or the action of fat in delaying emptying of the stomach contents that is causing fatulence.

Some cancer-of-the-stomach symptoms may be present if you are emotionally upset; but to neglect to consult your physician when the symptoms are present (loss of appetite, mild distress before and after meals, tiredness, weakness, etc.), is to lose the chance of saving your life should cancer be present. Early cancer is curable by X-rays, radium or surgery.

MAY IS CHILD HEALTH MONTH

Do you have a youngster starting to school next fall?

The Hancock County Public Health Council is planning again this year a grogram for those starting pupils The council is a group of community leaders representing the agencies interested in health in the county Together this group plans to meet health need for all age groups of the population. Such projects as the prenatal classes and immunization clinics are the results of planning and work by this group.

May, 1949 is child Health Month in Hancock County We must be aware of our child's physical and emotional needs at all times during the year, but this month is set aside especially for physical exams for preschoolars. We know that unless children are well physically we cannot expect them to do the best school work. Many children will be noted to have nutritional or other habit training problems Perhaps the doctor finds poor tonsils, or defects in vision or hearing that will affect school progress. Children of school age require booster immunizations as recommended by the family doctor. Many children unable to adjust socially to the school group are hampered in some way physically

Let us be sure our children are well and protected against the preventable communicable diseases. Your family doctor will be happy to have you consult him in his office during May for this physical examination This program is for rural and town children alike During May the booster immunization for diphtheria, whooping cough and smallpox may be obtained at the clinic rate, one dollar per inoculation.

A number of preschool meetings are being planned throughout the county for registration of these starting school pupils. They will be held in April and May at the schools in the towns. Watch the newspapers for dates of meetings. Attend the one closest your home. Physical examination banks for completion will be furnished you as well as an opportunity to discuss any health problems you may have, with the Public Health Nurse, Harriet Oxley, R. N.

The County Board of Review will meet on Monday, May 2nd, to go over the real and personal valuations as placed by the various field assessors The Board of Review will meet from day to day during the month of May until the task of reviewing assessments has been completed. Sometime during the latter part of April, the Board will convene and fix a schedule of dates and will designate locations of various areas in the county for the convenience of taxpayers who wish to consult with the Board relative to their assessment

Frequently we hear the statement that the new method of valuation works a hardship on the person who wants to improve his or her property A close inspection of valuations on farm and business buildings is invited and when this is done we believe you will agree that this is not the case.

Contrary to popular opinion this office does not determine the amount of tax you must pay This is determined by the expenditures of our taxing bodies and their expenditures are in turn determined by the services you and I demand of them Our job is to make an honest attempt at determining values that are fair and equitable between the various classes of property This is being done by adjusting values up or down as the individual case requires.

When this has been done and properties have been equalized any increase in value in a taxing district, should bring about a corresponding decrease in illage levied, provided expenditures are confined to present levels.

It might be a good time in face of a receding economy, to balance our wants and desires accordingly Only by so doing can taxes be reduced Our thinking is prone to follow events rather than to precede them Let us lead the parade with our thinking instead of following

CATFISH SEASON OPENS April 15TH

The first of the major game-fishing seasons begins at 12:01, April 15, when catfishing becomes legal in all of the state's inland waters. Commission officials said today that "dyed-in-the-wool fishermen all over the state wait for the midnight opening like kids waiting for Santa Claus on Christmas Eve"

Catfishing in the past decade has become one of the most important and popular angling pastime in the state. Old Whiskers is widely distributed and can be found in most of Iowa's 15,000 miles of streams, in addition to a number of the major lakes. Although best catfishing results are not expected until warmer weather in May and opening day is expected to produce some good strings.

The daily catfish limit is eight with possession limit of sixteen. Minimum catfish length is 12 inches.

Commission officials reminded anglers to be sure to purchase a 1949 fishing license before trying their luck. Frogs may not be taken for bait until May 12th. Catfishing experts believe angle worms and night crawlers will be the best catfish appetizer until the water warms up.

NEW FISHING LICENSES ON SALE

Fishing, hunting, and combination fishing and hunting licenses have been mailed to more than 1,500 person authorized to sell licenses during the 1949 season The licenses are in effect from April 1, 1949 to April 1, 1950. They may be purchased at any county recorder's office, from all conservation officers, and from many sporting good stores, boat liveries, bank, and similar business establishments. Resident hunting and resident fishing licenses are $1.50 each. Combination hunting and fishing licenses are $2.50.

FARMER'S PROFIT MAY DEPEND ON ORPHAN PIG

That lone orphan pig in the hog house may be just the difference between profit and loss on Iowa farmers' record books this year, says E. L. Quaife, extension animal husbandman at Iowa State College.

Pigs often become orphans when more pigs are farrowed than the sow can nurse, when the sow fails to produce milk or claim her pigs, or dies after the pigs are born.

The easiest way to raise orphan pigs is to transfer them to another sow that can suckle more pigs than her own. Such a transfer has to be made very soon, or the foster mother may refuse to adopt the pigs. Quaife says to remove the sow from her pen and then add the orphan pig or pigs to her litter and let them run together for a couple of hours before the sow is put back.

If a sow is not available, orphan pigs may be raised by hand. Cow's milk is the most practical substitute for sow's milk, and while it may be fed with nothing added, better results may be obtained by adding about 3 ounces of corn sirup or cane molasses to each quart of milk, according to Quaife.

From the east end of Main Street the paving will extend two blocks North to join the Farm-To-Market road running east to the Cerro Gordo County line

THE HOME TOWN REPORTER IN WASHINGTON

WALTER SNEAD, WNU Correspondent

Tax Hurts "Big Boys"

WHAT about the tax picture insofar as this 81st congress is concerned? This reporter has attempted to get an overall picture of what is likely to happen, and if we are any judge, President Truman's call for a tax increase is not going to hurt average individual taxpayers and neither will it hurt small business men in the Home Towns of the country

The Big Boys, of course, will be hurt if the administration tax measure goes through, with emphasis on corporate taxes, and some media are telling the country that business will be "penalized" by the administration tax proposals. The facts are that the tax on the first $250,000 of net income will show a substantial reduction under the President's program and the corporate tax increase will not show until the first million dollars of net income is reached in the income bracket

For instance, the present tax on corporations provides that a corporate net income of $10,000 pays approximately $2,100 in taxes. Under the Truman proposal this business corporation would pay $1,000. The corporation with a $50,000 net income now pays $19,000 while under the administration proposal the tax would be $12,000; a $60,000 net corporation income now pays $22,800 while the proposed rate would cut it to $15,500; a $100,000 corporate net income now pays $38,000 and the new rate would cut it to $29,500; $200,000 now pays $76,000 and the Truman bill would slash that to $64 500, the $250,000 income now pays $95,000 and the Truman bill would cut that to $82,000; the $500,000 corporate net income now pays $190,000 and Mr Truman's proposal would cut it to $182,000. But, the million dollar net income which now pays $380,000 would pay about $382,000 in taxes and the two million dollar net income which now pays $760,000 would pay $832,000

This measure is now before the house ways and means committee of which Representative Robert L. Doughton of North Carolina is chairman.

Stability or Socialism

Democratic leaders maintain that the economic stability act of 1949 which gives the President far-reaching powers is a "logical continuation of the economic achievement started by the Democratic party in 1933." The Democrats claim their leardership built the country up from 1933 to its present high-level eccnomy and the stability act is to protect and insure "our economic good health now that we have won it back." Republicans maintain, however, that the bill is shot through with socialism and power no President should have in peace time.

Observe Centennial

The department of the interior is this month celebrating its centennial. It was in March, 1849, that President James K Polk signed the Vinton bill creating the department with one secretary and one assistant. Today, a century later, the department has 50,000 employees and operates from the Arctic circle to Puerto Rico and from Maine to the South Pacific.

Its far-flung jurisdiction embraces the welfare of two million people in America's territories and insular possessions and the guardianship of more than 400,000 American Indians and 30,000 Alaskan natives. It is responsible for the management of more than 750 million acres of public lands, promotion of safety, conservation and development of the nation's mines, protection of the fish and wildlife, administration of 21.5 million acres of public parks and playgrounds, development of western river basin resources including great irrigation and hydro-electric projects.

It has charge of water and mineral investigations, map-making under the geological survey, operates a railroad in Alaska, and is the largest single producer and distributor of electric power through its various hyrdo-electric power projects.

Favor Little People

It is obvious at this juncture of the congressional session that the administration is aiming its legislation on all fronts to favor the little people who live on Main street in America. The election brought home the fact that most of America lives on Main street or trades on Main street in the Home Towns of this country and it is a political axiom that no one gets hurt badly if he stays on the side of the greatest good for the greatest number.

Must Women Worry?

Bell Syndicate—WNU Features

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

WORRYING is a fault and a habit. It is also stupid. But of this faulty, stupid habit, many women make a virtue. They are proud of their worrying. It nearly drives everyone mad; but they are meekly, resignedly proud of it.

Take the wife of the man who writes the following letter. He, Jim, is 40; his wife is 36. These are wonderful ages, the very cream of life. But for Rose the cream is curdled.

"The girls and I love Mama," writes Jim, or rather typewrites, on paper that shows he is the head of a wood and coal business. "We've got everything we want—a nice home, friends—and we're all normal people, no sickness of body or mind So what can keep a sensible woman like Rose fretting and worrying, nagging and complaining is more than I can see. She says her mother was a great worrier, and says it as if it were something rather fine.

Others Don't Fuss

"But what she doesn't know," Jim adds, "is that a man is apt to meet other women who don't make such a darned fuss about everything. My agent in a near-by town is a young war widow, and is just a streak of sunshine Nothing worries her

"She'll fix a little meal up in the office, she'll laugh if anything goes wrong; she's sure this'll come out right and that'll all clear up, and it's a pleasure to be with her She's got a boy of five and the way she handles that little fellow is a pleasure to see They laugh together like a couple of kids.

"At home Rose begins nagging when I arrive and doesn't stop until I leave the next morning. Our girls are only nine and five, but already they are beginning to ignore her criticisms Their clothes, their health, our financial status, the weather, the people she sees and doesn't want to see, and the ones she wants to see who don't come, my manners if I'm too cordial, my manners if I'm too cool, my family's treatment of her when she was a bride 12 years ago—there's no end to it. If I get in a helper, the girl wastes everything and isn't clean; if I don't get her anyone, she's half dead with work.

". . . the cream is curdled . . ."

"And all the time she's capable and hardworking and economical, and would die for any one of us," the letter continues "But she sure does make life a burden for herself and everyone else.

Criticizes His Driving

"Then there's my driving. She leans over from the back seat and watches the road like a cat, and there isn't a chicken or a red light or a truck that she doesn't see 'way ahead. It gets a man nervous. The whole thing gets you down."

This Rose of Jimmy's sounds to me like a too-well known type. There isn't any advice or suggestion that will reach such a woman. She is too entrenched in her own conviction and righteousness.

Her defense would be that Jimmy is careless, that there are many accidents, that someone has to watch the family safety and sanity, that people would be wasting money and getting sick and spotting their clothes and leaving lights burning and running into traffic if she wasn't on guard. She would argue that she kept a perfect house, never rested day or night, had to assume responsibility because no one else would, and altogether considered herself pretty nearly the perfect wife and mother.

No, you can't reach the worriers, complainers and naggers with even the gentlest criticism. They are letter-perfect, and they would laugh at the idea that households need the spirit as well as the letter. The letter, says the wisest book in the world, killeth. But in the spirit is eternal life.

What might reach Rose's impregnable fortress of perfection is the hint of the other woman, in Jim's letter The other woman, in his branch office in a neighboring town. The woman who is simple and cheerful and philosophical.

Grief and change already have struck at this woman She is one of hundreds who were widowed in the war years She had a child to protect She had her living to make And still she is happy and self-reliant and free from the swarms of mosquito cares that beset the more fortunate Rose

MIRROR of your MIND

Some Executives Need 'Yes Men'

By Lawrence Gould

Do minor executives favor "yes-men"?

Answer: That mainly depends upon how sure they are that they can go on holding down their own jobs. For a person with a "sense of insecurity" will usually have so strong a craving for moral support that he'll surround himself with people who will tell him how good he is and—possibly without realizing it—will be unfair to a subordinate who dares to question his decisions. But the fellow who is sure of himself (and he's generally headed toward promotion) will be glad to be told when he's wrong if it is done politely.

Is the urge to write neurotic?

Answer: Yes, when it is overwhelmingly strong, asserts Dr. Edmund Bergler in the Psychoanalytic Review. Except in the case of people who write mainly for a living, the urge to "creative writing," especially fiction, is a way in which the writer manages to ease the tension of his own neurotic conflicts. But since people with such conflicts do not understand themselves, they cannot picture the real motives of their characters, and because they're too neurotic to be capable of love, they can't describe love accurately.

Is "make-believe" bad for children?

Answer: On the contrary, some make-believe is necessary for a child's emotional development, and whether encouraged by their elders or not, children always indulge in some degree of "pretending." A child forced to face the fact that he is powerless to make his wishes come true and forbidden to console himself by gratifying them in his imagination would be overwhelmed with terror and frustration. But as any child is given a chance to taste the thrill of actually doing things for himself, his interest in make-believe fades.

IN COLONIAL days folks made pieces of furniture as the need arose. If they wanted a bench to seat two, three, four or more persons, they made it to the size needed. The bench illustrated above is a replica of those commonly used in Colonial times. The entire bench, legs, top and cleats can be cut from one ten foot board. This size bench is ideally suited for use alongside a fireplace. It can also be used as a coffee table or as an odd piece to hold a small radio, lamp, plants, etc. By adding a third or even a fourth leg, the bench can be made to any length desired.

A complete dining room set can be made by building two of these benches and a Sawbuck table from Pattern No. 17. The full size pattern for making these benches is easy to use. It is merely traced on the wood. User then saws and assembles the bench exactly as step-by-step directions indicate. No special tools or skill are required. The pattern tells exactly what materials to use. All materials are now available at every lumber yard. Paint or stain it to match interior furnishings.

Send 25c for Bench Pattern No. 23. Pattern No. 17 for making the Sawbuck Table is 25c. Send to East-Bild Pattern Company, Dept. W. Pleasantville, N. Y.

Residual Goiter Symptoms

By Dr. James W. Barton

A FEW years ago I was examining a heavyweight wrestler and noted the changed expression on his face, particularly the bulging eyes. I immediately thought a goiter was present; yet, when I took his heart rate, it was normal. I told him that I thought he had goiter, but that, as his heart rate was normal, I was mistaken. He laughed and stated that he had had a goiter, but had undergone an operation the previous year and seemed to have lost his nervousness and rapid heart beat. His eyes bulged less, but were still too prominent.

While most goiter symptoms disappear after removal of the thyroid gland, there are some cases in which the symptoms persist—much to the disappointment of patient and surgeon.

Patients who have undergone an operation for removal of the thyroid gland to rid themselves of nervousness, rapid heart beat, sweating and bulging eyes, often retain some or all of these symptoms which are, therefore, called residual symptoms. Just what causes these symptoms to remain never has been definitely proved.

In studying 33 patients (in whom the action of the thyroid gland apparently was normal) at intervals ranging from two and a half to ten years after the removal of the gland by surgical operation, it was found that 31 retained symptoms even after all this time. The bulging eyes were the only true sign or symptom that could be directly attributed to thyroid disturbance.

What, then, was the cause of the other residual symptoms?

The other symptoms — nervousness, rapid heart rate, sweating—were attributed to other factors present in the make-up of the patient, to the emotional effect of the disease and operation, or to other causes aside from thyroid disease and emotional disturbances.

★ HEALTH NOTES ★

When there is not enough juice manufactured by the thyroid gland or the pituitary gland, excess fat will accumulate. But it can easily be seen how a worried or frustrated person may sit with a box of candies or rich food available and continue to eat to make up for his frustration. Thus, obesity (overweight) largely is a compensation for worry or frustration.

The main cause of hardening of the arteries (loss of elastic tissue in the walls of the blood vessels) is believed to be infection—teeth, tonsils, gums, sinuses, gall bladder or large intestine. An infection poisons the blood, which is carried by the blood vessels to various parts of the body. This poison inflames the lining of the blood vessels which affects the elastic coat.

Modern science reveals how

THIS TREATMENT CAN RELIEVE RHEUMATIC PAINS

Working with infra-red photography and other modern devices, science now explains the effectiveness of the "Sloan's Treatment" for combating rheumatic pains, neuralgia and muscular aches.

Infra-red photos disclose that after Sloan's is applied to the skin, veins below the surface are expanded . . . evidence that an extra supply of blood has been brought to the pain area, to revitalize the painful tissues and to carry away waste matter and poisons.

Other scientific measurements disclose that this beneficial action penetrates deep down below the surface and lasts for hours.

The "Sloan's Treatment" is simply to use Sloan's regularly, morning and evening, at every application you not only feel the welcome comfort which Sloan's brings, but you know that the all-important, increased flow of blood is getting at the spot where the pain is.

For years Sloan's has been "the greatest name in pain-relieving liniments". Now modern scientific investigation reveals why that reputation was earned.

Get Sloan's—either the liniment you've known for years, or the new Sloan's Balm; and use it regularly.

Spring Spotlights—
VARIETY IN FABRIC AND FASHION

You'll find interesting fabrics, new uses of tucks, laces, buttons and collars, and silhouettes flounced to slim when you search out the new dress or suit to pep up next season's wardrobe It won't be hard to find clothes with figure-flattering lines, becoming color and texture

Whether you add to last year's spring and summer clothes with home or ready-mades, it won't be hard to give your wardrobe a "brand new" 1949 look.

For there's a wider range of pretty fabrics than we've seen in a long time, and a choice of "good" styles too You'll have plenty of leeway when it comes to planning an up-to-date wardrobe that's right for you, say clothing specialists, Iowa State College

At the very top of the list of materials for summer dresses are sheers — organdy, dotted swiss, practical crease-resistant voile and chiffon are back in an even greater array of colors and weights — from the deep-toned iridescents to hanky-soft versions in solid colors. Cotton taffetas, butcher linen, birdseye cotton pique, novelty tie-silk prints, matelasse are all joining the fashion parade this year.

As for wool's they're appearing in a greater variety of weights and textures. Some tweeds are coming in softer, lighter, less-bulky versions Faille is back in a wide range of weights, from tissue-thin rayon to wool,

Pretty Trimmings

The "esemble look" is a keynote for your outfits this season. The clothing specialists tell us the material itself will be worked into similar decorative details in suits, dresses and hats.

There'll be tucking, shirring, self-cording, plenting and duffling. A new trick for trimming cottons is "plaiding" with bias strips of the dress material. This is easy to do at home if you use your machine attachments.

Now is the time to get out bits of crocheted lace and other edgings you've saved. For they're in fashion's favor once more You can dye lace to match your fabric and be "right in style," for matching edges will be popular.

Your Major Purchases

Your spring coat, if you need one this year, will probably take the largest proportion of your clothes budget. "Shortie" coats will be good this year. You may find that you have a coat which can be quite easily turned into a smart shortie. The short coats are usually most becoming to very petite or very tall figures.

The loose coat with swinging fullness in the back is still fashionable, and if you're tall it's meant especially for you The fullness is sometimes belted to give you a longer,slimmer line But of course gathering in the material at the waistline always adds some bulk.

The classic semi-fitted style is popular as always this year. These coats have some fitting in at the waistline and a graceful flare in the skirt. They're becoming to most women and especially to the larger figure.

Suits vary from the fitted jacket and full skit combination to the boxy jacket with slim skirt. Some jackets are belted and bloused.

Pockets and necklines are getting lots of attention in spring clothes Necklines are very high, some with upstanding profile collars, or very low, scooped or V-shaped, and often framed by important-looking collars. Cuffs are showing up on all lengths of sleeves. A collar-and-cuff change may be all the face-lifting a dark dress in your wardrobe needs to put it in the running gain.

IF ADULTS TOOK ADVICE GIVEN KIDS . . .

Howya-Doon Tells How Grownups Should Behave

. . . THEY'D GET GOUT, RHEUMATISM, ULCERS

By H. I. PHILLIPS

HOWYA-DOON, ADULTS?

The influence of a new radio character called "Howdy-Doody" on the kiddies is the talk of the amusement world. Howdy-Doody is a puppet on the program of Bob Smith, and, he has come close to taking over the American home at 5 p.m. daily. Howdy manages to work in a lot of pleas for the small fry to clean their plates, mind their health and otherwise behave themselves, and we think it might be a good idea to introduce a similar character for influencing the grownups.

Our character would be an adult puppet called "Howya-Doon," and would operate along the same pattern, as follows:

SMITH—Well here's your friend Howya-Doon, the friend of all grownups, again, folks. Golly, how nice it seems to be with you adults once more! I hope you've all been very nice adults and behaved yourselves in every way. Howya-Doon, did you clean up your plate today?

HOWYA-DOON—Aw gosh, I certainly didn't. I'm not that crazy, Mr. Smith.

SMITH—I thought not. That's fine. What happens to adults who lick their platters clean?

HOWYA-DOON—They get gout, indigestion, stomach acidity, rheumatism, double chins, heartburn and everything Gee, their diet gets all shot to pieces, Mr Smith, and they get fat and their clothes look awful on 'em.

SMITH—Right. So what is the proper way for grownups to behave at meals?

HOWYA-DOON—Aw, that's easy, Mr. Smith. They do just what I do, lay off any kind of food that tastes good!

SMITH—Anything that appeals to the taste, eh?

HOWYA-DOON—Sure. If it's appetizing, it's no good. All nice grownups who want their children to be proud of them will just go for carrots, beets, spinach and things like that.

SMITH—If by chance you get something on your plate that tastes swell and that isn't fattening, is it okay to eat it all?

HOWYA DOON—Aw, no! A good little adult always carries a calory chart and makes himself pretty miserable figuring up the calories in everything he eats. I hope all you grownups do this.

SMITH—So do I, Howya. And now it's time to show the movies. We've got some wonderful ones that are right down the alley for grownups. They are from the American Medical association and show what happens to adults who enjoy eating and lead happy lives But first, did you brush your teeth this morning?

HOWYA-DOON—Aw, sure, I took my uppers and lowers right out of the glass of water where I put 'em each night and gave 'em a good stiff brushing

SMITH—And what else did you do that all good grownups should do?

HOWYA-DOON—I put my hotwater bottle and my liver pads away neatly after I got up and I made sure all the bottles in the medicine cabinet were in order.

SMITH—That's fine. And now we're going to introduce our new character Dub-a-Dab

HOWYA-DOON — Who's Dub-a-Dab?

SMITH—He's the wonderful adult who never grunts, seems to enjoy life and ALWAYS BEHAVES SO HIS CHILDREN CAN BE PROUD OF HIM!

A Prayer for Courage
GOD make me brave for life,
Oh, braver than this!
Let me straighten after pain
As a tree straightens after the rain,
Shining and lovely again.
God make me brave for life,
Much braver than this!
As the blown grass lifts let me rise
From sorrow with quiet eyes,
Knowing Thy way is wise.
God make me brave—Life brings
Such blinding things.
Help me to keep my sight,
Help me to see aright
That out of the dark—comes light.

SCRIPTURE Mark 10.
DEVOTIONAL READING Mark 9:33-37

Range of Religion

Lesson for April 10, 1949

ONCE THERE WAS a farmer who owned a large farm. Its wide acreage was divided into pastures and fields and a garden and orchards and hog-lots and chicken-yards and so on But whenever any one would ask the farmer about some particular part of the farm, he would answer, "That's not my business—that's only the orchard, it isn't the farm," or "—That's not the farm, that's a flock of sheep," or a rye field or whatever it might be Of course such a farmer never lived, or if he did, he should have his head examined.

Dr. Foreman

What Does Religion Cover?

YET THAT FARMER is not a bit more idiotic than a Christian who, when asked about this or that activity or aspect of life, answers, "That's not religion I have no interest in it" Religion isn't a little fenced-off pasture for lambs, a tiny garden plot bound thick hedges

> Religion covers the whole farm, every bit of life from end to end Jesus knew this very well. He never once refused to discuss anything on the ground that it was not religious

He cast light on every thing that touched him He called his followers the 'light of the world.' Not flashlights shining in one narrow beam! Not flashlights but lamps, set on a lampstand and 'giving light to all who are in the house"

The Light Of God

A GOOD cross-section of Jesus methods and ideas can be seen in Mark 10, in o which one chapter Mark packs his whole account of a number of weeks which Jesus spent in the region called Perea Observe the variety of situations which confronted Jesus First there was a question about divorce When they brought that question up to Jesus he did not dodge it. He did not call it a personal matter in which he as a teacher of religion, had no interest He did not say it was strictly a matter for the civil courts You may read what he did say in Mark 10 You will note that first of all he brings God into his answer

Religion And Little Children

THIS CHAPTER includes the famous story of the little children who were brought to Jesus—evidently quite small children, for Jesus lifted them into his arms We do not hear Jesus saying, "Children are too small for me to take any interest in them Wait till they are older What good can religion do these tiny tots?" On the contrary, Jesus not only blessed them, but held them up as models for older people

> Is your church following Jesus here? Is your church interested in the little children as much as it is in the "paying" members?

Or are the little ones shoved off into some damp corner of the church basement? In your state or province, do the Christian people take an interest in the children? Do children in your section get as good attention as pure-bred cattle do?

As Wide As Life

THEN THERE WAS a question about eternal life. Of course Jesus answered that one, it was obviously a religious question. (Except that he gave it what some people even today would consider a not very religious answer!) Jesus went on to talk about money and the effect it has on a man's prospect of eternal life Jesus would be the very last person to imagine that a man's bank account has nothing to do with religion. Some people to this day don't like to hear a preacher mention money in his sermons. Well, such people might have been offended by Jesus, for he often preached about money and property.

> Then there was the question of ambition, the audacious request that James and John made of him. He had some strong remarks to make about that.

And finally at Jericho, not long before Palm Sunday, there was the blind beggar Bartimaeus Jesus did not say to him, "Health is no affair of mine I cure souls, not bodies."

Ozzie and Harriet Switch to CBS

By INEZ GERHARD

AFTER PRACTICING fancy ice-skating figures like mad at a local rink, Harriet Nelson talked the reluctant Ozzie into taking the family to Lake Arrowhead for winter sports, so that she could show off a bit. But they arrived to find the rink there covered with ten feet of snow. That suited Ozzie, who retired to their rooms and worked on the next "Ozzie and Harriet" script. If you're among their thousands of devoted listeners of course you know that they are working their own children into their program in place of the young actors who have portrayed them; also you know that they have just switched from NBC to CBS.

Burns and Allen's high Hooperating didn't keep their sponsor from dropping them at the end of the current season. It is reported that he thought the show too expensive, wants to spend part of the money on television. Robert Young in a comedy series will be the air replacement. With sponsors clamoring for them, George and Gracie were not worried.

Claudette Colbert wants to return to the New York stage next fall—has found a play she likes, but must clear up some picture commitments. Greer Garson, never yet seen on the Broadway stage, also wants to tackle it.

John Wayne may find himself wishing he were two people. He has signed to do one picture annually for Warner Bros., has a contract to make three for RKO, three for Republic and an unspecified number for his own independent company.

MR. DIGGLES ON DUTY

By MARY WHITEFORD

MR DIGGLES kept his head down as though he were studying the prescription, scarcely hearing Mrs Tompkins' voice through the noise of blood thudding in his temples. When he tried to speak, his lips were dry and his tongue moved nervously over them. "I beg your pardon, Mrs Tompkins, what was that you said?"

"I said if you haven't a delivery boy I'll wait for the three o'clock bus, but I'm anxious to get back as soon as I can"

He looked again at Dr. Price's cramped handwriting. "Oh, I'll deliver it, Mrs. Tompkins I'm sorry to learn Mr. Tompkins isn't well."

"I told him it's just his bad disposition coming out. I told Dr. Price I certainly hated to drag him out in weather like this just for a stomach ache. Doctor says he'll be all right in a day or two."

3-Minute Fiction

Mr. Diggles took the handkerchief from the pocket of his grey alpaca coat and wiped his forehead. The moment he used to dream of years ago, was here at last. This would cost Dr. Price his practice.

The pity was, Dr. Price would never know he could have saved himself, if he hadn't made it so clear that a man who mixed prescriptions wasn't supposed to know about diagnosis Dr Price would never know what he'd done to himself when he told Mrs White she might as well give the twins a chocolate soda as Diggles' Own Whooping Cough Mixture. Because of Dr Price's new ways of doing things, no one bought Diggles' Ready Rheumatism Reliever now. Shots, it was, the doctor was giving for everything. Not prescriptions.

Manslaughter, they called it. He wet his lips. Well, no one could expect Mr. Diggles to interfere with Dr. Price's prescriptions again. Not a second time.

Though it was so many years ago, he could feel the flush of anger that flooded his face remembering the day he'd called Dr. Price up, and suggested that maybe the heart medicine he ordered for Mr. Venables was too strong

"I know what I'm doing. Just mind your own business, Diggles, and I can mind mine"

He looked again at the prescription. There was no mistaking the symbol and he'd fill it as it stood

He reached for the bottle and removed the cork. Carefully, he measured out the prescribed dose.

MR. DIGGLES straightened suddenly, staring at the partly filled mortar A feeling of nausea swept through him as he snatched it up and flung the contents into the sink. His hand, replacing the bottle on the shelf, trembled.

Outside, the wind howled and flakes of ice made a cold noise beating the window pane.

Slowly, he walked toward the telephone. After all, just as many people swore by Dr. Price as trusted Diggles.

As he waited, listening to Dr. Price's telephone bell ringing, the shop door opened. Mr. Diggles put down the receiver and went to the front. Dr. Price was on the mat, stamping the snow from his feet.

"Diggles, will you let me see the prescription Mrs. Tompkins just brought in?"

"I was just trying to call you about it, Dr. Price. I felt there was some little inaccuracy."

Dr. Price nodded. "Something told me. But I wasn't really worried. I knew you'd catch a mistake if there was one. It's a great comfort to me to know that a substantial man like you is checking up on me, Diggles"

"I have to do what I can A man has to do his duty." He smiled and stood up.

"That's right, doctor. I guess duty becomes a habit if you do it long enough." The wind screamed into the shop as Dr. Price opened the door and went out It was a bleak, bitter day, but in Mr Diggles' heart it was suddenly summer.

By GRANTLAND RICE

A BASEBALL community, extended, is like any other big community. There is wealth and poverty living fairly close together.

On either side of the opulent first-division Yankees and Cardinals in St. Petersburg, there are two strong tail-end contenders at Tampa and Clearwater. They are the Reds and the Phillies.

There is a broad rumor to the effect that Chicago's Cubs expect to leave their old pals this season and move higher up, into fourth, fifth or sixth place. If this happens, the Reds at Tampa and Phillies at Clearwater should be the logical candidates for the bottom spot

Grantland Rice

This seems to be rather a shame. Eddie Sawyer of the Phillies and Bucky Walters of the Reds are two popular managers and they have a number of good ballplayers—excellent ballplayers.

Here are a few who could help any ball club:

Reds—Ewell Blackwell, Johnny Vander Meer, Ken Raffensberger, Herman Wehmeier and Harry Gumbert—all good pitchers; Ray Lamanno, Ray Mueller, Virgil Stallcup, Johnny Wyrostek, Hank Sauer, Danny Litwhiler and Frankie Baumholtz—all good ballplayers

The Phillies — Robin Roberts, Schoolboy Rowe, Blix Donnelly, Curt Simmons, Ken Heintzelman, Hank Borowy—pretty good pitchers; Ed Waitkus, Dick Sisler, Granville Hamner, Richie Ashburn, Del Ennis, Johnny Blatnik and Bert Haas—pretty good ballplayers.

This doesn't include a number of lively-looking rookies who could help quite a bit.

But, unfortunately for the Reds, Ewell Blackwell, their crack pitcher, is just recovering from a sore arm and a kidney operation The Phillies have too many young pitchers who still need more experience

Blackwell's early absence and his dubious fate is a heavy blow to the Reds since the six foot, six-inch star is one of baseball's best. He would be good for between 22 and 25 victories, even with the pitchers who need experience.

Pitchers of this type are just a trifle rarer than a green rhinoceros or a blue tiger.

Branch Rickey said privately last summer that he feared the Phillies' youth around 1950 or 1951 since owner Bob Carpenter is quite willing to spend any amount to get

* * *

The Red-Phillies Finish

Neither Bucky Walters of the Reds nor Eddie Sawyer of the Phillies care to be labelled a tail-end contender. But what teams can they beat out?

The Phillies have a possible and even probable star in young Richie Ashburn, who batted .333 last season and was the fastest man the league has seen in some years

Ashburn was injured after playing 117 games, but he is O. K. now and more than keen to prove his first year was no fluke. The second year is always the hardest. He easily may be one of the game's future stars.

The Phillies have another kid in Curt Simmons, an expensive left-hander who is only 19 years old. Simmons won seven and dropped 13 games last season Robin Roberts won seven and dropped nine Roberts, only 22, is another possible star, maybe better than Simmons.

Waitkus, from the Cubs, will strengthen the Philly infield This team can be dangerous if it gets better pitching than it picked up through 1948. It is the type of team that won't win any pennant or finish in the first four, but it can beat a lot of ball clubs and should be an improvement over last year.

The Reds have a great ballplayer and one of baseball's finest citizens in Bucky Walters but, like the Phillies, their strength is too spotty.

It could be a different story if Blackwell could hook up with Vander Meer, Wehmeier, Gumbert and Raffensberger. They have a good power hitter in Hank Sauer with 35 home runs to his credit last year, and a good third baseman in Grady Hatton.

Both the Reds and Phillies have good ballplayers scattered here and there but too many others who are not too able.

But the fact that teams as good as the Reds and Phillies should be scrapping it out for last place proves the balance of the National League. You wouldn't think that six clubs will beat out this pair—and maybe six clubs won't.

That's only the way it looks as March buds are waiting to show and March winds are getting softer in the sun.

Echard Zeidler Again First To Report First Fish Caught

For several years Echard Zeidler has been the first fisherman in Klemme to capture the crown for the first fish of the season caught out of the river. The latter came home without a fish.

Here's one about a pansy that obviously is no "pansy." Mrs. George Diekman of Horton has found one of the delicate flowers in full-bloom the first week in March.

WOMEN SENT TO HOSPITAL AFTER THEFT

Hancock County Sheriff L. M. Brower reports the arrest of Alice Meyer, 53, at Hampton on charge of larceny Shortly after arrest she was turned over to Franklin County sanity commission and was committed to the state hospital at Independence

Franklin County Attorney Harvey Uhlenhoff was familiar with the situation as some years before she had been sent to the psychopathic hospital at Iowa City and was pronounced an incurable kleptomaniac.

Mrs. Meyer was recently employed in a restaurant at Britt and the arrest followed a complaint of one of the Britt merchants to Sheriff Brower of the larceny of a pocketbook

Mrs. Meyer has had several previous encounters with the law, one being a charge of forgery.

Sheriff Brower reports that over a period of years, as is the case of a kleptomaniac, she had accumulated an unbelievable number of articles which were stored in boxes and files, many of them of comparatively small value, and made no apparent use of them.

ALL SET FOR SUMMER—

WITH A HOME FREEZER

Planning on buying a home freezer? Consider where you're going to install it at home. Avoid the kitchen. Use a clean, cool, well-venitlated room, say home management experts.

Summer's coming, and with it all the fresh fruits and vegetables from your garden. There'll be tempting buys of shipped-in fruits and vegetables, too. If you want to capture all that goodness for a long time ahead, maybe your next big purchase should be a home freezer.

What kind to buy? That's a question of money, of size and of efficiency in using the freezer. Naomi Shank, extension home management specialist, says "get a good buy for your money," for the original cost is rather high and you'll want to use this equipment over a period of years

Will It Pay

Perhaps you're hesitating about putting money into a home freezer If so, ask yourself these questions. Will you use the locker to its capacity to justify the expense? Will renting a locker in a nearby locker plant better fit your needs? Should you consider building a walk-in home freezer rather than purchasing one?

Perhaps you need a new refrigerator and still want some home freezer space. Then, think about a combination model.

Size is important. Larger sizes usually cost less per cubic foot than the smaller sizes. A few families have found that two small freezers have suited their needs better than one larger one. A cubic foot holds about 30 to 35 pounds of food. A farm family, Miss Shank says, will need to plan on at least 5 cubic feet for each person, where they refill the freezer twice a year.

Just remember, though, that the cost of operation is comparable in the same size freezers with similar mechanisms though of different "makes" when put out by long established manufacturers.

Here are some pointers to consider on different styles. The chest type freezer makes it necessary for you to bend over to reach in when freezing, storing and removing packages. It takes up considerable floor space.

An upright freezer looks much like a refrigerator Foods are checked in and out in a straight-up standing position. This type of freezer takes less floor space.

A walk-in freezer usually provides storage of foods for sharp freezing, for above, as well as below-freezing temperatures. A two-temperature freezer model has about 1 cubic foot of freezer storage to be filled from your community locker supplies.

Check on Efficiency

Compare not only styles but efficiency of operation, Miss Shank suggests. Can you get recommended packaging materials from your dealer? How is the cabinet constructed and what kind of materials were used? How thick is the insulation? How reliable is the mechanism? Is the motor large enough for the size of the freezer, and what kind of refrigerant is used?

Other key questions to ask are: How much current will the freezer take? How often should it be defrosted and how is this done? How much of a load will it carry for rapid freezing, and how long will it hold a safe temperature if the current goes off? Is it possible to get dry ice if there's a long interuption in service?

Know what kind of service you can expect from your dealer, and think carefully where you will put your freezer and connect it before you bring it home.

. . . ARE MORE COLLEGES FOR CHEFS

By H. I. PHILLIPS

COLLEGE FOR CHEFS

G. I. Schools in cooking, menu planning, restaurant operation and hotel management are being conducted in various parts of the country, with one more or less affliated with Yale For this we give a lusty cheer If there is one field in which plenty of education is needed, is it in the operation of the average American restaurant and lunchroom. The run-of-the-mill eating places of this country are presided over largely by chefs who are strictly grease-and-hot-flame boys.

Even the proper technique in frying an egg escapes them. Their idea of a good dinner is anything that has been in and out of a grease bath. And they can make coffee taste like essence of marine varnish. They got into the business on a bet, learned to cook by taking an elementary course in arson and kept their jobs because the boss ate elsewhere.

A college for chefs, cooks and stewards is a crying need. America desperately needs it. The customers are tired of being guinea pigs for apprentice ham-and-bean boys whose motto is, "If you can eat it without catsup, it's our mistake."

There are G. I. students from 38 states in the school at New Haven. The boys study cooking under experts and nobody who thinks two minutes are enough for a four-minute egg makes the team. No student with a fixed idea that any sandwich is tasty if well upholstered with faded lettuce finishes his freshman year.

We understand special attention is paid to the matter of chicken pies and beef stews and that the dean flunks any student who insists all a chicken pie needs to be irresistible is a slight segment of wing, one quartered potato and a boiled onion whipped in glue.

As for menu planners, ah, there's a field! Take 150,000 middle-class restaurants in this country today, and 149,923 think the menu has been radically changed if the string beans are left out.

Dietitians? Yes and no. Personally, we think that the moment a person gets a sheepskin as a dietition he or she thinks it is a license to skimp on all the essentials of lunch except eggplant and coleslaw.

The course in hotel management is needed, too. What a field! There are thousands of cities and towns in America where, except for one inn( if lucky), the hotels are run by sock peddlers hired to keep down expenses and operate wholly on the theory that the guest should bring his own plumbing kit, be able to fix a lock and make no complaint if he has to have the hotel physician immediately after ordering the day's special.

Three cheers and a tiger for that school up in the rarified atmosphere of Yale. And we hope Harvard and Princeton will see the light, too.

Cuff Stuff

"Realtor" won a race at $43 in Miami the other day and Shudda Haddim is still knocking himself with reproachments. "Realtor! A name like that in Florida and I don't know it's a sure hunch!" he cried. "Every third guy I meet this winter down there is selling lots! I can't do any handicapping the night before this race on account of everybody on the porch is arguin' over real estate

"That night around midnight I get waked up by a phone call in the next room and some guy starts making an appointment to look over a sub-division. At breakfast my three-minute eggs are done a half hour on account of the chef is tryin' to sell the dishwasher a bungalow cheap. And on the way to the track the taxi driver stops to point out his acreage! Yet there is this skinner 'Realtor' on the program and I let him go."

A Song from Sorrow

OUT of my sorrow I shall make a song
So beautiful that others' grief will cease
If one but listen, silently and long,
I promise him my song shall bring him peace:
One clear high note of faith, one note of cheer,
And one of courage, flung against the sky;
But not one tremulous, low note of fear,
And not one muted, agonizing cry.

Oh, I shall make my song a thing of light.
The darkness only can put forth a star;
And out of sorrow—darker than the night—
A song shall lift that men will hear afar,
And listening, with faces eager—glad—
Will say, "Where is the sorrow that we had?"

Heaven Is Real

Easter Lesson for April 17, 1949

HEAVEN IS just as real as Chicago More so, because Chicago will in time cease to be, while heaven lasts forever A few atomic bombs, a whiff of some new plague, can make Chicago vanish; but no atomic bomb can touch heaven. The pity is, so few Christians really believe this. We can get mail from Chicago, but who ever heard of mail from heaven?

Dr. Foreman

Wait, though . . there is mail from heaven, and you have it there in your Bible If you accept it for what it is, the Word of God, then it is the Word from heaven To be sure, it does not tell us much about heaven. If you were actually traveling to Chicago, you would not begin by studying a street-map of that city What you would need is a map of the roads between

So the Bible is not a guide-book to the "City Four-square," it is more of a road-map to help us find the way between here and there. Nevertheless, the Bible does assure us that heaven is real.

Christians have many reasons for believing in the reality of the future life, and some of these may not be in the Bible, but the best reasons are there

Jesus Believed It

WINIFRED KIRKLAND has truly said that Jesus did not simply believe in immortality, he lived it Jesus would never have called this world or this life trifling or unimportant. But all around, under and over and through this visible world Jesus was aware of another He lived and acted as a citizen of both worlds He talked of life after death —or for that matter, of his own life before his birth - as calmly and naturally as you would speak of next week or next summer

Christ Is Risen

MANY PEOPLE feel it would be easier to believe in the future life is someone who had been across the line of death would return across that line to bring a message from the beyond So they attend seances and they listen to table tappings and go through all manner of weird performances in order to get a word or two from someone who has passed on

But all the time we do have a record of a Return. Indeed it is The Return. We call it the Resurrection. The message of Easter is not summed up in songs about some "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere;" it is in these three words: "Christ is risen!"

He did not return in darkness, he was not under the control of any "medium," he did not make himself known by ghostly hauntings He was seen at supper-tables, he spoke to his friends on a mountainside, he came to fishermen on a spring morning by a lake shore The earliest Christians doubted some things, but few doubted that the Lord was risen indeed

Heaven Begins With God

THE CURE for the troubled heart, Jesus said, is faith in God One of the strongest reasons for believing that the future life is real, is the nature and character of God himself. Jesus said as much once, in an argument with men who did not believe in immortality "God is not the God of the dead, but of the living" If we were God's paper dolls or toy soldiers, he might weary of us as a child wearies of its toys, and sweep us all into destruction without a moment's thought. But if we are truly his children, then when life's evening comes, he will call his tired children home

Eternal Life has two sides, the heaven-side and the earth-side. The church has never believed that simple immortality is the same thing as the heavenly life.

A Judas, when he dies, goes (as Peter sadly said, "to his own place." A Judas carries out his own hell with him. But a man like Paul, or any Christian who has been at home with God here on this earth, when at last death comes, will, as Whittier said,

"Find himself by hands familiar beckoned Unto his fitting place."

Star Dust
STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO

By INEZ GERHARD

DEE ENGELBACH, producer-director of CBS' "Hallmark Playhouse," may not be a star-maker, but Joan Fontaine, Irene Dunne, Gregory Peck and many other stars agree that he gets outstanding performances from actors who might not give them otherwise. Miss Fontaine did "Random Harvest" on the Playhouse and asked to have him direct her next picture. Peck had fought off requests to play Abraham Lincoln, saying he was a cinch to be typed as Lincoln and wanted to postpone it — but could not refuse the role, in "The Prairie Years," with Engelbach directing. "Tactful but forceful direction" — that's what they say they get from him.

Hollywood has lured two of "The Guiding Light" cast into its fold. Willard Waterman, "Ray Brandon", starts work as Bing Crosby's stuffy brother-in-law in "Riding High", and Betty Gerson, the female lead, will have a leading role in a picture at Republic that's unnamed so far. This will be Miss Gerson's first film venture, so here's luck to her.

The new "March of Time" may give you a lot of ideas, if you don't know where to spend your next vacation Or it may show you a place you've already enjoyed. The film shows a cross-section of American holidays — cruise ships, big and little hotels, camping trips, dude ranches. Americans spend some 11 billion dollars on vacations; here is how they do it.

Kid Chissell, one of the ex-prizefighters in RKO's "The Set-Up", used to work out in a Cleveland gym in 1925 with an amateur fighter named Packy East. Then Packy took the long count, gave up fighting, and Chissell didn't know what had become of him. Didn't see East until some years later, in Hollywood Packy had won quite a reputation there as Bob Hope.

The Fiction Corner

MAGIC MONTH

By DYER WILSON

HELEN AND ANDY weren't laughing. They were sitting in metal chairs which were placed at right angles to each other, instead of side by side on the glider, and the glow in their eyes was replaced by anger.

"The trouble is you have no ambition!" Helen was saying as her wide set gray eyes flashed signals, "You act lazy!" The long curls were given a toss as she got to her feet.

3-Minute Fiction

Andy got up too. He gave her the one sided smile he'd brought home from war with him and shrugged his heavy shoulders. Andy had blond curls, too—tight to his well shaped head and the merriest of hazel eyes. "You can say that again," he told Helen, "I act lazy, do I?" He thought: Well, that's that and I'll re-enlist and get as far from Hyville as possible.

When he got home the radio was playing jive and he wound one leg over the chair beside it. His mother came into the room and said, "aren't you going to look for a job today, son?"

As he worried for an answer the announcer interrupted the program to tell about a soap contest. "Five hundred dollars for first prize," he said, "just tell in twenty-five words why you like Sudzy-Soap best!"

"I'm trying to think up an entry for the contest, Mom," said Andy directing his hazel eyes up and grinning like an imp. "only I'll have to have the wrappers from three bars of the darned soap."

Andy Tyson tried not to understand that she inferred he had wasted too many afternoons. He made great work of wording his entry and addressed the envelope for mailing.

Habit turned his steps into the corner store where the fellows laughed and teased him about his entry. Half angry again he hurried out of the place and tossed the letter into the nearest mailbox.

In the three weeks that went by he didn't go near Helen nor did he look for a job. One day slipped into the next and a laxness seemed to hold him tight. He was marking time and getting more dissatisfied with every passing hour

THE NIGHT, a day later, when he got home to find excitement in the very air and Mom holding out a telegram he ripped it open and nearly passed out SUDZY-SOAP IS PROUD TO ANNOUNCE YOU WINNER OF FIRST PRIZE STOP. LISTEN TO USUAL SATURDAY PROGRAM STOP CONGRATULATIONS.

Next day Andy got a job. It was really easy. He felt so good — so proud of himself and ready for anything that came along he just went right after the mechanics job he saw advertised in the morning paper.

Saturday night the whole family gathered for the radio program telling of the contest and the winners.

"But I didn't win," Andy said helplessly when the program was over, "they didn't mention my name and that Robert Amherst won the five hundred dollars."

The door bell interrupted Andy and when the messenger boy gave him a telegram he glanced at it and ripped it open. "HOW DID IT FEEL TO BE A PRIZE WINNER FOR A FEW DAYS? STOP. THE BOYS.

Andy was half way out the door when Helen caught up with him, "where you going" she asked.

"I'll bust those guys in the nose," Andy cried, "of all the dirty, low down tricks."

Helen laughed as she read the telegram. Tears rolled down her lovely cheeks and still she laughed. Andy couldn't help laughing with her.

"If they hadn't done it we'd still be angry with each other," she pointed out, "and you wouldn't have your job—and we wouldn't be planning on getting married."

Ways to Better Government

CONGRESS has received all of the report of the commission named to study the administrative departments of the federal government and make recommendations for the effective reorganization of such departments.

The commission was, in every sense, strictly nonpartisan. It consisted of an equal number of Democrats and Republicans, both in and out of the government. It was named by President Truman, the speaker of the house of representatives, and the president of the senate Each named an equal number of both the major political parties The then speaker, Joe Martin, named former President Herbert Hoover as a member of the commission, and, at the suggestion of President Truman, Mr. Hoover was selected as chairman of the group.

Partisan politics had no place or part in the selection of the commission members, nor in its months of deliberation, study of conditions, nor its final recommendations. The one —and only—purpose of all members was to untangle the badly-tangled departments, bureaus, administrations, and what have you, that had been a growth of many years. In fewer words, the purpose was to provide a better administration of government, and reduce the cost.

The recommendations the commission has submitted to congress would, if enacted into law, accomplish, in a large way, all of the desired ends. Those recommendations were made without any consideration of their effect on any political party, or any group, or groups, of government employees The only consideration was that of simplifying the government operations in the interests of all the American people and reducing the cost.

We send to Washington, to represent us in both the house and senate, some whose attitude is "Party first, country second." Such representatives and senators, regardless of party affiliation, look askance of anything that might affect partisan patronage; that would reduce the number of government employees. The government employees, whose jobs might be affected, are persistent in their efforts to prevent legislation of which they are selfishly fearful.

The great majority of the American people want the recommendations of that commission enacted into law; they want the simplified government for which the recommendations provide, the elimination of needless red tape, and the over-lapping authority of many departments and bureaus; they want the savings—some three billion dollars each year—to be effected.

How badly do the American voters want these results? How great is their individual interest in their government? Do they want such things badly enough to cause them to express their wishes to the two senators from their state and to the congressman from their district? Or is the interest of each great enough?

If the result is not worth that small effort on the part of each American voter, the government is hardly worth saving as far as they are concerned. The partisan politician, seeing a threat to some of the patronage he has enjoyed, or may enjoy in the future; the millions of federal government employees, facing a possible loss of his or her job, all will be actively opposing the enactment into law of the recommendations of the commission.

The sentimentalists of this and other countries are agitated over Holland's treatment of the so-called native government in the East Indies. The fact is it is not a government "of, for and by the people." It is the attempted rule of a self-appointed dictator whose outside support now comes from the Communists and did come from the war party in Japan The people of Indonesia were far better off under Holland's rule and would be better off if that rule could continue. The Indonesians are in no way prepared for self-government. It took better than 40 years to prepare the Filipinos for such a task.

There are 15,830,889 people on the federal government's "hand out" lists and more are trying to get on. All are sure they should have larger benefactions than they have been receiving. Those nearly 16 million people vote and they do not "bite the hand that feeds them."

One of the Millions

Bell Syndicate—WNU Features

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

"THIS IS NOT a letter of complaint," writes Rena Janzen, 19 years old. "It is to ask you a question. Is there anything ahead in my life that will make today's difficulties and humiliations worth while?

"We live on the fourth floor of a New York City apartment house far downtown," the letter goes on. "It is one of the thousands of high, crowded brick tenements that form more than half of this city.

The ones down our way are older, dirtier, more crowded. We have four rooms: parlor, kitchen, two bedrooms, bath. There are eight of us: my young brothers of 17, 13 and 7, a sister of 11, Grandma, Mother and Dad. Joe and Matt sleep in the parlor; Henry with Mother and Dad; Grandma, my sister and I have a room so small that there is no space for a chair.

Grandma's mattress is under the three-quarter bed, and under the bed are also my brushes and make-up, a box with spare blouses, Anya's school-books, and Grandma's black valise.

Live in the Kitchen

"Of course we all live in the kitchen. It is smelly and noisy in summer, and hot as only city kitchens get hot; in winter it is smelly and noisy and hardly warmer than the rest of the house Only the halls are warmed.

"I will leave to your imagination what chance a girl has of beauty, leisure, rest, hospitality in a life like mine," writes Rena. "Papa is an angel, he works steadily, he has the tired look of an old saint. Mother works hard. They would move us to some better place, but we pay $80 now, and can afford no more. Joe wants to be a doctor; the nearest he gets is being an orderly in a hospital.

. . . the look of a tired saint . . .

"Now my problem isn't what frightens me," the letter ends, "but the terrible, the overwhelming fact that so many thousands of lives all about me are as utterly hopeless as mine. Girls crowding into subways, punching time-clocks, snatching sandwiches and cokes at lunch, wearing cheap clothes to Coney on summer Sundays or waiting in line at cheap movies on winter nights Why are we here, what are we doing all this for, how do we get out of it? I dream of a little country place, flowers, space, cleanliness—but what good are dreams?

Parents Knew Poverty

"Mother and father are Austrians. They knew poverty and terror in the old world. They escaped —to this Mother revels in her electric light, radio, telephone, gas stove, washing-machine. Dad never complains. But I look about me and sometimes I despair."

Rena, in answering you I am going to begin by warning you against a dangerous error into which you have fallen. The problems of the hundreds and thousands of fellow-workers that you see about you, caught as you think in this same industrial and social treadmill, are not yours.

Yours is one problem; that of Rena Janzen. Sweep all the others out of your mind, concentrate upon your own. Fix your thoughts upon that little country home with the flowers and open spaces about it, and it will begin to take shape and move toward you as steadily as tomorrow's dawn.

Out of just such sordid, crowded, noisy, squalid, odorous environments as the one you describe have come thousands—yes, millions, of our men and women who now occupy suburban homes, who have flowers, a car, fresh suitable clothing, pleasant plentiful meals—in a word, happy, busy, useful lives. Some have risen to actual wealth and power, but you will be satisfied with less than that, and you can win it.

In 10 or 15 years many of these neighbors you pity will be busy in important work: Secretaries, buyers, superintendents, politicians, dress designers, movie and radio performers, living the kind of life you now consider unattainable.

What your father and mother and grandmother have, after their terrors in their own country, their suffering and privation, seems to them riches. Good food, light, amusements, education for their children, clinics and shops and movies accessible—these to them represent luxury.

College Mind Boon to Baseball

By GRANTLAND RICE

The College Influence

THE ADDITION of Red Rolfe, the distinguished Dartmouth alumnus, to the list of big league managers, increases considerably the influence of the college mind on our national game.

The list of college-trained managers now includes Lou Boudreau of Illinois, Eddie Dyer of Rice, Red Rolfe of Dartmouth and Eddie Sawyer of Ithaca. This is only four out of the 16, but it's at least a lift from the old days when Jake Stahl of Illinois and the Red Sox was Grantland Rice about the only collegian in charge of a squad Stahl's Red Sox beat the Giants in the 1912 World Series

It isn't beyond reason to see Boudreau's Indians and Dyer's Cardinals hook up in another world series. This, however, is no even-money bet.

In the American league, the Indians still have the Red Sox, Yankees and Athletics to subdue. In the National league, the Cardinals still have the Dodgers, Braves, Pirates and Giants to lasso and handle.

The four college-trained managers must also overpower such non-college entries as Joe McCarthy, Casey Stengel, Burt Shotton, Leo Durocher, Billy Southworth, Billy Meyer and Connie Mack—a rather formidable troop

What teams are going to win the two pennants, anyway? With nothing better to do under a hot, steamy sun, we began interviewing ballplayers—not the rookies—to get their angles. After all, they had played against these teams and ought to have some slant on the subject.

Their opinions were quite interesting. From American league camps, we found that about 65 per cent gave Cleveland the edge through stronger balance in pitching, hitting, outfield, infield and catching.

There's no doubt that Boudreau's Indians are the best-balanced outfit in either league.

They have what should be the best pitching staff, a fine outfield, a strong infield and competent catching.

The other 35 per cent went 25 for the Red Sox and 10 for the Yankees. I rate the Yankees much higher than this. They have the best outfield in the league, if Joe DiMaggio is O.K. They have the weakest infield of the three contenders, but powerful pitching possibilities. The Red Sox are only uncertain in the box, where pennants are won and lost.

Anyway, most of the American leaguers thought the Indians would win again. They thought so rather violently They are probably right, as Boudreau is a smart, keen, hustling manager who is going to stand for no loafing. Joe McCarthy must get better pitching and Casey Stengel must get better infield play, improved pitching and improved catching. Could happen.

The National League Vote

The National league vote was even more interesting We only had the Cardinals, Reds, Phillies and Braves to talk to. The Giants and Pirates are too far away. So are the Dodgers in their madhouse at Vero Beach. All the Cardinals we talked to picked the Cardinals to win by some strange quirk

The Phillies and the Reds were split among the Braves, Cardinals and Dodgers, with the Braves slightly in the lead because of Sain, Spahn, Dark and Pete Reiser's potential gifts Also a fellow by the name of Billy Southworth, at least one of the great managers of all time.

In a series of five games, the Cardinals would probably win four. But 154 games was a different story Here is a 1940-1941 squad facing a 1947-1948 squad—younger, sounder, with stronger legs and stronger arms.

There is no such creaking and clashing of worn-out bones among the Dodgers that you hear from the Cardinal camp.

The Redbird team must be rebuilt quickly. It is almost through—although still powerful and dangerous. They are a much better ball team than the Dodgers or Giants. But I'm not sure they can go the long route as well as the Dodgers can travel the pennant road.

Oddly enough, few of the National leaguers I talked to gave the Pirates or the Giants a chance. They liked the Pirates over the Giants. In a short series, they liked the Braves over the Cardinals on account of Sain and Spahn.

SUPPORT PRICE SET ON SOME GRAINS

A. E. Rasmussen, Chairman of the Hancock County Agricultural Conservation Committee, said that price support programs will be effective on the following farm commodities for 1949:

Oats—The price support will reflect a weighed average rate equal to 70 per cent of parity as of April 15th.

Barley and Rye—The support price will reflect 72 per cent of parity as of April 15. These rates represent the approximate feeding value of these grains in comparison with corn. These loans will be available from time of harvest through January 31, 1950. This makes the program available for an additional month as compared with the 1947-48 program, which ended December 31, 1949.

Flaxseed — County support prices will be determined by deducting the actual cost of freight and handling charges from the applicable terminal price Supports will be made by loans and purchase agreements through the AAA committee. The loans and purchase agreements will be available from time of harvest through January 31, 1950. The price support program is to be 90 per cent of parity as of April 1, 1949 which is $3 99 a bu., Minneapolis basis.

Detailed information on any of the above programs may be had at the county AAA office

TEACHER INTERVIEW
This Week We Are Interviewing Two Teachers

Our first interview is Mrs. Helen Randall, who teaches tne first and second grades. She is formerly from LuVerne but now resides in Klemme. She attended high school in Lu Verne and college at Cedar Falls. Her purpose for teaching is that she likes to work with children. Six and seven year olds are her favorite age group. Besides her teaching at Klemme, she has also taught at Lu Verne and Kanawha.

Our next interview features Miss Wanda Winters, whose home is in Buffalo Center She teaches third and fourth grade. Miss Winters in another of our teachers who attended Teachers College at Cedar Falls. Her favorite age group is nine and ten year olds She also taught at Ocheyedon and in rural schools for three years. Miss Winters' hobby is collecting scrap books.

JUNIOR HIGH NEWS

We have finished our 5th and 6th weeks tests and are very happy about it. Mr Juhl was very well pleased with our arithmetic results. The six weeks English test, which was given to the Junior High was also given to the Freshmen class as a practice exercise. The results of this were very surprising to us. The Junior High received eight perfect tests while the freshmen received only four The most errors were committed by the freshmen. Who said the junior high were dummies?

In our Civics we have been studying about, "Protection of Life and Property" The 7th graders have begun the study of Puerto Rico and are going to bring clippings and writing for a class scrap book.

Those having one hundred per cent for the last six weeks were: Miriam Priebe, Beverly Sobek, Billy Waddingham, Margaret Boland, Janice Swanson, Daisy Schaefer, and Noel Egeland.

Noel Egeland took high honors for grades this six weeks with four A's and 3 B's Others on the honor roll are Margaret Boland, Janice Swanson, Miriam Priebe, Billy Waddingham, and Galen Gruis.

Our weekly motto is, "Do Not Criticize Others. Praise Them if you can do so; if you cannot honestly commend them remain silent." This motto could well apply to everyone

I read one time about a scientific instrument called the Oxometer. It was quite a deal. You could point it at a page of reading material and all the words that were pure "bull" would be automatically blanked out. It had earphones on it and when you listened to a lot of blah, only the stuff that meant anything would come through I have always wanted one of them.

GOP Has No Program

AT THIS STAGE of the 81st congress, which on the surface has been embroiled in considerable confusion including a filibuster and an apparent split in the Democratic forces—south against north—there is still only a one-way street down which the objective reporter can travel in gathering the news.

For as a matter of tact, there is still only one positive program before the congress: .he program which President Truman laid before its members in his state of the union message.

Try as one may to find one, the Republican minority in congress does not have a program, except the negative program of opposition and that does not completely hold water because many of the Republican members will go along with a majority of the Truman program.

The GOP policy committee holds periodical meetings to decide what position to take on a given bill, but even these meetings do not result in any agreement since men like Aiken of Vermont, Flanders of Vermont, Morse of Oregon, Thye of Minnesota, Ives of New York, Baldwin of Connecticut, Langer of North Dakota, Lodge of Massachusetts and others, do not see eye-to-eye with the leadership of the committee which is wrapped up in Senator Taft of Ohio. So no matter what the policy committee decides, these men are left pretty much to their own thinking on the problems before the senate.

Then there is a seeming disagreement between house and senate Republicans The senate GOP campaign committee is going its own way, detouring around the Republican national committee on both matters of policy and operation. The senate committee has hired Victor Johnson, one-time strategist for former governor and presidential candidate Harold Stassen, as a public relations director The house GOP campaign committee, headed by the wily ex-speaker Joe Martin of Massachusetts, is planning its own policy and operation and while giving lip service to Chairman Hugh Scott of the GOP national committee, is preparing to set up its own publicity staff and conduct its own operations. The senate committee, according to information is starting off with $50,000 in the kitty, but the house committee is not so well off and will start from scratch to raise its own money to better its press relations and get its public relations story over to the people

The progressive Republican leadership is hoping that ultimately they will come up with a unified program upon which they can go to the people, but that time has not yet come With the party apparently so hopelessly divided, whether that time will ever come is a matter for conjecture. Simultaneously whether or not the split between northern and southern Democrats is so deep that it cannot be healed and will endanger the Truman program also is a matter for conjecture. If so, then this congress will eventually turn into a coalition congress of southern Democrats and northern Republicans and will operate ineffectually, much as the 79th congress operated.

Truman Will Fight

The best thinking here in Washington holds that President Truman regards the vote at the last election as a mandate of the people and is out to use every power he has to force through his liberal program, a program which has been labeled everything from "pink New Dealish" to "socialistic" and even "communistic" depending upon the point of view of the opposition.

And this same source of thinking indicates that despite the Democratic split, the administration Democrats, with liberal Republican help, will push through most of the Truman "Fair Deal" program

This reporter finds that the mail of many congressmen, even including some southern congressmen is unusually heavy Some offices are swamped with mail, the big bulk of it from individuals and that almost 90 per cent of this mail is definitely favoring the program advanced by the President in his election campaign. The President and the president's cabinet are becoming more and more outspoken in demanding congressional Democrats to go along with the program.

President Not 'Kidding'

There is every indication that the President was not kidding when some weeks ago he indicated he might "get on a train" and make another trip to take his program to the people if his measures were not forthcoming from congress He may make some radio talks, but he has found he is not as effective on the radio as he is face-to-face with the audiences out in the home towns of the country, talking to them in their own language

MIRROR of your MIND

Gambling Is Self Destruction

By Lawrence Gould

Do people who gamble always hope to win?

Answer: The average person who takes an occasional "flier" may only be trying to forget life's harsh rule that you do not get something for nothing. But psychiatrists say the "neurotic gambler" — the chap who will play the horses or shoot dice with his employer's money even though he knows there's better than an even chance that he will be disgraced and ruined—is unconsciously the victim of a secret urge to self-destruction. It is this that will not let him quit when he's ahead but makes him go on till he's "cleaned out."

Can you give yourself "shock treatments"?

Answer: Literally, no. As I have said before, such treatments must be given by a physician. But a correspondent notes the interesting fact that now and then, when she is deeply depressed, she will unconsciously get herself into trouble or danger (she once "accidentally" set her house on fire, for instance) and be jolted back to a more normal frame of mind. Like "insanity," depression often represents a wish to punish yourself for some real or imagined offense, and almost any kind of shock may serve this purpose for the moment.

Did war tragedies warp children's mind?

Answer: Yes, reports a Swiss psychiatrist who treated child refugees in Warsaw, Poland Children who had been driven from their homes and in many cases seen their parents sent to the gas chamber became smart in some ways, but developed the belief that nothing is important but self-preservation and that only fools try to be kind or honest. This "false image of reality" (which for so long was true as far as their experience went) is hard to erase and makes it difficult to teach them to adapt themselves to normal living.

Treating Ailments of Old Age

By Dr. James W. Barton

THERE are so many elderly men and women today that many large houses, once so hard to sell, now are being bought by registered nurses or practical nurses and established as "rest homes" for elderly people and invalids. Some of these larger rest homes not only have a graduate nurse living on the premises, but also a physician calls once a day.

This specialty, geriatrics, is the natural result of the lengthening of the life span. As we grow older, we may not develop any special disease or diseases, but there is naturally a gradual loss of strength, and so symptoms and also diseases often come with age.

We have been thinking of this new specialty mostly in terms of treating diseases of old age Dr. C. Ward Crampton, however, states that geriatrics is concerned less with treating the ills of those already old than with preventing, postponing and easing the aging processes and guaranteeing one a vigorous old age

In order to learn the exact physical, mental and emotional condition of the elderly, a thorough or complete examination is given, divided into three parts:

First comes the "data gathering" visit, or "pilot" examination, in a search for any "aging" tissue or process.

At the second visit, as the physician has studied the whole situation—blood pressure, strength of heart, urine, blood—he now prescribes a program of living —and any medicine that may give energy or slow up aging processes.

At the third visit, two or three weeks later, the results of the health program are checked and a full health program for six months or a year given.

This study and examination of the elderly man or woman to learn what he or she needs, and then prescribing the necessary health program, is good common sense.

★ HEALTH NOTES ★

Twenty-five out of every hundred people who have blood in their urine have been found to have cancer somewhere in the kidney, bladder or other part of the urinary tract. Do not think that when such bleeding stops, the progress of the underlying cause also stops, for we know now that once cancer starts, it progresses till death occurs unless treatment is begun immediately.

In New Jersey at the present time there are now in progress five different studies on vision in various industries. By these studies much valuable material is being collected for the purpose of improving our present knowledge of vision of industrial workers. This will mean more and better production and at the same time conserving the vision of the industrial worker.

Household Hints

When washing chenille or candlewick bedspreads, hang spread over line right side in so that the tuffs rub against one another in drying — fluffing themselves as they dry.

A perforated cap on a cork which will fit into any soft drink bottle makes an ideal devise for sprinkling clothes.

When one pound of brick butter is cut and wrapped in four lengthwise parts, each part equals one-half cup; one inch of each part equals two tablespoons.

Lace frills can be dry cleaned at home with corn starch. Place lace on a clean, dry turkish towel and dust with a liberal amount of dry corn starch. Work corn starch gently through lace several times, then shake lace to remove starch: lace will be clean and fresh looking.

Rinse tea towels after each dishwashing "detail": then they won't pile up and present such a large item on wash day.

Keep electric mixers, toasters, automatic juicers, etc., in a handy ready-to-use place. Don't hide them on the bottom shelf.

A very thin starch (one tablespoon to each quart of water) will bring back that "new, pretty look" to your favorite rayon blouse.

DRAFT REGISTRANTS MUST TELL BOARDS OF THEIR WHEREABOUTS

Des Moines—All draft registrants are required to keep their local boards informed as to their whereabouts even if their summer vacations take them outside the country, Brig. Gen. Charles H. Grahl, state director of selective service, said Friday.

"Departure from the country does not relieve them of these obligations even though selective service is inducting no men at present," General Grahl said.

General Grahl said this obligation was being pointed out because a record-breaking number of student-tourists is expected this summer. Student-tourists should report, either personally or by mail, to their local board giving the date of departure, approximate intinerary, and expected date of return, the general said.
